The Arrow Power line of greasing guns installed will lubricate any car regardless of sige, make, or age.

Shell Super Service carries a full line of Shell products including Household Spray, glass Klenzit, furniture polish, safety Klenzit, spot remover, also windshield wipers, fans, fan belts, etc., also a line of Bowes Sealfast products, flashlights, batteries, bulbs, etc.

Two self computing gasoline pumps were installed by Tokheim's Tank & Pump Co., of Ft. Wayne.

Erving Venderly, the manager, is trained to give prompt, courteous, efficient service. He has had garage experience in Monroe, Michigan, and special training at Goheen's Super Service Station in Ft. Wayne.

The Shell Lubrication Manager, Mr. Clifford Crane, from the home office of the Shell Petroleum Corporation at Indianapolis, completed all arrangements for the Program. Other officials in attendance on opening day were Mr. H. K. Josof, District Manager, Ft. A. Belt of the Shell Petroleum Corporation of Lebanon; Mr. Paul Kurtz of the Bowes Sealfast Corp., at Kendallville; Mr. James of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Ligonier, and Mr. Edward Goheen, of Shell Petroleum Corporation, of Fort Wayne, who arranged all decorations for the new station.

All visiting ladies were given carnations, men were given cigars, and kiddies, lollipops. Customers also received a gallon of gasoline free—with each five gallons purchased, also a small can of spot remover and a small bottle of Shell furniture polish. In the evening a drawing was held, forty attendance prizes being given, the first, three being a Goodyear tire, first; Goodyear battery, second, and a Westinghouse Electric Iron, third. Music and commercial advertising were furnished by the Ross Engineering Co., of Fort Wayne and was under the supervision of Mr. Howard Tyndall, who was able to effectively carry out the broadcasting due to his associations with Station WOWO in Ft. Wayne.

In the construction of the new station, the equipment and plumbing equipment was furnished by National Mill and Supply Co., of Ft. Wayne; the lumber and building supplies by Goodall Lumber Co., Auburn; Plate glass from the Ohio Plate Glass Co., of Ft. Wayne; Cement from Ben Levy Grain Co., St. Joe, and gravel from Kimes & Kraft; electric wiring done by Ed Woodring; cement work done by Fred Glawe, Virgil Koch and Vaughn Allen; Painting and decorating by Vaughn Allen, Maurice Hollabaugh, Erveng Vendrely and Ralph Hursh. O. G. Baker & Sons were construction contractors and Charles A. Butler was plaster contractor. The Shell Super Service Station is owned by Mr. Mark Tyndall and operated and managed by Mr. Erving Venderly. Mr. Maurice Hollabaugh is the local Shell Petroleum Salesman.

Crowds of people kept the station attendants busy. The opening was advertised most complete, as The News carried a half page ad making this striking announcement in a very attractive manner, bills were distributed a week prior to the opening and cards were also sent through the U. S. mail making a complete coverage, a l l handled by The News, for which Mr. Tyndall is very gracious for the splendid service rendered by the local printing office, and we in turn are pleased to recognize his success in making this service known to a wide area of trades people.

NAMES FOR JURIES IN 1939 SELECTED

Jury Commissioners Herman L. Brown, of Auburn, and Clyde E. Hart, of Spencer Township, were on duty at the court house Wednesday preparing for the new year.

The commissioners selected 200 names from the tax duplicates for use during 1938 in the drawing of juries. The number was allotted to the various townships according to population, as follows: Union and Keyser, 24 each; Wilmington, 18; Grant, 16; Fairfield, Smithfield, Franklin and Jackson, 12 each; Concord, Spencer, Richland and Butler, 10 each; and Stafford, Troy and Newville, 8 each.

Householders and freeholders of both sexes are eligible for jury service. On the day of the drawing, which is just a week before the opening of a new term of court, the first six names taken from the jury box are for the grand jury, the next twelve are regular petit jurors and the next twelve are talesmen, or substitutes. More names may be drawn for talesmen if an important case is pending for trial.

Both jury commissioners are veterans in the work, Mr. Brown serving since 1915 and Mr. Hart since 1926.

Winter Feeding of Birds is Part of Indiana's Conservation Plan

More than ten thousand Indiana conservationists are engaged in a statewide program for the emergency feeding of birds and wildlife during the winter months.

Tons of screenings, grain and other suitable feed have been collected for the feeding programs sponsored by the more than eight hundred and fifty conservation clubs and thousands of feeding shelters have been constructed. This is all a part of Indiana's conservation program and one of the major winter activities of the conservation clubs, and one which will probably be discussed at the local meeting Thursday evening at the school house.

The emergency feeding of birds and wildlife by the members of the conservation clubs receives wide support in the local communities from Boy Scouts, Future Farmer and 4-H Club members, from rural mail carriers, highway workers and bakery and milk route drivers.

While the screenings are donated by feed companies and elevators where they are a by-product, clubs spend hundreds of dollars in purchasing grain and other supplies for use during the winter months when the ground is covered with snow or ice and the normal food supply is hidden. Members of clubs in rural communities usually collect their own feed while feed is purchased by clubs located in the cities and towns.

Clubs reporting on their winter feeding program have several thousand feeding stations established in areas where birds are located. Many of these are simply brush heaps or piles of corn stalks arraged to keep the soow off the ground and open on at least two sides.

Persons interested in aiding the winter feeding program should attend the conservation club meeting this week.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IS A RECORD BREAKER

The most successful drive for the Conservation Club membership for 1939, terminated Saturday night with a possible thirty more members to be added by the end of the week, and now in the hands of solicitors.

The plans for this successful campaign were laid on December 22nd at the town hall with an attenadnce of 16 members, and all of them signing up for the new year, forming the nucleous with which to start. Out of this group Vernon Kline and Henry Engle were chosen to head the pest hunt and membership drive, and by all reports most of their attention was given to securing members.

Saturday night, December 31st was set as the date when all pests and memberships were to be turned in to the checking committee and the results are tabulated as follows:

Vernon Kline

Pest	No.	Points
Rats	14	1,400
Mice	37	185
Sparrows	285	1,425
Starling	3	75
Total Points	340	3,085

Henry Engle

Sparrows	1,004	5,020

For each new member secured 500 points were to be accredited to the captain, and all memberships to expire with the calendar year. To Vernon Kline a credit for 73 new members was given and to Henry Engle, 189. Each membership counted 500 points.

The Victory Dinner will be served to Henry Engle and his members by the losers in the campaign on Thursday night of this week at the school house, with Ira P. Nelson, representing the Conservation Department of the State, when he will discuss conservation problems with the members and show pictures.

WASTEFUL GOVERNMENT'S BEST FRIEND

Many oil companies advertise the price of gasoline in this fashion: "Gas, 15 cents a gallon; state and federal tax, 6 cents; total, 21 cents."

If similar methods of illustrating the price of all products were employed, the American consumer would get the shock of his life.

When you buy a five-dollar pair of shoes, a dollar or more is for taxes. When you payr a three-dollar electric bill, 50 or 60 cents represents taxes. When you buy a forty-dollar suit, close to ten dollars goes for taxes.

You can't dodge taxation—unless you're a hermit living in the hills. On a normal day, you pay taxes a dozen times, though you may not know it—when you drive your car, ride a trolley, eat lunch, or make a purchase. When the American people get this truth through their heads, there will be a drive for economy in government that will get somewhere. For ignorance of the facts is a wasteful government's best friend.

LOCAL FARMER TO BE HONORED AT PURDUE

Four DeKalb County farmers are to receive a certificate of achievement for having completed satisfactorily a record in the Indiana Farm account book for ten or more successive years. This award is made by the Indiana Farm management association, a state wide group whose purpose is to promote better farm management. The men to receive this award are Ernest Cornell, Auburn; Carl D. Carpenter, St. Joe; Heber Haynes, Garrett, and J. W. Mertz, Corunna.

The awards are to be made at the annual meeting of the association, which will be held Tuesday, Jan. 10, during agricultural conference week at Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind. The certificates will be presented at the evening banquet session held at 6 o'clock in the Home Economics building.

EARLY MORNING FIRE DESTROYS SPENCERVILLE STORES

Five Buildings Are Complete Loss. Two Were Occupied No Insurance

STARTED IN THE POOL ROOM

Fisher Meat Market and the Beams Residence and Community Hall Were Endangered

A fire of doubtful origin early Saturday morning destroyed the west side of the northern business section of Spencerville. It is believed the fire started overhead the living quarters of Eugene Baker, who operated a pool room in one of the center buildings. Mr. Baker was awakened by the fire about 12:30 A. M. shortly after retiring and ran to the nearest neighbor asking for help. Upon his return the fire had gained such proportions that he was able to remove only three pieces of furniture. All of the family's household goods, food, and clothes were destroyed. Mrs. Baker and a daughter, Shirley, were in Hicksville at the time of the fire.

The buildings burning were occupied by Mr. Baker's pool room and living quarters, the Post Office, Tyndall Oil Company office and storage for office supplies, Furnish Motor Sales storage, Frank Beams' telephones and line equipment, a garage in back used by Frank Markle, and in the block building, owned by Jack Beams, the upper floor stored a small amount of furniture owned by Mr. Casebeer, and the basement room has been used by Ralph Sechler for several years storing pickles in barrels.

The fire consumed the frame buildings which were all owned by Frank Beams, so fast that only a few things could be removed. Mark Tyndall had previously removed the majority of his office equipment moving it over into his new building. Of that which still remained, a few pieces were removed.

Townsmen broke down the door to the postoffice and were able to save a few articles. The town's evening mail, all uncalled for mail, record books, boxes, etc., were burned. Papers were removed from the safe on Saturday only slightly scorched but stamps had stuck together and the money had melted together. The safe was not removed from the burning debris until the Postal inspector arrived on Saturday and broke it open, removing the contents. Mrs. Steward, the Postmistress, suffered a loss of approximately $300.00.

Mr. Sechler's pickles were all consumed except one barrel. He was insured but for an amount which will probably be but one fourth of his actual loss, only $500. The stock destroyed consisted of 125 barrels of dill pickles, 25 barrels of new relish, just having been made at the St. Joe plant and stored; 150 new empty barrels, and many kegs, besides other items of stock.

None of the buildings carried any insurance so that the fire has been a total loss to all involved. An estimate of the loss has not been made.

Paint on the new Super Service Station was blistered by the heat. The siding on the Fisher Meat Market as well as all the windows were damaged completely by the heat. The community Hall suffered only slight damage due to efficient working of the crews of firemen. Siding on the home of Will Foltz was badly scorched.

One of the greatest losses of Frank Beams came from the ruin brought to the telephone exchange. All telephone service was disrupted a few minutes after the fire broke out. He is repairing the lines and a repairman is starting this week to replace the wires and put them under ground.

Firemen were called from surrounding towns and the St. Joe department was soon on the scene, aiding considerably in saving other buildings. They were soon assisted by crews from Grabill, Auburn, and Butler. Local townsmen fought the fire through the night in the freezing temperatures. At the time when the fire was raging thermometers stood at 3 degrees above zero. In spite of the weather and fire hazards, no lives were lost and as far as is known, no sickness resulted from the fire. Local people are only too glad that there was almost an absence of wind or the entire town might easily have been swept out.

Spencerville is perhaps the most talked of little town in this section, people driving for many miles to witness the ruins. On Saturday and Sunday the town was completely filled with cars and strangers.

STUDIES REVEAL NEW FACTS ABOUT DEATH FROM GAS

(By Fred W. Braun)

During the winter season there are between 500 and 700 Americans marked for death—a useless, avoidable death. Most of them will die in their garages while warming up the motors of their autos with the garage doors closed. Some will die while sitting in their cars with the windows closed and the motors running. Several may die while working the engines of their machines to the utmost in attempts to get out of snowdrifts in which they have become stuck. Some will die while driving their autos along the road. A few will die huddled around foul-smelling and poorly adjusted room heaters.

We know this not only because of past experiences, but also because studies have revealed new facts—hitherto unknown ways carbon monoxide has of snuffing out a man's life. Much has been written about carbon monoxide, but most of it has been by way of locking the barn after the horse is stolen. Here are some of the facts of which we are now certain.

1. Frequently there is no warning headache or dizziness. Unconsciousness and death can hit you like a blackjack in the hands of a thug.

2. Carbon monoxide is not heavier than air, but very slightly lighter.

3. Automobile exhaust pipes are not the only source of carbon monoxide. It is a product of incomplete combustion and may be given off by improperly vented oil heaters, coal burners, and oil stoves.

4. No person is immune, nor can anyone build up an immunity.

5. Acute poisoning as well as chronic poisoning caused by repeated exposures may leave serious after effects.

6. You don't have to be inside a garage with the doors closed to be endangered; if you have a leaky exhaust pipe or a leaky manifold heater, your closed car will do as well.

7. You are in danger if your exhaust isn't able to escape freely. There have been many cases in which cars and trucks have backed up against a hard snow bank which obstructed the exhaust pipe; the exhaust has escaped in some manner, perhaps around a gasket, and persons in the car have been asphyxiated.

8. It does not take a concentrated amount but only one fifth of the one per cent carbon monoxide in the air to put you to sleep.

THEREFORE:

1. See that the doors of your garage are open when the motor of your car is running.

2. Provide ventilation if you are using an oil or coal heater in the room or any combustion heater without a flue.

3. Have you car tested, both when it is in motion and when it is parked, for the presence of carbon monoxide.

4. Have your car inspected for a leaky exhaust system.

5. Remember that when you park with the motor running the exhaust has a tendency, especially when the exhaust pipe is partially obstructed, to curl up under the car and gather there. See that a car window is open when you park with the motor running.

REDUCTIONS SHOWN IN TAXES FOR 1939

Marked reductions are shown in taxes charged against most of the units of DeKalb County for 1939 as revealed in the January abstract completed Saturday in the office of County Auditor Frank E. Lyon.

The total charged is $658,330, as compared with $713,337 a year ago, a decrease of $55,007, or nearly 8 per cent. Last year the cut was nearly 10 per cent and the reduction in the last three years is more than $200,000.

The current tax on the books for collection in 1939 is $509,431, as compared with $571,906 a year ago. This is where all the reduction is found, as the amount of delinquent has been increased from $141,430 to $148,899.

The taxes due for collection include $13,945 for the general county fund, a reduction from $19,211; $27,891 for the welfare fund, a reduction from $30,189; $30,680 for county unit road bonds and interest, which is approximately the same and $10,643 for township unit road bonds and interest, a cut from $25,286.

Benefiting from reductions are Auburn, Butler City, St. Joe, Waterloo, Butler Township, Concord, Fairfield, Franklin, Jackson, Newville, Richland, Smithfield, Stafford, Troy, Union and Wilmington Townships. The units increased are Garrett, Altona, and Grant, Keyser and Spencer Townships.

DECEMBER DISTRIBUTION OF TAX MONEY MADE

The semi-annual distribution of tax collections, made Friday by County Auditor Frank E. Lyon, involves the sum of $282,885, a reduction of $29,000, or more than 9 per cent, as compared with a year ago.

The amount of current taxes collected and distributed was $268,156, a decline of $28,000, due to lower tax levies. The total of delinquent collections was $14,729, which is practically the same as last December.

The various departments of the state received $26,858, which is an increase of $3,000. To the county general fund was transferred $9,957, as compared with $24,814 last year. To the county welfare fund went $14,786, a decline from $20,297. For county unit road bonds and interest $14,894 was transferred, a reduction of $7,000. Township poor funds received $45,260, an increase of $14,000 over a year ago. For township road bonds and interest the amount is $12,714, which is a small cut.

Radical reductions are noted in the amounts going to the Auburn units, the city getting $7,000, less than a year ago and the schools $10,000 less. Other units whose checks are smaller, in varying degrees, are Waterloo schools, Butler city schools, Garrett city and schools, Ashley town and Concord, Grant, Jackson, Keyser, Smithfield, Spencer, Stafford and Union Townships.

OCEANA TEACHER TAKES OWN LIFE

Carl D. Shull, a teacher in Oceana County rural schools for the past 25 years, committed suicide in a cell in the county jail Wednesday morning. Mr. Shull had taken his own life by hanging. The body was discovered by Mrs. Frank Burmeister, wife of the sheriff, who had gone to his room in the hospital ward on the second floor to serve his breakfast. Mr. Shull had been in poor health recently and had been confined at the jail since Monday. It was planned to transfer him to a state institution for treatment.

Mr. Shull was born May 10, 1879 in DeKalb Cunty, Indiana, and went to Oceana County over 25 years ago. About twenty years ago he was married to Mrs. Blanch Draggoo, of Colfax, who with a step-daughter, Mrs. Laura Brown, of Walkerville, and two brothers, Fred of Walkerville, and Cad, of Indiana, survive. Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon at 2:30 P. M. from the Elbridge M. E. Church, of which Mr. Shull was a member. Burial was made in the Elbridge cemetery.

For the past twenty-five years Mr. Shull has taught in rural schools of Oceana County. He taught for a time in the Shaw and Kelly schools and for the past eleven years had been instructor at the Van Wickle school in Hart Township. He retired from the teaching profession last June. Mr. Shull was possessed of a cheerful kindly disposition and had a host of friends in Oceana County who sincerely mourn his passing.—Hart Journal.

LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

Looks kinda odd to see the boys with the fancy jobs, down yonder at our Nation's Capital, gettin' up and leaving.

When a feller ups and leaves, when he is on the pay-roll at 10 thousand, you commence to squint an eye and wonder if there is maybe a leak in the old boat, or what is up.

But there is an old saying, that it pays to go when the going is good, so I reckon the boys down there, they must sniff something in the wind. And if a person can get himself a new soft job elsewhere, like being mayor in some big city, or get into the movies, or go back to practicing law or something, it is using your head.

Folks, after just about so long, they get tired of anybody's tricks—even if you are extra good—and want to see a new show.

I guess the boys down there, who are pulling up stakes, they must hear Old Jumbo out there, crackling through the brush.

Yours, with the low down,
JO SERRA.

Byron Widney called The News recently and said "Stop that ad of mine, I am out of sheep" and then we were compelled to refund a portion of the charges made for the ad, as the sale was made sooner than Mr. Widney figured. That's the way it works when you use the classified department to sell what you don't need. It will work the same for you. The lady's hat reported found on highway is also being returned to its owner. That's the way it works. Try it yourself.

Electricity Reduced

THE New Year brought a substantial reduction in your electric rates. The reduction which became effective with bills rendered on and after January 1, 1939, resulted in a cut in cost to six cents a kilowatt-hour for the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours.

In addition to this immediate reduction, there will be two additional reductions at six months' intervals. On July 1, 1939, the first block will again be reduced to five and one-half cents a kilowatt-hour, and by January 1, 1940, when another reduction will be made, the residential customers of this company will have the benefits of a rate which starts at five cents a kilowatt-hour and breaks rapidly to extremely low levels. When the new rate is fully effective, the savings to customers below the present rate will amount to $282,000 a year.

Remember, with this new rate, after you have used 60 kilowatt-hours, the rate for each kilowatt-hour drops to 2½ cents for the next 240 kilowatt-hours, and above 300 kilowatt-hours a month, you may buy all you need at the "wholesale" or bargain price of 1½ cents a kilowatt-hour.

By putting electrical appliances to work you mak living conditions better. At the same time, by mal ing fuller use of electric servants, you step dov the cost of each unit of electricity.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1939 NUMBER 2

RETIRED FARMER IS STRICKEN SUDDENLY

John Davis, a Newville Township retired farmer, died suddenly at his home Friday afternoon following a cerebral hemorrhage. Coroner John R. Clark, of Auburn, was called to investigate the death, his first inquest since taking office January 1.

Mr. Davis, 82 years of age, apparently was in good health Friday morning. He and his wife ate their midday meal at 10:30 in the morning, and about 1 o'clock he went into the bedroom to lie down. Mrs. Davis, who is an invalid suffering from rheumatism, called to him and when he did not answer, she edged her chair into the bedroom and found her husband dead. Since she cannot walk at all she had to wait for someone to come to the house to inform them of Mr. Davis' death. Ira Smith called at 10 o'clock and the aged couple were all right. At three Lyman Bidlack and wife called and discovered what had taken place. At 5:30 in the evening the grandson came from his work.

Mr. Davis is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Ethel Engle, of Hicksville, Ohio; four sons, Vaughn, at home, Stanley, of Newville Township, and Donald, of Lorraine, O.; ten granchildren; three great grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Belle Best, of Edon, Ohio.

Following the coroner's investigation, the body was taken to the Perkins funeral home in Hicksville.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the United Brethren Church at Newville, with Rev. P. A. Hubbartt of that church officiating. Burial was made in the Newville cemetery.

SPENCERVILLE MAN CAME NEAR BEING ASPHYXIATED

Gas fumes overcome Reuben Renn of Spencerville, Saturday morning, and neighbors observing that their was no stir obout the house, became alarmed and entered the home, finding him peocefully sleeping away, and gas fumes were strong, rendering him unconscious.

Fresh air was soon let in and in a short while he rallied from his deep sleep. He is still confined to his bed and is being cared for by his sister, Flora Renn.

NEW OFFICERS ARE NAMED BY TRUSTEES

Fern A. Morr, of Grant Township, was honored with election as president of the association of township trustees of DeKalb County at a meeting held in the office of Carl F. Stallman, county superintendent of schools, in the court house Monday.

Ora E. Rowe, of Fairfield Township, was made vice president and Jay W. DeWitt, of Richland Township, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Morr and Mr. Rowe were re-elected last November, while Mr. DeWitt is a new trustee.

Talks relating to their work were made by Mr. Stallman and C. E. Baker, county agent. Sherman Lewis, of Garrett, who is in charge of the distribution of surplus commodities for relief, discussed the work with the trustees and they signed the form provided by the federal government.

Brecbill, of Smithfield Township, commissioner from the north district, has been elected president of the county board; Arthur Grube, of Keyser Township representing the southwest district, was made vice president, and Lloyd W. Mr. Brecbill and Mr. Grube are Democrats and Mr. Yeiser is a Republican. The latter served three years as a commissioner some time ago.

The board reappointed Edgar W. Atkinson, of Auburn, as county attorney. Mr. Atkinson had a previous tenure of ten years in the position and he started his fifth consecutive year last Monday.

Clark F. Scholes, of St. Joe, was named as county highway supervisor and M. K. Baldwin, of Butler, was again made assistant supervisor.

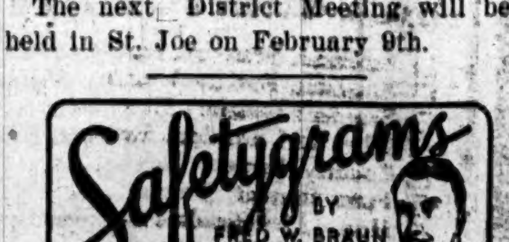
WALTER WHITEHURST POST No. 283
Meeting Night: Second & Fourth Tuesday of the Month. - - - -

The American Legion program given at the Tri-Township Farmers' Institute held in the community hall at Spencerville last week, was really appreciated, although the audience was small on account of other activities in the neighborhood. The program follows:

Selections by Spencerville H. S. Band
Invocation .... Rev. Earl Clayton
The "Legion Emblem" .... Leon Kees
"Your Flag and My Flag"
.... Berniece Wilder
Vocal Solo .... Vivienne Ziegler
Short talk by Argo "Butch" Vegaleus, of Ft. Wayne, chairman of Americanism Committee of the Fourth District.

After which the speaker of the evening, the Rev. Father Ryder, the Past Chaplain of the Dept. of Indiana, gave an interesting talk on the Liberties Enjoyed by the American People as compared to the Conditions in the European Nations.

The next District Meeting will be held in St. Joe on February 9th.



Many drivers are very careless about dimming lights. There is absolutely no reason why any driver should use bright lights while driving at night in any city or village. Dim lights are enough for town driving and their use will help not only the pedestrian but the driver.

On the highways after dark visibility will be improved if drivers will depress their headlight beams when they meet another car.

It's the courteous thing to do, and it's the safe thing to do!

The Ladies Aid Society of the Lutheran Church will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Edna Perkins west of St. Joe.

BLACKTOPPING OF TEN MILES PLANNED

Plans of the DeKalb Cuonty highway department for the year 1939 call for the blacktopping of ten miles of roads.

Clark F. Scoles, of St. Joe, highway supervisor, announces the list of projects as follows:

The county farm road west from the Ashley Road, 1½ miles.

Stafford Center Road from the end of the blacktop south, 1½ miles.

The following projects will be added if funds are available:

From Jackson Center east to the Concord Township line, 3 miles.

Auburn-Butler Road from No. 8 to the end of the road from Moore.

The WPA is providing a portion of the funds and labor for this work, which will probably cost an average of $1,200 a mile, or a total of $12,000. The county department's budget totals $89,240, the balance being used for maintenance.

More than 300 men are now being employed on WPA road projects in DeKalb County. They are at work on the Artic Road in Troy Township, on the township line road between Jackson and Concord and Union and Wilington, on the Brant Road in Fairfield, and the Hilkey and Houck Roads in Jackson. The work being done consists of ditching, widening of rights-of-way, building shoulders and graveling. On the county department payroll are 17 men, engaged in maintenance. Fourteen trucks and two power grades owned by the county are in service.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED CONSERVATION MEETING

Approximately 200 members of the local Conservation Club enjoyed the feed Thursday night at the school house, served by Vernon Kline and members of the losing squad, of the recent holiday pest hunt. Oysters, chilli, hot dog sandwiches and coffee, crackers and pickles were served.

After the supper, the boys were given a real treat by listening to a conservation talk by Mr. Ira Nelson, of Montpelier, Indiana, representing the State Department, and seeing pictures on the raising of quail at the State Game Farm.

The business session followed with the election of officers for 1939:

Henry Engle, president.
Vernon Kline, vice president.
F. B. Leghty, secretary.
M. E. Storer, treasurer.
Roy Wade, custodian of speers.

Board of Directors were all re-elected, providing they became members for 1939.

The county representatives were Fred Jenkins and Ford Jackson.

The club will continue the payment of bounties on pests, up to a total of $20, and Walter Keesler has been chosen to check and issue order for payment on the treasurer.

The school house is available for all meetings in the future and the first Thursday evening in the month is the stated meeting night.

Cards for the "Outdoor Indiana" will be available at the next meeting for all new members.

The membership is now 271.

HOOSIER TRAPPERS TO CLOSE SEASON JANUARY 15

Hoosier trappers will end the 1938-39 season for taking raccoon, opossum, skunk, mink and muskrat at midnight on January 15 but have an additional five days in which to dispose of their catch, Virgil M. Sommons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, pointed out.

The trapping season began November 15 and has been marked by an almost total absence of the cold weather generally regarded as necessary to put furs in their best condition. Reports indicate a plentiful supply of furl bearing animals in most sections of the state with raccoon more abundant than for many years.

Trapping produces an income of approximately a half-million dollars annually to the thousands of Indiana men and boys who engage in this activity.

HICKSVILLE'S OLDEST PHYSICIAN PASSED AWAY

Last rites were held Tuesday at 2 P. M. in Perkins & Reeb funeral home for Dr. Henry Wellington Cook, 74, Hicksville's oldest physician.

Dr. S. E. Brewster and Rev. H. B. Monroe officiated and burial was made in Forest Home cemetery.

He was born in Wayne County, went to Hicksville at the age of three years and continued to live there except 14 months while he practiced medicine at Avilla, Ind., returning to Hicksville in 1896.

He was educated in the Hicksville public schools and was graduated from Western Reserve Medical College in 1895.

Dr. Cook was the local surgeon for the Baltiore & Ohio Railroad and was a former member of the Hicksville and Defiance County school boards.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Luella Cook; three sons, Dr. H. W. Cook, Ft. Wayne dentist; Robert Cook, Chicago, and Dolan Cook, Toledo; a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Flurkey, West Unity, and a sister, Mrs. Cora Zuber, Hicksville.

The attendance has been good and larger crowds are expected. An occasional outside speaker is brought in to assist in the preaching.

FRUIT PUNCH (IN THE EYE)

News dispatches say the government is now operating several lemon, orange and grapefruit groves in western states. They passed into government ownership via the HOLC foreclosure route, and former owners are being employed to care for them. Whether the taxpayer likes grapefruit or not he's now obliged to pay a grapefruit bill. He'll get the usual reward, of course — right between the eyes.

HICKSVILLE OHIO

The best advice in starting this New Year, is never to entrust a high-powered car to a low-powered set of brains.

The man who borrows and runs away can scarcely hope to borrow another day.

If we saw ourselves as others see us, perhaps we would get a much better idea of what we really are.

There are always two sides to every question—your side and the wrong side.

Our papers of recent date show us folks that the world is still full of fellows who feather their own nest by robbing some other bird.

We have found out there are two things in this country that are better off when they are let alone. One is the Bible and the other the Constitution. No changes are necessary.

The grandest vision some men have is a mental picture of themselves.

COUNTING SHEEP

When you can't sleep at night and roll and toss about your bed, give a thought to the elderly Massachusetts man who hasn't slept in six years. There is something bothering you, you can't close your eyes, your nerves are jumpy, restlessness keeps you keyed up and sleep passes you by. It happens to all of us here in St. Joe. The 69 year old man who has gone without sleep since 1933 is "fit as a fiddle" he says, is a hard worker, walks miles, chops wood, carries water, and gardens for a living in the summer. Lack of sleep hasn't seemed to hurt him.

We would laugh, as children, when the old man who slept in his chair would nod and jerk his head as he snored so loudly the women folks would shake him to stop the noise. He insisted he wasn't asleep but simply closed his eyes to rest them! We often fail to realize the length of time we do sleep, for five minutes of wakefulness while a household slumbers, seems like five hours to the man who lies awake. Insomnia is a demon and we havne't a good word to say for him.

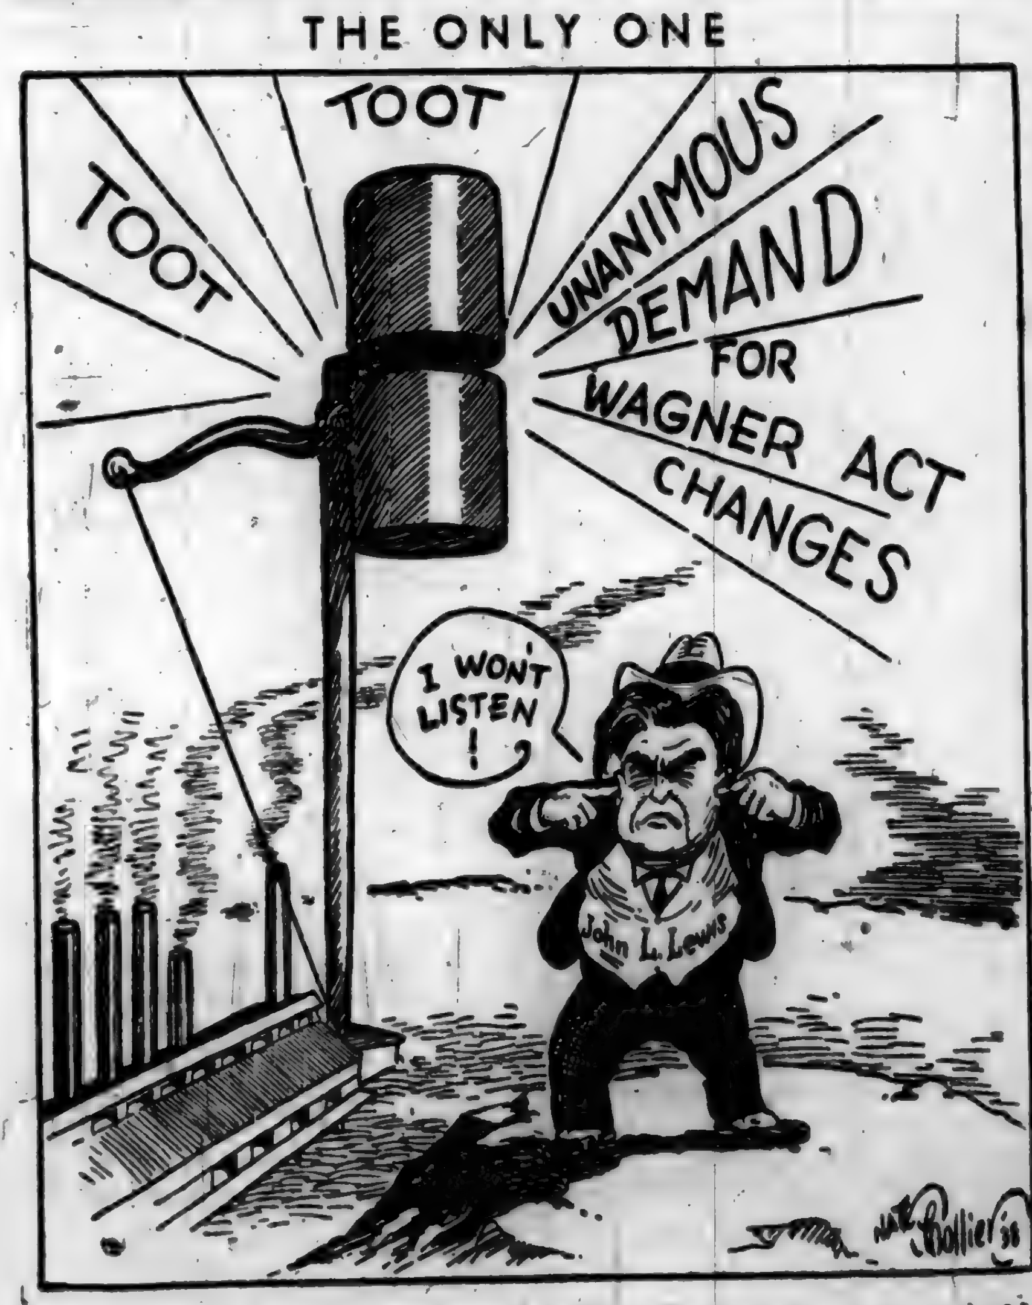
THE ONLY ONE



CARE FOR THE BIRDS

In the winter it is up to man to feed the birds of the air. There are many of them which come and go, but there are a good many of these winged friends which remain in this section the year round. The past summer has been favorable to the birds, they have become more profuse than last year. In cold areas it is necessary to continue to feed the birds until May, but however long it is, the need of thoughtfulness on the part of all of us, is a necessity if we wish to have these creatures with us in the spring. It doesn't make any difference how poor the table, everyone in St. Joe can spare crumbs for the birds. Don't forget the water too!

MEN AT WOMEN'S WORK

The man who won the national crocheting contest admits he has been fascinated by the art of crocheting since his childhood. The printer might be stumped whether to place an item such as this under the heading of sports or on the woman's page, but there are many men interested in what we term woman's work, and are proud of their ability. There are men who know how to knit, some are interested in embroidery. There are fellows who have had a hand in making a hooked rug and others who can "sew a fine seam." There are many amateur men-cooks, who delight in the art and boast of the fine bit of cooking they do. This office knows of a man who can turn a collar on his shirt, and neatly too. There are homes where men iron and even bake. Of course, there are men in St. Joe who would not be caught doing any of these things, but there are many wives who will proudly boast of what a handy man her husband is around the house.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS

In these days when red flannel is almost an oddity and winter underwear comes in less brilliant hue, we are recolled to the difference now and the times when the decided change of Fall to Winter meant the change from light weight into heavies, as certain as death and taxes. The winters may not be as severe as in the old days, but there are other changes to be noted as well. One of our readers points to an account book for an example. The book shows the purchase of ten yards of red flannel on April 10, 1854. Other entries showed eggs at 8 cents a dozen; shoes averaving $1.50 a pair, and brooms sold at 25 cents each. Coffee came at 50 cents a pound and tea $1 a pound. Candles, gunpowder, fur caps and whalebone for dress stays were listed as necessities. There were no items of cosmetics and silk hose. Wonder if folks were less happy then for not having them.

INTOLERANCE

History has dealt heavily with the Jewish race. They have been a people without a flag or country and maintained their homes in lands all over the globe. There have been many times in the past that the Jews have faced extermination, have been forced to flee for their lives, have been persecuted and spat upon. This is to the disgrace of a so-called civilisation. But however severe the treatment, the darkest hour for the Jewish race is lighted by the fact that they, with the Chinese, are the two oldest peoples in the world. They have lived to write the story of their persecutions and of the downfall of those who persecuted them, states one Hebrew scholar. Perhaps due to their wanderings, the Jew has become closer to his race in sympathy, and consequently racial ties are strong.

The future of the Jew in Germany, Austria and Italy is uncertain and likely to be a trial and tribulation to the people concerned, but however the outcome, they will hold on until they can occupy their place under the sun with the rest of God's peoples. There are various criticisms regarding the Jewish race, but intolerance of our fellowman will get us nothing. A splendid example of consideration and benevolence was displayed by a southern negro church whose members subscribed money for the aid of the Hebrew refugees. This is known as tolerance and godliness.

GUARD THE FARMER?

Investigation into un-American octivities has unearthed evidence, says Chairman Dies, that the Communists will attempt to form a National Farmer-Labor party within the next two years. Over a radio broadcast the farmers of America are warned to guard against such a movement, to be aware of this drive to set up a dictatorship of Communism among the tillers o fteh soil and the laborers of this nation. Be this fact or fiction, the American farmer is alive to the situation, he is not alseep nor is he unaware of dangers from within as well as without, he reads his paper, he listens to his radio news. Today's farmer is hard to fool. Of course there are many strange movements cloaked under the label of Americanism, but the farmer and laborer around S. Joe can distinguish between intolerance and common sense. Whether Mr. Dies is correct in his statement or if it is only a false alarm, the farmer and laborer can still tell the difference between a soap box and a lecture platform.

CHECK IT OFF

This seems the proper time to make plans for our budgeting for this new year. All of us have hopes, dreams and ambitions to realize in 1939. Before we go ahead with these plons let us see how our slate for the year just past looks to us. The best way to start a year right is to clear up the unfinished business of the old. This is true of debts. The best idea for keeping the head out of wateer for 1939 is to be sure there is no long overdue account riding the same wave with us, carried from '38. Consider your purse, consider your indebtedness and consider your merchant. The only way to continue to hold the good will of St. Joe folks, is to see that your bills are not carried over from year to year. Start a new year with a clean financial slate if possible.

TAXING GASOLINE

Every motorist in St. Joe has helped to pay the gasoline tax for this year just past which amounts to the billion dollar mark. This figure can be more readily understood when it is stated as that amount of money greater than the total wages paid workers in all the factories where automobiles and their parts are manufactured. The gasoline tax and the automobile factory comes from the pocket of you, the motorist. The Automobile Manufacturers' Association states, "high gasoline taxes definitely appear to be a retardant to sales of new automobile." But from our personal knowledge, the average man who buys an automobile, or who doesn't buy one, does not consider the gasoline tax as much as he considers the original investment and whether he is finacially able to make a down payment or if the upkeep and repair will be too much on the pocketbook. We are also informed that the American farm is absorbing more gasoline than ever before. The farms of the U. S. are powered by oil instead of oots. The farm tractor and other motor-driven farm machines have proven their value to increased nnmbers. Farmers have greatly multiplied their consumption of gasoline both for the use of the pleasure car and labor machines. You have shared in this billion dollar tax.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

GAINED MASTERY OF MALAYS

Dense tropical foliage lined the shores of Quallah Battoo, Sumatra, masking the outlines of odd native structures, which stood like gigantic beehives on stilts and were enclosed by stout stockades.

Defiant Malays, who had robbed the American ship Friendship and murdered some of her crew, stood ready to resist the advance of U. S. Marines and bluejackets who had come to exact redress from the pirates and to demand the future security of ships in those waters.

It was in 1832, before the days of telegraph and radio, and a full year after the outrage, when the warship Potomac cast anchor off the shores of Sumatra with the purpose of bringing the plundering rajah and his savage henchmen to terms. The Malays had no intention of obeying the American demands.

In the early morning a landing party from the warship was rowed ashore. Dividing their forces into three parties, one of the groups attacked the first fortress, blowing up the stockade gate and meeting the foe in hand-to-hand conflict, the Malays fighting to the death. Elsewhere a U. S. Marine detachment charged another stockade position with such vigor that the natives ultimately gave up the struggle and fled.

But a third fortress was held by men who had sworn to die before surrendering, and two of the American groups combined for the assault. Armed native vessels on the river provided an additional menace to the attackers, who swept aside all opposition in a final victorious drive. A fourth fortress was easily captured.

It took more than five hours of bitter fighting to defeat the pirates. After a severe bombardment from the guns of the Potomac the following night, a delegation of native chiefs made a humble place for peace. It was not until 1839, however, after another expedition had been made to Quallah Battoo, that the Malays finally learned to respect the Stars and Stripes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Shultz, 78, a resident of Auburn until a year and a half ago, died Saturday evening at 6 o'clock at the Sanders Hospital, where she had been a patient since November 26. Death was caused by a complication of diseases. Mrs. Shultz, widow of John D. BANK OFFICIAL GETS EIGHTEEN MONTHS IN FEDERAL PRISON

C. Clifton Muhn, of Auburn, was sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment in federal court at Indianapolis Saturday morning for violation of the banking laws. He also was fined $500 and the costs.

Walter J. Mondhank, of Butler, escaped with a suspended sentence of a year and a day and a fine of $500. Mrs. Mary Reynolds, of Garrett, had a six months sentence suspended. She was not fined.

All three defendants were formerly connected with the People's Savings and Loan Association of DeKalb County. Mondhank was the president, Mrs. Reynolds was secretary and Muhn was a field representative. They pleaded guilty last Nov. 15 to indictments charging them with executing false financial statements. Judge Baltzell at that time deferred passing of sentence and assigned the probation officer of the court, Adolph Kruse, to make investigations of the defendants. The cases were set for Dec. 3, but were again continued.

Muhn was granted his liberty until Jan 23 to arrange his affairs. He will then report to the United States marshal. He probably will serve his time at the U. S. reformotory at Chillicothe, O., but this is determined by the attorney general. He will be eligible for parole after serving a third of his term.

Why is it that middle age, a period in our lives, seems to last so much longer than youth?

There are some men who expect to be paid a dollar an hour for their working time, and turn around and waste their spare hours as though they weren't worth five cents apiece.

Economy is that thing that makes $3.98 sound to the average woman like a whole lot less than $4.

WRONG SIZE LAMP BULBS ARE MISFITS, TOO!

MOST people know enough not to wear tight shoes. But science has just recently proved that reading or working under wrong size lamp bulbs may be even more harmful. A child doing homework under a 25-watt bulb, for example, may not only strain his eyes without knowing it, but actually wastes as much valuable nervous energy as a laborer digging a ditch! For easy seeing without eyestrain, try this simple rule: One 100-watt Mazda lamp, or two 60's, or three 40's in each reading lamp.

FIREMEN AND WIVES ENTERTAINED AT HALL

The St. Joe firemen held their monthly meeting Monday evening, Jan. 24th, at the town hall, after which the firemen and Auxiliary were entertained by the fire chief, Roy Wade. A sociable evening was spent by playing games after which refreshments were served by Chief Wade and wife. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Wade for an enjoyable evening. Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wade, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Hurni, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Curie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser, Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Ridgway, Mr. and Mrs. William Keeler, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Reidenbach, DuWayne Kinsey, Albert Moore, Vern Coburn. The guests were Lena Meek and Velma Porter.

Feed the Birds!

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Sechler and baby, of Kendallville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Sible and family, and St. Joe relatives. Mr. Sechler reported his mother as being quite poorly this winter.

Isaac Peters, 85, of near Waterloo, died in Auburn hospital Monday morning following a stroke on Saturday. He was born June 22, 1853 in Ohio. He moved to DeKalb County 15 years ago from Decatur, Ind., to which town the body was returned Wednesday for burial. He is the father of R. Earl Peters, state FHA director.

O. E. GINTHER WINS NATIONAL RECOGNITION

St. Joe Valley Hampshire Farms, O. E. Ginther, manager, is winning a national reputation as having the prize production sow of 1938 in a contest sponsored by the Breeders Association. The January issue of American Hampshire Breedsman states that Mr. Ginther heads the individual competition among 75 entries.

The sow winning the Gold Medal recognition was one leased to Coral Platter, of near Coburn's Corners Church, and her high record is as follows:

Farrowed a litter of 11 pigs; raised 10; weight at farrowing time, 32 pounds; farrowing weight per pig, 2.9 pounds; weaning weight per litter, 420.95 pounds.

Mr. Ginther shares much of his success with his young farmer friend and The News is pleased to recognize their success, and to commend them in their efforts to produce better live stock. We bespeak for our Hampshire fancier a greater degree of success in the years to follow and he will find all these winnings of inestimable help in future selling, that they carry a direct practical appeal to hog men and farmers in terms of their own language.

SCOUT DAY PLANS MADE FOR FALL FAIR

At a meeting Sunday afternoon in the pastor's study in the Auburn Presbyterian Church, representatives of the DeKalb County Girl Scout and Boy Scout troops set up an organization to formulate plans for Scout Day during the DeKalb County Fair next Fall. Heading the committee will be Harry Kirkpatrick, of Auburn, and Gray Woodcox, of Garrett.

The following preliminary sub-committees were named:—To arrange the parade, Fred Ziegler, Dan Winegardner and Leola Ford; Merit badge show and exhibits, M. A. Sheets, Arthur Ford and Dwight Feagler; pageants and stunts, Leslie Wilbern, Ellen Kirkpatrick and Mrs. C. E. McClintock, and in charge of publicity, Karl Mavis.

The fair organization wishes to stress youth work this year and has offered the fullest cooperation to make this feature a big event. Space will be provided for each troop to set up its demonstration of scout craft. At the merit badge show scouts will demonstrate their skill in the different arts and crafts and at this time will be given an opportunity to gain new awards in subjects they have not studied previously.

On Scout Day, Auburn scouts will be hosts to visiting scouts from other counties of the area. The Anthony Wayne area is comprised of nine counties—Jay, Whitley, Wells, Huntington, Allen, Noble, DeKalb, Adams and Steuben and it is hoped that a large representation will be present for the day.

AGED COUPLE ARE SEEKING SEPARATION

Eighty-four year old Samuel Kiser, of Concord Township, asserts in a cross-complaint for a divorce filed in the DeKalb Circuit Court that his wife, Isabel Kiser, sought to obtain possession of his property and succeeded in getting some of it.

He says she knew he had only a small earning capacity, but that she nagged him for money. He also contends that she cursed him. They married Oct. 12, 1922, and parted last August 22nd.

In her complaint filed last August, Mrs. Kiser said her husband insisted upon living with his daughter although he knew the daughter mistreated her. She stated that he owns land in DeKalb and Allen Counties and she asks for $5,000 alimony. She is represented by Attorneys W. D. Stump and Samuel D. Jackson, while Husselman & Husselman are her husband's counsel.

Trial of the case is set for Jan. 26.

LIKE—MILLER

Roy Like, 18, and Miss Arlene Miller, 18, both working at Adrian, Mich., were married Saturday at Auburn, while home on a week end visit with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Like, of St. Joe. Roy is a graduate of St. Joe High School and is now employed as salesman by Mr. Wayne Graber of Adrian, Mich., who conducts a wholesale business.

Mr. Graber accompanied the young couple to St. Joe Saturday, where he joined his wife and baby, who were here visiting her parents. They all returned to Adrian, Sunday.

ADOPT RULES FOR SAFETY OF BICYCLE RIDERS

The following is a list of rules and regulations suggested by the Safety Class of the St. Joe High School which, if followed, should make bicycle-riding safer.

1. Select a bicycle of the right size, one adjusted for you. Bicycles not adjusted may cause accidents.
2. Avoid riding in the hot sun or on very hot days.
3. Learn to ride in your yard or some place especially designated. Stay off the streets, or roads, until you can ride.
4. Keep bicycle in good condition; check the brakes and tires often. Each bike should be equipped with chain guards.
5. Never carry passengers; it is dangerous.
6. No careful cyclist will attempt to "hitch" on moving vehicles.
7. Avoid fast riding over rough roads; a bump, rut, or loose stone may cause a nasty spill.
8. Pick out less traveled roads for pleasure riding, then ride in as straight a line as possible so motorists can judge where you're going.
9. Ride on the right side of the road. In towns stay close to the curb.
10. Use hand signals when slowing down, stopping, or turning.
11. When riding at night have a light in front, either a light or a reflector in rear. Light colored clothing also helps make one more visible to motor drivers.
12. Obey all traffic regulations. Stop for lights the same as if you were driving automobiles.
13. Be constantly on the alert and at same time courteous. Remember, neither sidewalks nor highways were made for bicycles.

ST. JOE SCOUTS AT AUBURN SUNDAY EVENING

A new Auburn Boy Scout troop, to be known as Troop 165, was invested in an impressive candlelight ceremony Sunday evening at the regular vespers service of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The newly installed troop is sponsored by the Methodist Church.

After an introductory speech by the pastor, Rev. Claude Garrison, showing the relationship of scouting to religion, members of Troop 164, of St. Joe, were in charge of the installation service, coached by their scoutmaster, Leslie Wilbern. There was one supreme light and twelve tapers, which stood for the twelve laws in the Boy Scout code. Members of the new troop then repeated the Scout oath in unison. Don Winegardner was installed as scoutmaster of the group.

CONSERVATION LAW CHANGES PROPOSED

Three bills for revision and enactment of Indiana conservation laws have been submitted to the General Assembly by the State Conservation Committee, representing the more than two hundred thousand members of conservation clubs.

The three proposals, embodying changes suggested and approved by the club members, provide for amendment of the fish and game laws; provide for Indiana's acceptance of the federal statute making federal funds available for wildlife protection and restoration; and provide a method by which tax delinquent land could be added to the public lands administered by the Department of Conservation.

The amendments to the fish and game laws provide for a 14 instead of a 10-day non-resident fishing license, establishment of an open season on cock pheasants division of the state into a northern and southern zone for opening of the trapping season, placing the black and flying squirrels on the list of protected animals, fixing open seasons for the taking of frogs, and making other changes in the trapping and fur-buying regulations.

Under terms of the Pitman-Robinson Act, returning funds collected by the federal government by tax on guns and ammunition to the states, Indiana will receive approximately $100,000 a year for wildlife restoration and protection. To be eligible for this grant, provision must be made against diversion of hunting and fishing license fees. Acquisition of this fund would permit expansion of the present activities of the Division of Fish and Game.

The third proposal sets out a method by which land which has been offered at two successive tax delinquent sales and is then held for two years to permit redemption by the owner, can then be taken over by the state and included in the public lands administered by the Department of Conservation. It is estimated that there are several thousand acres of abandoned, tax-delinquent land which could be reclaimed through forestry and other conservation operations, with future value to the people of the state.

TWENTY-TWO ADDED TO WELFARE ROLL OF COUNTY

Twenty-two new names were added to the age assistance rolls of DeKalb County by action of the welfare board Wednesday at its monthly meeting. However, five deaths during the last month of persons previously on the list were reported and two withdrew from the rolls, making a net gain of fourteen and making a grand total of 348.

The new awards range from $9 to $25 a month and three married couples are included in the list. The board rejected five applications. It was decided that four of these applicants had sufficient means and one failed to meet the residence requirements. Five of those granted awards were recently dismissed by the WPA.

Of eight cases reinvestigated, five were continued without charge and three awards were increased. The board recommended to the state that two awards to blind persons be increased and that no change be made in another such award.

Two new applications for assistance for children were acted upon favorably. In cases reviewed, three reductions were ordered as one of the children in each case has reached the age of sixteen.

SPENCERVILLE P. T. A. PROGRDAM NEXT WEEK

A special program is now being arranged for the Spencerville P. T. A. for Wednesday evening, next week, when a saxophone and accordion band from Ft. Wanye will furnish the music and Rev. Frank Stevenson will deliver the address. The men and women will participate in an old fashioned spelling match.

The meeting will be entertaining as well as instructive.

Many an editor can tell how long a fellow has been a writer by the amount of hair he pulls when the printer makes a mistake in his copy.

Today's youth doesn't differ much from yesterday's child, except that yesterday they only asked for a nickel.

It doesn't make any difference how good a meal is cooked, for a fellow can't really enjoy it if he is surrounded by implements he doesn't know when to use.

It doesn't pay to borrow trouble, unless you have the knack of shouldering it off on someone else.

One nice thing about wishing, there is no hard work connected with it.

Almost simultaneously is was announced to correspondents in Washington last week, that:

The government payroll has hit another all time peak, with 119,043 employed in Washington offices, agencies, bureaus and commissions, as compared with the 117,760 peak during the World War. (These figures don't include field employes, which add more than 600,000 more.)

And that:

A Senate study had found approximately 12,000 Federal employes to be aliens.

The President's message on defense, although calling for prompt preparation for repelling invasion by foreign enemies, was somewhat more mild than was expected. Emphasis was laid on the protection of the Panama Canal, and the necessity for increasing the available war planes by three thousand was pointed out. The building of the planes will be done in private factories, a double or triple shift being required. Notwithstanding the increased working force, planes cannot be turned out as rapidly as autos, since the manufacture of flying machines calls for skilled labor of a kind that cannot be drawn from a mass and waiting supply.

The Dies Committee, which has been investigating Communist, Facist and Nazi activities in the United States, has been battling for its life, and the indications are that it will be continued for two years longer, although its opponents still hope to be able to curtail its power. The foes of the Committee are sharp and outspoken, and the President has not given his full support. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has had nothing to say on the subject of permitting the Dies work to run on for the period stated. Regardless of what may be done about it ultimately, the testimony adduced has made instructive and interesting reading.

The latest word of the President on the subject of Social Security is to the effect that its privileges should be extended to approximately seventeen million persons who have not been reached by it heretofore. Of course, ten million are dependent children, wives and widows, a deserving group. Wild pension schemes got no support, since the message of the Executive embodied a warning against "untried and unsound panaceas," a phrase of general import, but capable of application to specific cases which anybody can identify.

VANISHING WINTERS

Many of the citizens of St. Joe have noticed and remarked that the old-time winters were stiffer than those of today. These have not been the severe winters of twenty and thirty years ago when cold weather brought snow and ice storms with a vengeance that lasted, not for just a day or three, but seemed to hold on for the entire season. There now comes to us reports from Moscow that, after ten years of research in the Arctic regions, they find the polar ice to be melting and the world's weather growing warmer. This has been the opinion of our own prognosticators for quite some time. Of course there is a certain amount of severe winter weather in various sections, but the duration is less and the average temperature is higher. The reason for this change in weather is a problem unsolved. It may be if we live long enough, say several thousand years, the polar ice will disappear entirely. Some scientists figure that the Gulf Stream is warming things up for us. Others are blaming it upon the sun, and maybe both are correct. However, the oldsters about this area can well recall the days of old when there was not a question raised about winter disappearing, for winter used to have a way of making herself felt through force and intensity which was apparent to tobogganists, skaters, fox and geese and snow-fight enthusiasts of local centers.

For those of us who don't believe that our winters are milder, consult the Weather Bureau averages for the past 60 years and they will prove it for you.

THE SENSITIVE COW

Not that it makes a whole lot of difference to most folks around St. Joe who have cows, but it might be interesting to comment upon the recent findings of a certain university school of dairy research. It seems that the peaceful cow is a creature affected by swing music and Wagner, when it comes to the opera numbers. The Jersey or Holstein calmly munching her cud may become a victim of nervous indigestion and curdle the milk over modern jazz music and Lohengrin. There are few of us who take such matters seriously, and we may be wrong in passing so lightly over the musical reactions of the cow, for time may prove to us that operatic arrangements may be the cause of much curdled milk and cream. The average milker doesn't know much Wagner to hum and if he did the cow might not recognize it for Wager, and a modern band with its swing and jazz scarcely ever finds its way into the stables of the neighborhood farms. But it is nice to know that the quiet cow has an ear for music and wants it Beethoven!

WHAT PRICE DEER

It is now possible to give to our News readers the figures that report the results of the annual deer hunting season. The result totals 600,000 hunters swarmed the woods of the states in their search for game. The fact that out of this number, 134 were brought out dead and nearly 800 were carried out wounded, is sufficient reason for us to remark that a previous editorial dealing with the disastrous results of careless use of fire arms and the evident lack of precaution on the part of all hunters, call for editorial comment. Think of the homes throughout this nation where sorrow was caused by a man's desire for sport. Of course accidents will happen in all manner of sports, but is this worth such sorrow for some loved one? The figure, stated before, takes into account the deer season. What of the number of deaths and injuries happening during the small game season? The risks man runs in the hunting season may be worth the catch—we doubt it.

WITH A CHILD LEADING

Is their face red? Two years ago it was that San Francisco built a steel and concrete mint, spending $100,000,000 to make it burglar proof as well as fire, bomb and earthquake proof. It took two fifteen year old boys, doing the job as a prank, to enter the forbidding mint and startle the watcymen and guards. Despite the buzzers, bells, telephones and lights that were rung, buzzed and lighted, the boys stood their ground, protesting that the act was not intended for robbery but done for fun, "just to see if we could get in." The sentence for punishment for such a deed should be very light, in fact, San Francisco really owes them a medal for distinguished services. If it was possible for two fifteen year old youngsters to do this, as a childish trick, what would have been the outcome if older heads with criminal intentions, had been let loose in the same mint? There may be all sorts of excuses and explanations but the main idea is the fact that San Francisco needs more and better protective measures in her mint. The technicians were asked how to keep the windows open for ventilation and still keep out the intruders in the mint. Folks here in St. Joe suggest they ask the boys, who might have a good solution, they found their way in!

THE FINGER POINTS

We are recalled by the recent Coster-Musica affair, the bit of unfavorable comment that arose when the first finger printing was done in order to prove conclusively that this was one sure way of convicting a criminal. How many jibes, jests and denunciations were made, how many caustic remarks were uttered regarding the uncertainty. The head of a great business corporation is arrested and his finger prints are taken as a matter of police routine. There would be few to comment this prominent financial figure with a prisoner of 1909. The finger prints of the two men were identical and the two men became one personality, due to a card in the files of the police. The man who laughed at the early procedure of finger printing when it was in its infancy, today realizes the value of this system. The personage can fake his past, his birth certificate, his name, his financial rating, his honor, but the finger ends point his way to destiny.

SOUND PHILOSOPHY

There is a bit of good, sound philosophy in the following sign recently observed in a Chinese laundry:

You want credit,
Me no give,
You get sore.
You want credit,
Me give,
You no pay,
Me get sore;
Better you get sore.

SOIL MANAGEMENT AND CONSERVATION SCHOOL ANNOUNCED FOR JANUARY 31

Farmers of DeKalb County who are interested in increasing their incomes and at the same time conserving their soil, are planning to spend Tuesday, January 31, at the Soil Conservation and Soil Management School to be held in the Court House Assembly Room, Auburn, to hear the following subjects discussed by G. H. Enfield and R. C. Cole, of Purdue.

10 A. M. Soil Erosion and Its Control Through Proper Land Use.

11 A. M. Saving Soil Fertility with Legumes, Manure and Crop Residues.

1 P. M. How Indiana Farmers are Conserving Soil.

2 P. M. A Fertility Program for Pasture and Crop Land.

Each farmer may bring a sample of soil from his farm which will be tested. He will be advised the amount of lime to use for best results on his farm.

The speakers will bring out the reasons for and methods of conserving soil and moisture under DeKalb County conditions. The importance of legumes, manures, crop residues and a good fertility program on the farm will also be discussed. These are very important and timely subjects and merit the serious consideration of everyone in the County.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Right here I am going to propose a change in the method of driving automobiles that may seem revolutionary. I should like to see the horn or other warning signals eliminated from every automobile, truck and motor vehicle. I recommend this as a safety measure.

No doubt there will be many arguments proposed against this recommendation on the belief that the horn is absolutely necessary to warn other motorists and pedestrians of an approaching car.

On the other hand, if you had no horn on your car, you would drive with extreme caution and in a safe manner. Rome tried it in certain sections of the city and found a big drop in automobile accidents.

Before criticising this suggestion, think it over.

Economic Highlights...

"There is discernible in the 76th Congress a more favorable attitude toward the American business man—more concern for his problems—than can be ascribed to any national legislature since the advent of the New Deal six years ago," writes Alfred Flynn in Barron's.

This probably means that those congressmen who take pleasure in heckling business, though they may be as vocal as ever, will be less of an influence when it comes to actually getting legislation passed. And it means that the current Congress will be far more independent, far more immune to pressure from any source, than its immediate predecessors.

At the moment, Congress is sharply divided on the vital issue of fiscal policy. The President, in his message, reaffirmed his faith in government spending to bring about prosperity. It is his theory, buttressed by the opinions of his most important advisers, such as Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, that the country should forget about lowering Federal expenditures and think about increasing the national income. He estimates that if the national income should be increased to $80,000,000,000—it reached $60,000,000,000 in the fiscal year ending last July 1—an $8,000,000,000 budget would be balanced, due to increased tax receipts and a lessened need for relief expenditures. And, following the same reasoning, a $90,000,000,000 national income would balance a $10,000,000,000 budget without further boosting taxes.

Illustration of how other governments, notably Sweden, have employed this spending theory successfully, can be produced. But, as the opponents of the theory point out, these governments have done most of their spending for things that produce an actual dollar-and-cents return, while our spending has been primarily for purposes, such as relief, that return the government nothing directly. Senator Byrd, of Virginia, is the leader of a strong congressional group which sharply disputes the view that we can permanently and materially increase our income through the lavish disbursement of federal money. This group thinks that the country can be kept temporarily going by this device, but that a collapse is inevitable. As a result, the spending versus the anti-spending philosophies will crash head-on many times before this Congress adjourns. First signs of that came in the opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's request for an extremely large relief budget.

The other big current issue is rearmament. The President, in a special message, has said that in a world of force we must be as strong as any power—that we must, therefore, embark on the greatest peace-time armament program in our hitsory. There is strong opposition to this in some circles—curiously enough, in those liberal and radical circles which support the New Deal in most matters, but fear that the creation of an unprecedented military machine is a step toward war and fasicm. There seems to be little opposition in Congress. The big-city press, Republican and Democratic, seems to favor the program in general, though there are differences as to details. Four or five years ago, observers point out, the American people would have been horrified and repelled by such a program—today, with their eyes on dictator-ridden Europe, the feeling grows that it is an unhappy necessity.

Fiscal policy and armament will hold the center of the Congressional stage for some time. Then will come other items on this Congress' calendar—the railroad problem; revision of the social security laws; revision of the Wagner Act; changes in the farm benefit program which has badly bogged down; legisaltion dealing with tax-exempt securities, and taxation of government employes. It promises to be a momentous session—as it must be, in this momentous and critical year of world history.

At last reports, business activity on the average was at a level more than 20 per cent above a year ago. Signs of the universally-anticipated winter decline—which some economists term a "corrective recession in the upswing"—were appearing. It is felt that this decline will be moderate, and that impovement should again get underway by April or before. If the attitude of Congress is friendly, that will, of course, be an extremely beneficial factor.

Considerable hope is pinned on the belief that railroad and utility buying will be substantially larger this year than last, though no one expects any real boom in these industries which face plenty of handicaps—largely political.

New car sales have been good, but there is a question as to how long this will go on, inasmuch as dealers continue to report that the used-car glut grows greater, and is taking the profit out of the retail end of the business.

Retail sales are at a favorable level for the season. But the long-awaited improvement in the position of the vital durable goods industries has not yet put in an appearance.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched accidently even, resound with sweet music. —Philip Brooks.

Another blow will be directed at township control of the rural school system by a bill to be introduced in the Indiana legislature this week providing for the election of county superintendents of schools. These officials are now selected by the township trutsees of the county.

Township trustees would be permitted to require applicants for direct relief to perform a dollar's worth of work for their dollar's worth of assistance if a bill introduced in the Indiana legislature by Senators Howard V. Johnson, of Mooresville and Walter R. Arnold, of South Bend becomes a law. It would permit the trustee to require the indigent to perform any work needed by any governmental unit within the township equal to the amount of assistance granted, based on the prevailing wage scale.

A bill before the legislature this week makes it uncertain as to whether or not small towns will be able to have free movies during the summer, unless they first procure a license and secondly that their outfit must pass inspection of state fire marshal. The local merchants hurried their protests to our Representative Harry Shull and Senator Harry Brandon, Monday. This is a prohibitive bill rather than one of deriving revenue because at the most only $2,500 in license fees could be received by the state license, and a far greater amount would be required to inspect and enforce this law. We cannot believe that Indiana will pass favorable on such a law.

LIFE magazine, 10c, at News Office.

Warden Tevis was in St. Joe Wednesday noon.

Hatchability of eggs may be improved by proper breeding.

Dairymen and farmers should consume more diary products throughout the year—a good resolution.

Week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Guilford were, Miss Hilda Volkert and Mr. Wayne Schroeder, of Ft. Wayne, Harold and Earl Volkert, of Quincy, Mich., Miss Arlene Schuble, of Lansing, Mich., and Miss Florence Boles, of Jonesville, Mich.

Mrs. Nina TenEyck, 79, widow of Charles TenEyck, an Auburn florist for many years, died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wallace Hersh, Auburn, at 10 o'clock Monday evening, following a stroke of apoplexy. Mrs. TenEyck had apparently been in good health until two hours before her death. Survivors are one son, S. H. TenEyck, the daughter, Mrs. Hersh and 6 grandchildren.

WHAT WILL BE NEXT?

In one of our southern cities there has been presented an ordinance which would prohibit the manufacture and sale of ice cream or other milk products containing intoxicating beverages. The city director of health wishes to protect the industry itself and also to protect the children of the city from acquiring a taste for alcoholic beverages through the medium of ice cream cones and sodas. The use of intoxicating ingredients in ice cream and milk products seems almost unbelieveable. Being sold to children recalls the baleful influence and despised character, offering her poisoned apple as an enticement to Snow White. This is an instance when a part of a fairy story comes to life.

WINTER ACTIVITIES

We have cautioned our readers many times of the accidents that happen in the home, as well as those on the highways. We have cited figures to show the increase in home injuries, but we have not mentioned the fact that the greatest number of these home fatalities happen during the winter months, according to an insurance company. All St. Joe residents realise the danger of falls, electrocutions and infections that occur in their homes, but there is the added danger of burns and asphixiations during the winter time. There is a child suffocating under blankets, dealing with kerosene which often results in fires to home and body, the gas fumes in closed rooms from heating units, the closed garages with poison pouring from motors, the icy steps and sidewalks that are constant dangers. This is the time to guard against winter hazards. Nearly 35,000 deaths in home accidents in 1937, and most of them during the winter months means, use care.

ADDITIONAL COMMANDMENTS

There are resolutions that are necessary for every citizen in St. Joe and Spencerville to make, and to keep, in order to have his community on an equal footing with neighboring towns. They must be made, or renewed, by each native son that the records of his home town may be kept clean. There are ten "musts" that should be included among the New Year's resolutions of every motorist and pedestrian in our cities.

1. Keep your brakes in perfect order.
2. Drive carefully, using hand signals at all times.
3. Give the pedestrian a chance!
4. Watch for school zones and school bus stops.
5. Study automobile traffic rules and obey them.
6. Pedestrians, look both ways before crossing the street.
7. Don't "jay walk." Cross at intersections.
8. Watch traffic lights and signals before crossing streets.
9. Don't walk around an auto into traffic.
10. Don't insist upon the right of way—the auto may win.

The nation's high automobile fatality rate can be reduced by the cooperation of all of us, deaths due to carelessness and neglect can be avoided. Lend a helping hand. Keep the commandments.

THEY COME AND GO

It was in 1932 that America's Public Enemy No. 1, started serving a ten-year sentence for income tax evasion. There were many crimes laid at the doorstep of "Scarface Al" Capone, but the law could act only with the charge as stated. There were many people, and some of them in St. Joe, who believed Capone would not serve this sentence. His actual term in prison is shortened by good behavior despite the fact he is alleged to be one of the most hated criminals at Alcatras and has been involved in a number of prison disorders. Capone, whose sentence is up on Jan. 19th, returns to Chicago a man greatly affected by these years of imprisonment. A recent examination shows him mentally deranged by his experience and this may confine him for a longer period.

The recent unveiling of a swindler posing as president of the nation's third largest drug firm, a man of foreign birth who started in this country smuggling cheese, has wound up a colorful career in the biggest financial coup in our history. He had the admiration and respect of leading Wall Street financiers, was listed in "Who's Who," borrowed millions upon his company's name for integrity and financial soundness, has mingled with the best people under the guise of a citizen of sound standing and vast influence both past and present.

Capone leaves Alcatraz to take up another life where his once powerful gang machine is no more. He enters the ranks of citizenship again, a sadder man. Coster, the one time Italian cheese smuggler, used a revolver to end his amazing career. He leaves the ranks of citizenship a wiser man. Do these outstanding examples of the fruits of lawlessness leave us a wiser people?

EDITOR ASKED WHETHER NEWSPAPERS ALWAYS TELL THE TRUTH, AND SUPPOSE THEY DID?

A gentleman asked me the other day if newspapers always speak the truth. To me, it was rather a naive question, and I replied by asking him, if he always spoke the truth. He finally admitted that he did not and he recalled the stage comedy of a few years ago where one of the principals agreed to speak the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth for 24 hours.

A person, who always spoke the truth would be a fool and possibly a short-lived one.

He would be compelled to tell his hostess that her daughter's dancing resembled epilepsy, that the hostess' soup should be used for greasing wagon wheels and that the hostess herself should avoid having her picture taken for fear of ruining cameras.

It would be a most uncomfortable and unhappy world if every one were so stupid as to always insist upon telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Any newspaperman that insisted upon writing the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth all the time would last in any community just long enough for some of the readers of his stories to put on their hats and coats and get down to the newspaper office and escort him to the city limits.

He would have to say that so and so gave a very boring address the night before on a subject concerning which the speaker knew nothing. He would also feel compelled to state that so-and-so elected Sunday night to the chairmanship of the Purity League makes frequent trips to Podunk over the week end to get the understanding from a gorgeous blonde that his shrewdish wife has recently not been giving him.

He would have to say in many cases that the widow weeping at the bier of the useless lug who married her was in fact very happy to be rid of him, for now she could take the ten or fifteen thousand dollar insurance money and marry the butcher boy. He would also have to say in many obituaries that the decedent's great wealth was acquired by robbing the poor and that most of his philanthropies were only a belated form of blackmail to get St. Peter to allow him inside the pearly gates.

He would also have to say that many of the poor but proud were poor because they were extravagant, lazy and shiftless.

That Rev. Clay will not last long as pastor of that congregation, because he tells them how they live.

Any one who would demand the complete truth in all conversation and writing would be a very sadistic sort of chap and would soon gag on his own medicine.

But still people insist on telling the newspaper man just how he ought to run his paper.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1939 NUMBER 5

SPEAKING TALENT ENGAGED FOR COUNTY CONVENTION

Possibly the greatest assemblage of talent in DeKalb County for the year 1939, for any given program, is that arranged for the DeKalb County Sunday School Convention, which will meet in Auburn, starting on Wednesday evening, February 15, and continuing for two full days, ending on the evening of the 17th.

Unlike programs of former years, the convention will open on the evening of the fifteenth, with two complete and separate convention sessions.

The public will be invited to attend any one of these sessions.

NELLIE C. YOUNG

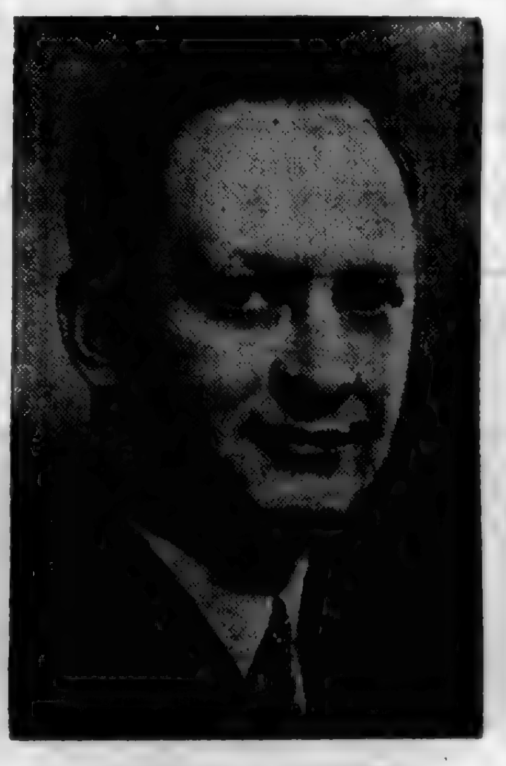
The Children's Convention will be held in the Church of God with the very special leadership of Miss Nellie C. Young, and she will talk on the subject of "The Child and America's Future." Every Sunday School will want to have a number of their workers in this session and receive the inspiration of this very highly educated and practical worker with children.

The program promises to be of special interest also because of the Children's Choir which is now being taught the old hymns of the Church in their own Sunday Schools of DeKalb County, and they will come together here for the first time this year. Miss Dora Carnahan, who has charge of the program together with her workers, promise their audience a real treat and inspiration.

HARRY G. ROWE

The other great meeting for this same evening, will be that conducted by the Young People's group, under the leadership of Mrs. Inez Dosch. This meeting will be held in the Church of Christ, Auburn, and their speaker will be Harry G. Rowe, of Indianapolis, former departmental leader for the state. Mr. Rowe is a DeKalb County favorite speaker, having appeared here and given more addresses along the line of Christian Education than any one man in the state of Indiana, and his audiences are always eager to hear his inspiring messages as relating to the Youth of today. Every Sunday School will want to have many representatives in this session also.

The two above sessions are an experiment with the county organization. Most of the people who make up the workers in the Sunday Schools of these departments, are folks who in many cases work and are school teachers, and are detained from entering the regular sessions of the County Convention. This will give them an opportunity to get the needed help they desire from the regular convention leadership.



CHARLES M. HOUSER

Thursday morning the convention will open in the Methodist Church, with registrations at 9:30 and Miss Young and Mr. Rowe will be the speakers during the forenoon and afternoon.

The evening banquet will again be in charge of Ward Jackman, and will be one of the great fellowship meetings of the convention.

The Thursday evening address will be given by Charles M. Houser, of Ft. Wayne. Mr. Houser has addressed groups in Auburn and DeKalb County and his coming will attract a large gathering.

E. T. ALBERTSON

Friday morning and afternoon will be in a sense, called state day, as E. T. Albertson, secretary of the state organization will address the convention both morning and afternoon and the morning subject will be "Worship," and the afternoon subject "What it Means to Teach."

The second speaker for the afternoon program will be Harold Turpin, of Indianapolis, pastor of the Seventh Presbyterian Church, who will discuss "The Adequate Leadership of Christ" and at the closing mass meeting Friday evening he will discuss "The Tricks of Self Deceit."

Mr. Turpin is a very capable speaker and has been a valuable leader in state young people's conferences and adult meetings.

Orchestra music for Thursday and Friday evenings will be in charge of Frank Campbell, and Jeff Buss will have charge of the song services.

The devotions for the two days will be in charge of Rev. G. L. Fisher, mornings; Rev. Fred D. Wright, afternoons, and Rev. Hubert F. Craven, evenings.

"Who put the Guest in the Baby's Crib?"

WRONG SIZE LAMP BULBS ARE MISFITS, TOO!

IT'S true! You can strain your eyes without even knowing it, when you try to read or work in light too dim for easy seeing. Scientific tests show that children especially not only strain their eyes but use up valuable energy if lamp bulbs are the wrong size. For quick easy reading or sewing without that "tired feeling," try this simple rule for good lighting: A good reading lamp by every easy chair. And at least one 100-watt Mazda lamp, or two 60's, or three 40's, in each reading lamp.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Here are some suggestions for driving that should help to prevent accidents and bring you safely to your destination:

1. Before starting on a trip, check the condition of tires, mirror, brakes, horn, lights, and windshield wiper. Make this a habit.
2. Have any mechanical trouble fixed. Do not drive with makeshift repairs.
3. Abide by all signs and signals.
4. Never pass another vehicle on a blind curve or when approaching the crest of a hill and especially not at an intersection.
5. Even if you have the right of way, give the other driver plenty of room at intersections. He may need it!
6. When there is a choice between speed and safety, choose safety every time.

CHURCH OF CHRIST PLANNING WORLD WIDE PROGRAM FEB. 1

The Churches of Christ are planning a Brotherhood dinner, throughout the world, Wednesday, February 1st. The dinners are to begin at 6:30. Many of the churches will have pot luck dinners. There will be greetings read from churches and some from foreign countries and mission stations. There will be a program in connection with each meeting.

Every country, where Churches of Christ are located, will observe this occasion. Because of the difference in time, around the world, there will be meetings held in some part of the world during the whole 24 hours. This is the second year that such meetings have been held. Last year they were so successful that it seemed wise to make them an annual event. The purpose is to bring about, between the churches, a closer bond of fellowship around the world. Each church will send greetings to other churches in which it has a special interest. These greetings will be read in connection with the program.

As a part of the evening's program, a radio broadcast is being given over 100 stations, throughout America. This will be a fifteen minute broadcast in most instances. Roger T. Nooe, of Nashville, Tenn., president of the International convention will speak, and Mrs. Charles Reign Scoville, world known singer, will sing. WOWO station of Fort Wayne will broadcast the program from 8:30 to 8:45. Radios will be installed in many of the churches to hear the broadcast.

MOTHER EARTH COMPLETLY BLANKETED WITH SNOW

The icy hand of winter was laid upon us Sunday night, when the heaviest blanket of snow of the winter fell. Roads were drifted shut to such an extent that school busses were unable to make their scheduled trip for gathering of the rural children. Teachers who lived out of town were unable to get here during the day Monday. The star mail route, operated by Raymond Rhodes, was running several hours late, in fact, traffic of all kinds was reduced to a minimum.

People were given a good work out shoveling snow from their walks and trucks were used to rid the snow about the filling station, hauling it to the rear and here children began at once to make snow huts.

Gerry Haver worker for hours Monday afternoon shoveling snow into an open well in order to preserve the water.

Children had a real treat wading drifts tumbling about in the snow.

School resumed operation on Wednesday morning, practically all over the county.

Fifteen extra men were added to the county highway force, according to Superintendent Clark F. Scholes, of St. Joe. The county had nine snow plows out Monday afternoon, working all over the county clearing main traveled roads and higwhays where there were cases of sickness. The force went on duty at 6:30 Monday morning.

State highway men went to work Sunday and remained on the job until the roads were opened and not until Monday afternoon late, was Number One opened north of St. Joe. The drifts on the Baker hill being as high as a car.

Men working in Fort Wayne were unable to get to their work until on Tuesday, and Charles Harter, of Newville, was unable to get to St. Joe in time for his work on the B. & O. section, until Wednesday, due to drifts.

John Crothers, rural carrier, made the most of his route on Monday by carrying a shovel along, and on Tuesday, he made the complete route.

Science has accomplished many things but it has failed to see why one shoe lace breaks before the other one.

There isn't a fellow in St. Joe who likes to lose, just for the sake of being a good sport.

There is one good way for a St. Joe man to find out if he has a pleasing personality. Run out of gas fifty miles from folks you know.

There is never anything that could not be worse. Take the cold for instance, what if it were a permanent wave?

It still remains the foremost problem of 1939—that of knowing where you can park and how fast you can jump.

There may be a lot of St. Joe girls who want to wear their Sunday clothes every day in the week. But you won't find any of the boys afflicted the same way.

It is hardly fair to keep a boy after school, just because his father worked the arithmetic problems wrong.

BUT SAY IT!

Nations may war, persecute and arbitrate, but we can pause long enough amid this strife to sing of love, to draw hearts and flowers upon a missive to our best girl on each 14th of February. Valentine Day, come what will, we observe with poetry and prose. We who are neither softly sentimental or prone to sweet nothings, can usually give way at this time, to an endearing phrase or a friendly gesture. There are many folks about us in St. Joe who have taken for granted this affection of ours. We have neglected, perhaps, to make a demonstration as to our fondness for those about us, but on this day we are able to say and write expressions of affection to those who so richly deserve them and who have waited for them, in many cases, since last February 14th. The idea seems to be for those of us who are of stern stuff, with no nonsense in our makeup, who put up a cold front in a buisness transaction, to send a box of candy, buy a bouquet of flowers, or purchase a pair of hose. There are many weeks which are set aside to say it with candy, flowers and photographs. But Valentine Day is only twenty-four hours long, so be sure to take time off to SAY IT! The old "I Love You" may be aged, but it still sounds good.

GOOD SENSE

Folks around St. Joe are mighty glad to know that the famous "quints" will not become a side show for visitors at the New York Exposition. The Canadian Government and Dr. Dafoe have made a denite stand against exhibiting these familiar five to the curious sight-seers. Of course this refusal to allow such an entrance means the loss of a million dollars to the little girls, but it would be just another step where they were not allowed to be human and normal youngsters. Our respects to the makers of this decision. It is a problem to keep the lives of these children sane and usual, an effort to obtain privacy for them. Little animals in cages don't have it, but can't five sweet little girls?

RURAL THRIFT

When you hear of big money schemes and financial scoops you know that it is cash on a large scale that makes the wheels go round. However, we speak in smaller figures when dealing with the average farm family who have $600 left after paying farm expenses and who manage to meet their every-day living expenses and have a reserve. We find that when their income passes this amount the farm family begins to make payments on debts and usually invests in farm business. We believe the statement that there is more of an inclination to save at lower income levels in farm communities than in the cities. Perhaps it is because the rural resident can live for less, perhaps he is used to less than the average city dweller, perhaps it is because he is more thrifty. But we in St. Joe consider such a statement as a compliment to the ruralites here about.

WE WILL BE FIT!

When we have needed a new coat of paint for the house, when our plumbing seemed antiquated and our heating equipment gave us a bit of trouble, we wished for new housing quarters that would solve the whole problem. Consequently, when folks in St. Joe read that, after making a survey of 45 per cent of all the dwellings in the nation and the answer was that six out of ten houses needed repairing and sixteen of every 100 houses outside of New York City were found unfit for use, we turned back to our old paint job, our kitchen sink and leaky pipes and the stove that wouldn't draw, and we found it all good. For human nature is such that we may think our home isn't fit to live in but we won't stand for someone else to say the same thing. This report shows that one-third of the nation is poorly housed. We shall hope for a new coat of paint this spring, do a bit of work on the plumbing and perhaps manage a roll or two of wall paper when the fires are out—and let anyone tell us that our house isn't fit for use then!

THAT HAIR CURL NEWS

One of the highest paid hair dressers, employed at a movie studio, tells how any woman can keep curls in her hair for three cents a week. He says in damp weather it is especially hard to keep hair in curl. The solution is made for the hair by taking a glass of warm water and dissolving in it five teaspoonsful of granulated sugar. Dampen the hair with this mixture, make the curls and let them dry. This sugar water acts as a lacquer and damp air will not affect the hair curls.

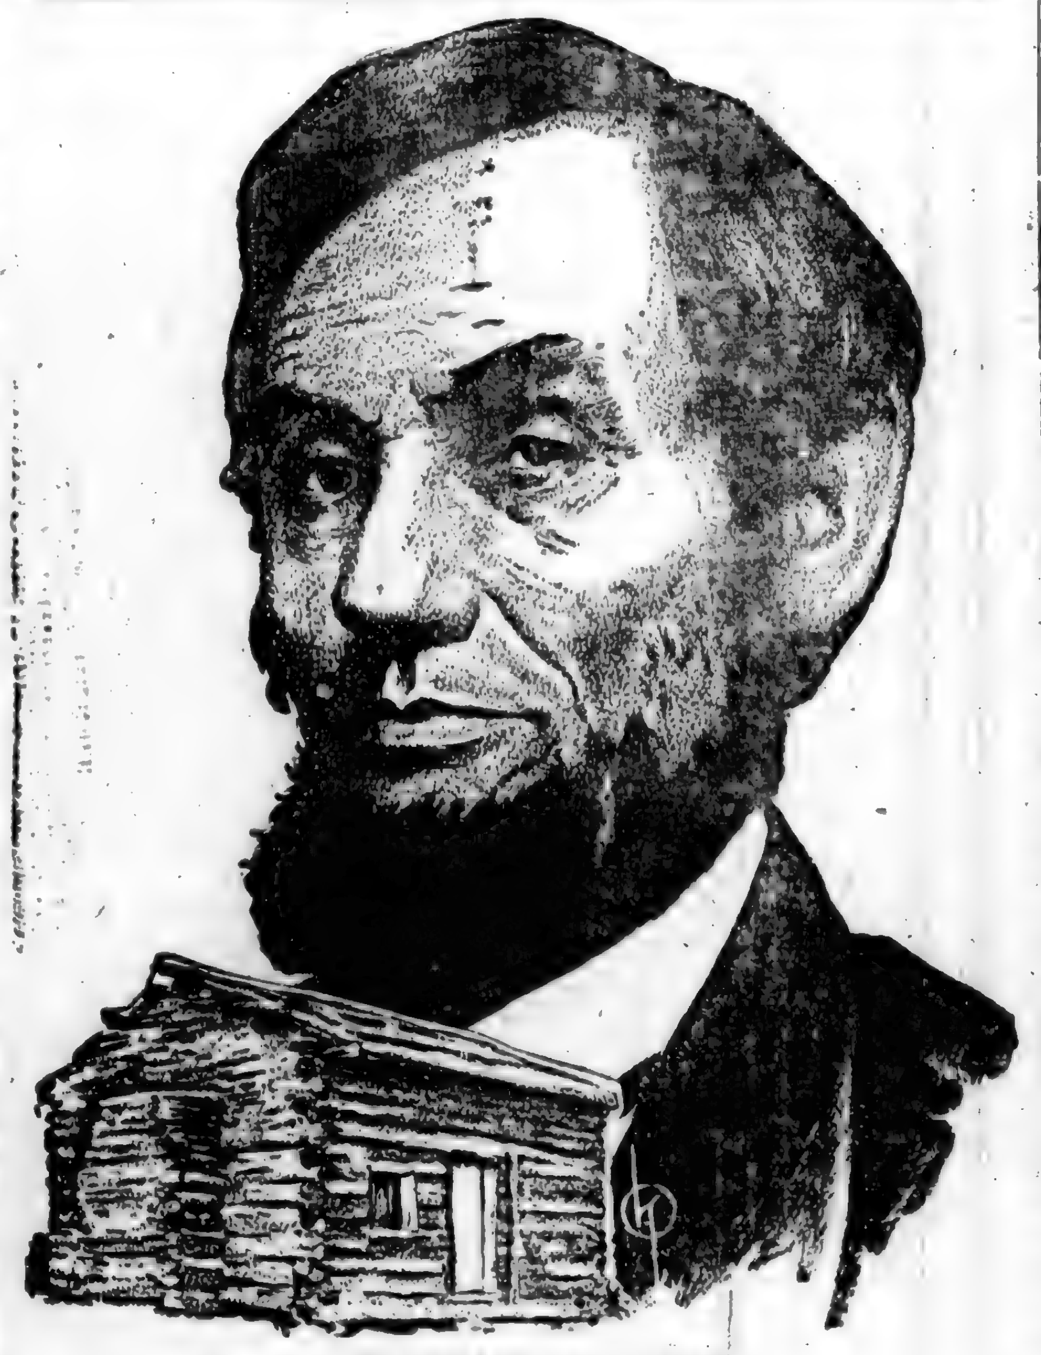
The Martyred Lincoln



ABRAHAM LINCOLN

It has not been four score years that this nation was given its famous Gettysburg Address. These words of a man lived imprinted in millions of schoolbooks and in billions of hearts from that memorable day when, in five minutes time, Lincoln spoke over the heads of an assembly down through the years to us today. If ever we are impressed it is now, for these words uttered at a shrine, were meant to guide us in governing ourselves both wisely and well, we the people who were to come and take the place of those gathered before him at this Gettysburg. Lincoln the Great, who saw with eyes of wisdom the perils in governing a people, who was guided in these momentous words in giving an all-time solace, a demand and a bequest, to these generations that were to follow. He it was, this raw-boned man from a Kentucky cabin and an Illinois prairie, who gave to America the summing up of an old claim for greatness in government, the power of freedom in citizenship. As Lincoln so nobly put it, "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

It is most fitting that the nation honors the birthday of this superb character who dreamed his dreams in a twelve-foot cabin and emerged a ruler of men whom he both understood and loved. We honor him by these words of Gettysburg, to consider and obey them, to live and respect them. Lincoln drew no applause from the audience, in fact, the newspapers of that day gave the prominent place to the speech of Edward Everett, the renowned orator who spoke at the same ceremony. Did Lincoln look over the heads of his audience into the heavens and eyes of future generations who would need his wise words? Was he cautioning and guiding us? Did he fail to make a great impression upon this Gettysburg group because he spoke to them indirectly? He of lowly birth, who had so sensitive a heart that when asked how he could stand anguish on so many sides, replied, "Die when I may, I want it said of me by those who know me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower when I thought a flower would grow." This is the wise man who stressed our liberty and equality. He who loved the simple and good life but who insisted with emphasis, "I go for all sharing the privilege of the government who assist in bearing its burdens."

RACCOON PROPAGATION IS POPULAR WITH HOOSIER CONSERVATIONISTS

A marked increase in the number of raccoon in Indiana, reported by trappers and fur-buyers, is attributed to the restocking program initiated by the Department of Conservation with the cooperation of more than a score of conservation clubs.

Artificial propagation of raccoon, started at the state game farms several years ago, has been expanded each year. In order to meet the demand for raccoon to be used in restocking areas where these fur-bearing animals were scarce, the cooperation of conservation clubs was enlisted a year ago.

During 1938 there were more than a score of these clubs engaged in the propagation of raccoon. The coon are liberated in suitable areas when they reach the age of 16 weeks or they may be held until they are 10 months old.

Contracts for raccoon propagation have been sent to a number of conservation clubs during the past few days by the Division of Fish and Game. Early returns indicate that a record number of clubs will participate in this program during the year, obtaining their own breeding stock. Both black and grey raccoon are being raised by the clubs and the state game farms.

In addition to propagating and liberating raccoon the clubs are building hundreds of dens to increase the protection for the animals which they liberate.

Raccoon form an important part of Indiana's annual fur crop in addition to furnishing sport for the thousands of Hoosier' coon chasers.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

Farmers of DeKalb County attending the Farm Management School to be held in the Court House assembly room in Auburn, starting at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, February 9, will learn how good farm management principles and practices can help them improve their income for 1939, and also in future years, County Agent C. E. Baker said today.

R. H. Bauman, Purdue Farm Management Specialist, will discuss, first, the General agricultural situation and how to take advantage of prospective conditions in 1939; second, The place of the Hog Enterprise in Farm organization; third, The place of the Dairy Enterprise in the Farm Organization; fourth, Adjusting the farm organization in line with modern machinery, followed by some practices which progressive farmers follow.

In addition to the talks scheduled for the extension specialist, he will have a discussion on some farm problems by local farmers.

The program will be concluded by a question box discussion.

All DeKalb County farmers who are interested in timely information that will help them improve their income are urged to attend. The school will start promptly at 10:00 A. M. and will be dismissed at 3:00 P. M. The farm management specialist will remain after three o'clock for farmers who may want to discuss their farm management or farm record problems individually.

DeKalb County farmers learned how to conserve soil at the Soil Conservation and Soil Management School which was held January 31, at the Court House in Auburn. Fifty-one were in attendance. G. H. Enfield and R. O. Cole, of Purdue, led the discussions on an adequate fertility program that will maintain crop yields through the use of limestone legumes and fertilizers and erosion and its control. The talks were illustrated with lantern slides.

The speakers emphasized the fact that one-third of DeKalb County land should be in a good legume all of the time.

According to Enfield manure is worth $3.15 per ton and crop residues are worth $4.00 per ton. He went on to say that it is necessary to apply 125 pounds of fertilizer per acre each year in order to maintain the fertility of cultivated land at a high level.

According to Cole proper land use is the first and most important step in soil conservation, which is to say that tree land should be in trees, pasture land in pasture, and crop land in crops. The speaker recommended farming across the slope, dividing a long slope up by means of strip cropping or terraces and the use of rotations that provide maximum cover and in some instances the use of special winter cover crops. County Agent C. E. Baker presided at this meeting. The County Soil Conservation assisted Mr. Baker in arranging for and conducting this school. The members of the committee are Arthur Lautzenhiser, Brooks Trenary, Forrest Harding and Orlo Deetz.

The state senate Friday passed a joint resolution requiring that every public official in the state of Indiana reveal to the legislature the name of every relative on the public payrolls. The vote was 38 to 2 and the measure must be concurred in by the house to become effective. The resolution was the result of a morning of wrangling by the house over a new anti-nepotism law to replace the one repealed by the 1937 session of the legislature so that Gov. M. Clifford Townsend's son, Max, could accept a state job. This must be one of those house cleaning measures.

ST. JOE WINS OVER SCOTT CENTER

The Cubs after a hectic battle defeated the Scott Center Reserves to the tune of 13 to 15, Friday night at the local gym.

The first quarter ended with the score 1 to 1. The first quarter was a defensive battle neither team was able to score from the field. At the half the score was 5 to 8 in favor of Scott Center, Scott Center having scored three baskets and one point on a foul while St. Joe scored two baskets.

Beginning the second half business began to pick up for the local Cubs. The score was 11 to 10 in favor of St. Joe at the end of the third quarter. In the fourth quarter Scott Center picked up three points while the locals scored four. In the last few seconds of the game the score was a tie 13 all. A most welcome basket by Franklyn Sechler clinched the game.

The regulares found some stiff opposition when they met Scott Center Friday evening. Each team found the new type ball adopted by the Indiana High School Athletic Association quite different from the old type used up until this year. The new ball is more resilient and having no seams is very hard to hold. This caused many fumbles and bad passes on both sides.

After quite a struggle in the first quarter the score was tied 5 to 5. In the second quarter Scott Center scored four baskets, two by Beard while St. Joe connected with three baskets from the field. Each team scoring a foul making the score at the half 12 to 14 in favor of Scott Center.

In the third quarter Scott Center again outscored St. Joe. The score St. Joe 16 and Scott Center 20. Eight minutes to go and four points behind.

Don Cook replaced Harter and immediately scored a basket. Thirty seconds later he intercepted another pass dribbled the length of the floor and scored another basket. This made it look more hopeful for the local boys. Ingledire scored a basket and Goodwin scored a basket the score was now 24 all.

Pugsley had replaced Rude and was giving Scott Center considerable trouble in getting set for long shots. Goodwin committed his fourth personal foul. And again the local boys were in difficulty. Rude replaced Goodwin and after a few minutes of play the regular playing period was over and the score was still 24 for Scott Center and 24 for St. Joe.

The boys were given a few minutes rest and were instructed that the first team scoring two points either by scoring two points from the foul line or a basket would win the game.

Scott retrieved the ball at the center jump and again attempted to score a long shot while the St. Joe boys were struggling in every department to get control of the ball. They finally succeeded in getting a held ball. Rude took possession of the ball at the tip dribbled to the foul circle executed a perfect one-handed shot and the game was over.

The local boys have that "never give up" spirit, fighting in both games and coming from behind in the last quarter won. Give them a hand they deserve it! Fighting against odds in every game this year they have never given up. Only averaging 120 pounds a piece they tackle the job with a will.

"Prepare to the limit for war—and at the same time take every possible legislative precaution against becoming involved in potential wars that are not directly our own concern." That, in a sentence, seems to be the attitude of Congress today.

The details of the Administration's long discussed armament program have at last come to light. The President has urged that with "as great speed as possible," a special appropriation of $552,000,000 be authorized and spent for the tools of war. Three hundred millions of this, according to plan, is to go for army airplanes; $110,000,000 is to go for anti-air craft guns, automatic rifles, field pieces, etc.; $8,000,000 for strengthening our seacoast defenses; $27,000,000 to increase the normal garrison in the Canal Zone; $44,000,000 for naval bases; $21,000,000 for navy airplanes, and $10,000,000 for training civilian air pilots, to build up a reserve of expert combat fliers in case of necessity.

During the 1940 fiscal year about a billion more will be spent for military expansion and maintenance, in addition to this "emergency" half-billion, making a total of about a billion and a half. That comes to a little more than $10 for every man, woman and child in America—a sum not so large as exaggerated early estimates indicated, but still the largest in our peace-time history.

The American people haven't had a chance to vote "aye" or "nay" on this program officially. But, unofficially, they have made their voices heard, and the chorus of approval has apparently drowned out the minority of dissenters. A late Institute of Public Opinion poll, for example, shows that the public is overwhelmingly back of the armament program; that the bulk of our citizens feel that Germany is democracy's worst enemy, and favor a boycott of all German goods, and that 46 per cent of those queried believe we will have to fight Germany again in their lifetimes.

In Congress, sentiment in favor of big-scale armament is similarly great. But there is also the feeling that any major arms race breeds great dangers which must be carefully guarded against. Almost all the countries, when they go into expanding their military establishments, do it on the grounds of "national defense." And then, very often, their peoples find themselves involved in wars of offense. A number of influential senators, fearing that our hatred of dictators may reach the hysterical stage, are planning legislation to prevent the imposition of sanctions against any country which does not directly menace us—and to strengthen, not weaken, the terms of the Neutrality Act.

At the same time, sentiment in Congress in favor of rigorous isolation, even from our World War allies, seems to be on the increase. France's continuous series of governmental crises has weakened faith in her ability to hold her place as a dominant European power. And the feeling seems to be growing that the Chamberlain government is adopting certain fascist tactics—such as control of press and radio, and the supression of anti-governmental expressions— which are not in accord with democratic principles.

Biggest debate over details of the armament program is liable to come in considering the proposal that Guam be made a first-class naval base. Some experts think this would be suicidal—Guam is an easy prey for Japan, and if we attempted to defend her, they think, defeat would be inevitable. These experts feel we can defend our mainland and the Hawaiian Islands—but that is as far as we can go.

There has been little change of importance in the business situation. Activity has continued at fairly high levels, and the seasonal decline has so far been moderate.

A long-term development of immense potential importance is the increasing interest certain industries are showing in the guaranteed annual income system for compensating their workers. In the past, this has been restricted to a very few concerns, most of them comparatively small in size. Now more and larger concerns are either toying with the idea, or making definite plans for adopting it. Among the latter is Armstrong Cork, which will experiment with it this year.

Guaranteed wage plans are all the same in principle, though they vary somewhat in detail. Some of them guarantee that the worker will be given so much work during the year and be paid so much for it, irrespective of the time it takes him. Others guarantee so many hours' employment during the year, at so much an hour. All of them, of course, attempt to mitigate the seasonal factor in employment.

It is an obvious fact that a high hourly or daily wage rate is of small benefit to the worker if he is out of a job for six months of the year. A lesser wage rate which he is certain to receive for 50 weeks out of each 52 is far more satisfactory to all concerned. The guaranteed annual wage has not made great progress yet in American industry, but it promises to be one of the major developments of the future.

TROUBLE IN THE NATIONAL GRANARY

The remodeled AAA is very badly involved, and this finds Secretary Wallace looking for new industrial uses for cotton, and still playing with a wheat export subsidy that would cost the Governmetn over 18 cents per bushel on exported wheat, "sold below cost" in the foreign markets. The Department of State disagrees with the export plan. The latter Department is more interested in lasting trade treaties with Europe than in temporary methods to dump a lot of wheat in foreign markets. The crops have been too large; crop control in Washington hasn't been well guessed, prices have gone screwy.

A good many of the experts and prophets are insisting that the Every Normal Granary plan has failed. But Secretary Wallace doesn't admit it. Whether he is right or wrong—there is a fighter for you.

REPUBLICANS DETERMINED TO REDUCE STATE EXPENSES

Republicans in the Indiana Legislature have established their record with reference to governmental spending by two drastic steps within the last week.

Facing the necessity of making a reduction ranging from $6,000,000 to $12,000,000 in state expenses to balance the budget, the Republican members proposed to cut salaries of the state employees from 4 to 21 per cent in all departments save the educational, penal and benevolent institutions.

Secondly, they introduced a resolution in the Indiana State Senate proposing that the next biennial budget be held to a maximum of 90 per cent of the last budget adopted by the state two years ago.

In other words, they voted to allow no department more than 90 per cent of its 1937 budget allowance but they left themselves free to make further and more drastic reductions if it seemed necessary to do so.

When the resolution was introduced in the Senate by State Senator William E. Jenner, Republican floor leader, it was attacked by Democratic members of the upper house as "playing politics." Later, however, in a conference of Republican and Democratic legislative leaders with Governor M. Clifford Townsend, the same Democratic leaders informed the state's chief executive that they intended to adopt the resolution.

The bill providing for the reduction in the salaries of state employees was referred to the House of Representatives Committee on Ways and Means and it is understood that it will be reported favorably and probably will be passed by the House, where the Republicans are in the majority. No one is willing to predict at this time just what disposition will be made of the bill in the Senate, where the Democrats are in the majority.

The discovery of the unbalanced condition of the state's budget, following reports last summer that the state's treasury surplus was in the vicinity of $24,000,000, left the legislators in a decidedly puzzled condition. To be told that the state has a surplus of $24,000,000 and then, only six months later, to be informed that the budget will be out of balance some $21,000,000 within the next two years, leaves some room for confusion.

Republican legislators say that one thing is certain: Balancing the budget in Indina is assuming as much importance in Indiana as in the nation.

H. H. Evans, Republican floor leader in the Indiana House of Representatives, made no secret of his disgust with the situation, and Arch N. Bobbitt, chairman of the Indiana Republican State Central Committee, stated flatly that the Republican party must fulfill its platform, which pledged tax reduction, by refusing to enact any new taxes.

Governor Townsend and some of his aides previously had suggested that a cigarette tax of 2 cents per package or an additional tax on whiskey might be enacted to relieve the strained condition of the budget. Republican members of the Legislature, however, indicated that they would not "go along" with the Governor on his new tax proposals.

Representative Evans indicated that the Republican members would consider favorably plans for consolidation of departments. One of his proposals provided for the abolition of the gross income tax division, transferring the duty of collecting the tax to the county treasurers.

CULTURE CLUB OBSERVES GUEST NIGHT

The Culture Club entertained husbands and friends on last Wednesday evening in their annual meeting known as guest night. This guest night has been a regular event during the thirty years of the club's existence.

The high school gymnasium was chosen for the meeting this year, becaues of the nature of the event requires more room than the average dwelling house affords and the large membership of the club.

There were about fifty present to enjoy the evening's entertainment. The welcome address was given by Mrs. Troas Carpenter and the response by H. G. Hursh. A two course dinner, supplmented by Earl William Kinsey at the piano, were the main big hits of the evening.

Games of all kinds, old fashioned minuet dances, gayette stunts were enjoyed, just to prove that people are just as young as they feel.

The club has two other special meetings on their calendar for this year's program.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Because automobile drivers in the country have been aroused to the need of safe driving, America reduced its automobile fatalities in 1938 by at least 7,500. Accurate figures are not yet available but the first 11 months of '38 showed that reduction.

All you readers have helped to establish this fine record. The saving of 7,500 lives proves that by concentrated effort a further reduction is possible in 1939.

That is your job. Safety is an individual problem. States, counties, and cities can inaugurate safety programs but actual application of safe driving is the responsibility of the man behind the wheel.

Safety is 99% common sense—accidents are 99% thoughtless hurry.

It's smart to drive carefully.

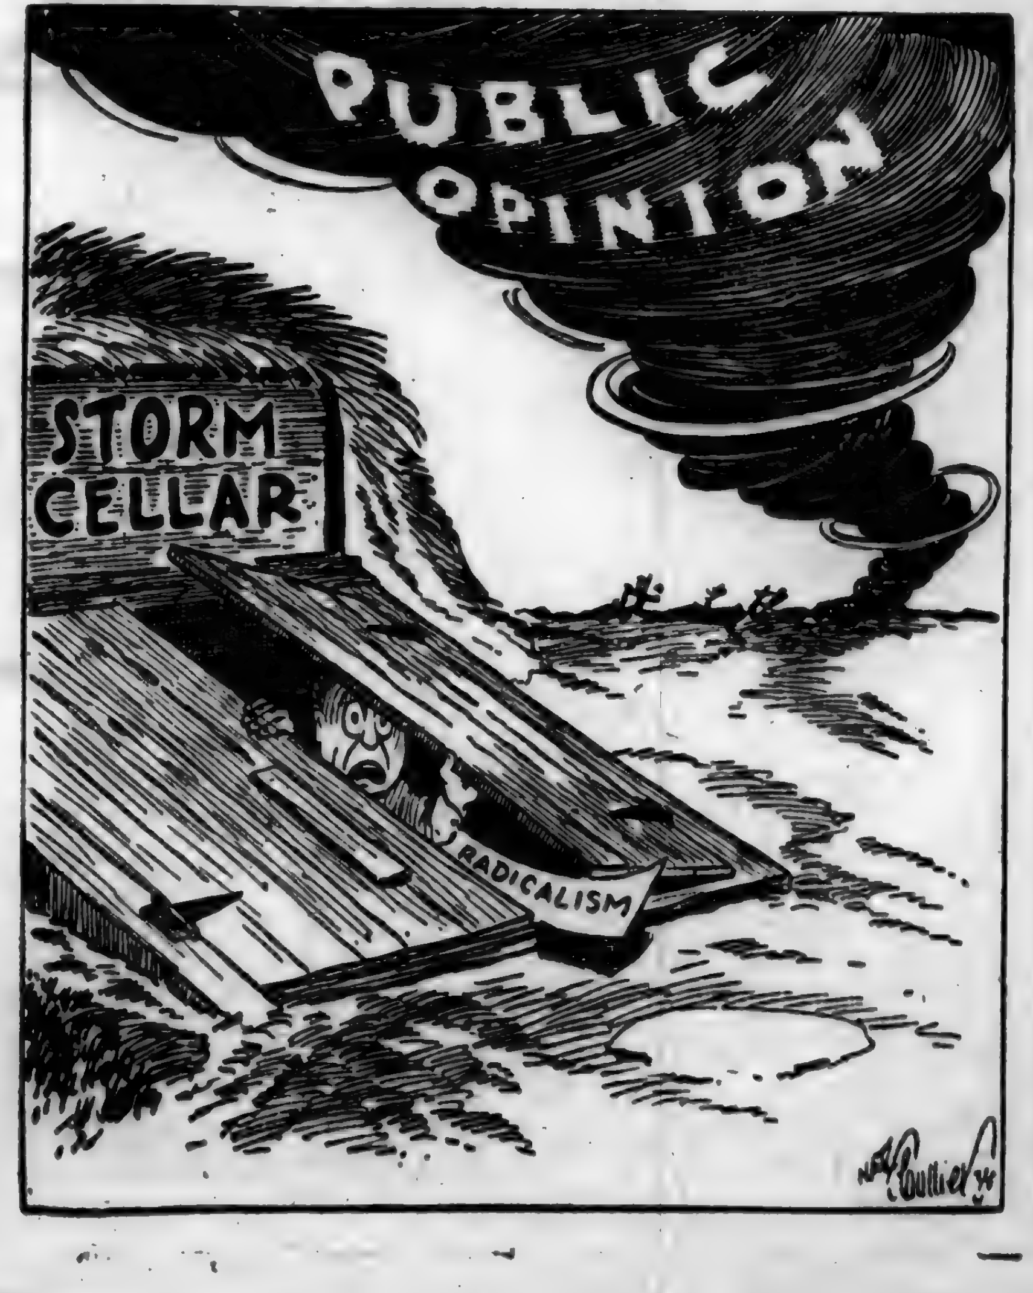
THE BIGGER BLOW



Love is surely a funny situation. Many a girl has given up a position which pays good wages to marry into one that doesn't pay any.

Mother isn't as upset about what her daughter knows as she is concerned about where her daughter learned it.

Being that America is the "land of opportunity" maybe that is the reason you hear an occasional citizen knocking it.

If you will stop to consider it, the fellow who insists that he is boss in his house, is a fellow who will lie about other things as well.

It suddenly dawns on us—and we'll pass the discovery along—that the weather is neither better, nor worse, than in the horse and buggy, or the Toonerville trolley age. But, you're right there's something wrong about it. It's the radio—whose news broadcasters, have for ten years started, ended—or both, with weather reports, until it can't rain without fear that it will end in a flood like Noah was caught out in; or snow without fear that the trains will be a day or two late. The weather is suffering from too much talk about it—so, we say no more!

A collection of opinions of Senators, party chairmen and leaders result, in effect, to an agreement that there are no serious dissensions among conservatives, radicals, and others in the Republican party. Says Senator Arthur Capper: "Dissensions in the Republican party today are not as much in evidence as in the late twenties." The observation of our Washington correspondent agrees with Senator Capper. He adds the comment: Maybe the Republican party is a better party, after its numerous "good lickings" in recent years.

PARAMOUNT ANNOUNCES ATTRACTIONS

One of the most impressive list of theater attractions in many years will start this week at the Paramount theater, Fort Wayne, with a special one-day appearance of Bob Crosby and his Dixieland band set for Thursday. Crosby, who has been booked into the Blackhawk restaurant, Chicago, for an indefinite period starting next Friday, will make his final theater appearance for many months at the Paramount. Featured with his band will be Marion Mann, the "sweet singer of swing," the Bob Cats, the All-American Swing Four, selected for Collier's magazine national swing parade. Crosby's booking here will be one of the outstanding theater attractions offered here this spring.

Jan Garber returns to the Paramount with an all-new show for four days starting next Friday and concluding Monday night. Garber, who scored sensationally in his appearance in Fort Wayne earlier this winter, is bringing an entirely new troupe of entertainers with him for his repeat appearance. With him will be Vicki Allen, a swing songstress, whom Garber claims is the equal of the sensational Patricia Norman, the hit of his last appearance here; Frederic and Yvonn, a top-notch dance team acclaimed for their outstanding adagio routines; the Three Ryans, a comedy hit, and the Romeros, one of the stage world's most startling novelty acts.

One of the outstanding "scoops" of the season will be the appearance of Paul Whiteman at the Paramount for three days starting Saturday, February 18. Whiteman is bringing Joan Edwards, his singing pianist; the Four Modernaires, Charlie Teagarden, Clark Dennis, Roy Bargy, the Swinging Strings, Al Gallodoro, "Goldie," and the "Sax-Soc-Tette"—in fact, his entire troupe, to Fort Wayne for his local engagement. In order to accommodate the thousands of persons expected to attend Whiteman's outstanding show, several performances will be added daily to the regular schedule.

Another outstanding show promised by the Paramount is the four-day appearance of Ted Weems and his band, with Perry Como, Red Ingle, Elmo Tanner, Patsy Parker, Country Washburn and Beverly Hemis, to be seen on the Paramount stage Friday through Monday, February 24, 25, 26, and 27.

All... I Owe to My Angel Mother

A LITTLE girl, reared in poverty in the backwoods of Virginia, destined for a brief and none too happy life, was to grow up and bear a child whose career more than fulfilled her highest dreams for him.

Born at Patterson's Creek, Va., in 1784, Nancy Hanks went at the age of twelve to live with her aunt and uncle, Thomas and Elizabeth Sparrow, in Mercer county, Virginia. She had a chance to attend school there, and made the most of it. In a community where many of the men could neither read nor write, she learned to do both, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News.

She was skilled at needlework, too, and hired out to families in the neighborhood. Though she worked for wages she was never regarded as a servant, but sat at table with the household, wherever she went. Report says she was tall and handsome, with a frank, open countenance and a voice pleasing both when she sang and when she talked.

A young apprentice named Thomas Lincoln was learning the trade of carpentry in the shop of Joseph Hanks, uncle of Nancy. The two young people were attracted to each other, and were married on June 12, 1806. Thomas took his bride home to a tiny house fourteen feet square.

He could not write his own name until the ambitious Nancy taught him how. But his ambition could not keep pace with hers. Her disappointment at his easy-going ways was forgotten in her children; first, a little girl, Sarah; then, in 1809, the son known to history as Abraham Lincoln.

Nancy Hanks, Mother of President Abraham Lincoln.

Between this child and this backwoods mother there was a powerful bond of sympathy. They understood each other without words. Perhaps she felt in him her own fierce hunger for learning, for a larger, richer world.

She was thirty-four years old, and Abraham Lincoln was nine, when she fell ill of an epidemic disease known in southern Indiana (to which the family had migrated) as the milk sickness. In seven days she was dead.

Abraham helped his father to make her coffin out of green lumber cut with a whipsaw, helped to bury her in a forest clearing. There was no ceremony. This troubled the boy until several months later, they secured a wandering preacher to deliver a funeral sermon over the lonely grave.

His mother's influence stayed with him always, and was voiced in that most famous of filial epitaphs: "All that I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

Economic Highlights...

The last trustworthy figures available at the time this is written show that the expected winter decline in industrial activity has begun in earnest. At the turn of the year, practically every expert forecast this, so in itself it is nothing to cause worry. It is believed that it will continue into March, and that a new upswing will set in then, which, by Fall, will take us to a point substantially better than the standard 1923-25 average. Security values have faithfully reflected the current downward trend, with values of most issues slowly sagging and turnover relatively small. Here again the expected has occurred—many financial advisory concerns advised their clients to sell the bulk of their holdings in the speculative field, as long ago as the first of the year.

It can, therefore, be argued that matters are going along in a more or less normal fashion, and that the picture as a whole, including prospective future as well as actual present developments, is a comparatively happy one. But, at the same time, there are a number of important "ifs" that cannot help but cloud the outlook. The experts write that business will get better this spring—if government spending produces the hoped-for result—if the consumers' goods industries find an expanding market—and, finally, if the heavy goods industries are able to continue their slow march up from the bottom.

It seems certain that government spending will be lavish, and this is of course a highly favorable short-term factor—even as, in the view of many, it is an unfavorable long-term factor, because of its unpleasant influence on taxes and public debt. The forecasters predict there seems to be no reason why purchasing of consumers' goods should not be at good levels for most of the year. But—and this is a very big "but," indeed—there are many reasons why the heavy goods industries may find the going tough.

The railroads, for example, are one of the biggest customers of these basic manufacturing industries. And a great deal must be done, and quickly, before the railroads will be in any position to spend money for expansion and betterment on a big scale. It is believed certain that Congress will tackle the railroad program this session, and some good groundwork has been laid—the President's special committee of six has made an exhaustive report which has met with wide approval, and contains many basic suggestions for legislative and regulartory changes. But, even if some such program is quickly enacted, it will take a considerable time before it can bear much economic fruit. It is, therefore, argued in some quarters that the government, through the RFC or some similar agency, must make loans to the lines for purposes of expansion and improvement, both in the interest of economic recovery and national defense. What happens here remains to be seen.

Equally important customers of the heavy industries are the light and power utilities. As everyone knows, without arguing the merits of the case, the utilities are bedeviled by government competition and political attack. There will be some utility expansion this year to care for the normal growth in demand. But, until the difference between the utilities and the Administration are settled, there can be no big-scale expansion of the kind that would really invigorate the heavy goods makers. We have heard for years that these differences are about to be settled, but nothing definite has happened. So here is still another place where a big "if" must be eliminated before anyone can honestly say that the sailing is clear.

Automobile sales have not come up to expectations. Some say this is due primarily to the used-car problem—others attribute it to the cautious attitude of a public which doesn't know what is going to happen tomorrow and is hanging onto its money. Whatever the reason, the failure of sales to reach forecasts greatly reduces the output of those vital, long-dormant heavy-goods industries.

To end this piece on a more optimistic note, it can be said that the outlook for construction, especially in the residential field, is bright. And this is a real help to the heavy-goods manufacturers. The urge to build homes is widespread—and the long-term, low-interest loans available now are enabling hundreds of thousands of families to turn their hopes into action.

No discussion of business prospects and actualities, even so brief a one as the foregoing, would be complete without mentioning the current European situation.

The talk goes around, some of it from high quarters, that the Italian-French differences are an open powder keg. What seems to be a virtual Fascist victory in Spain is also fraught with explosive dangers to our troubled peace. And this, obviously, has an extremely dampening effect on investment and, as a result, on industry and spending.

One good sign: Most of the experts feel that there is more smoke than fire abroad and that 1939 will not witness a general war.

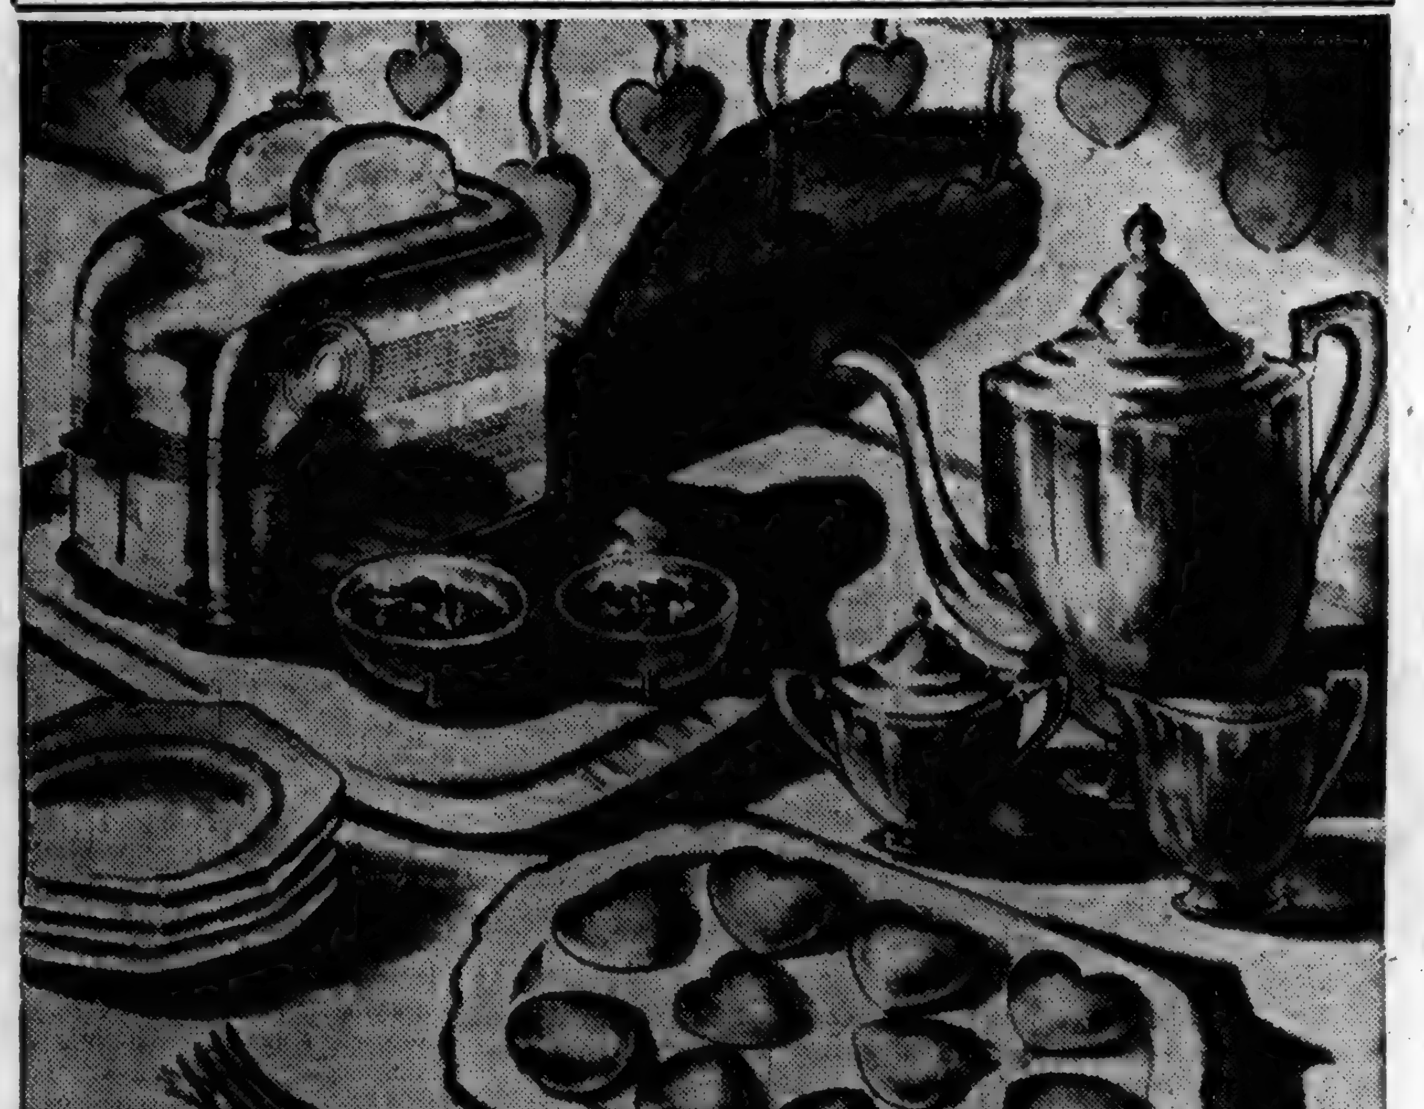
St. Valentine's Day Was Once Roman Festival



In the above picture, the well known artist, Virginie Fowler, has drawn her conception of a modern St. Valentine's Day table—a modern harmonious touch being the toast and jam set. As decorations, cut out hearts are hung on red ribbons attached to the molding. The bowls of the toast and jam set contain red currant jam, and the platter cream cheese hearts.

St. Valentine's Day—the day of lovers—comes to us almost unchanged from the Feasts of Lupercalia, held in honor of Pan and Juno, mythological dieties of ancient Rome. The day was celebrated, then as now, by a sort of love lottery, young men drawing the names of the maidens who then became their chosen ones, to be given presents and honored and feted during the period of the Feasts.

Later, in Christian times, both men and maidens wrote their names on slips of paper, to be drawn by those of the opposite sex. As a result, each man and maiden present had two valentines—the one he drew and the one by whom he was drawn.

In England, from early Christian times until the end of the Eighteenth Century, the drawings were supposed to have an almost magical significance, and the association formed between man and maid on St. Valentine's Day, frequently ripened into love and marriage. So strong was the faith in the Day's inspiration that at one time in England, the first unmarried person of the opposite sex met on St. Valentine's Day was supposed to be the destined loved one. And young men and girls would place themselves in the path of the one they desired and resolutely keep their eyes closed until they were sure that upon opening them, they would see first the one they loved. Feasting and merry making have always followed the drawing of valentines throughout the long history of the Lover's Day.

Jocular valentines, sent anonymously, were unknown until very recent times. Instead, valentine greetings were confined, as Chambers quaintly says in his Book of Days, to "a courteous letter of attachment from some young man to some young maiden."

St. Valentine himself, a Christian priest and martyr of the third century, seems to have had little or nothing to do with the day named after him. In fact, the early church did everything in its power to discourage all festivities based upon pagan feasts—at one time it even went to the length of substituting saints' names for those of girls in the valentine drawings. But the church's opposition was of no avail; the Lover's Day was too dear to the hearts of the common people.

Chaucer, Shakespeare and Drayton alluded to St. Valentine's Day, and one of the earliest writers of valentines was Charles, the French Duke of Orleans who was captured by the English at the battle of Agincourt. Samuel Pepys in his famous Diary written in the reign of Charles II, talks much of St. Valentine's Day, mentioning particularly the beautiful Miss Stuart, later the Duchess of Richmond, who at one time, having drawn the Duke of York as her valentine, received as her present from him a jewel valued at $4,000.00 and, at another, drawing Lord Mandeville, was presented with a ring valued at $1,500.00.

Many other ancient festivals have disappeared or have been distorted out of all resemblance to their originals. But St. Valentine's Day, the day of lovers, remains almost unchanged.

Lincoln as the Loneliest Man

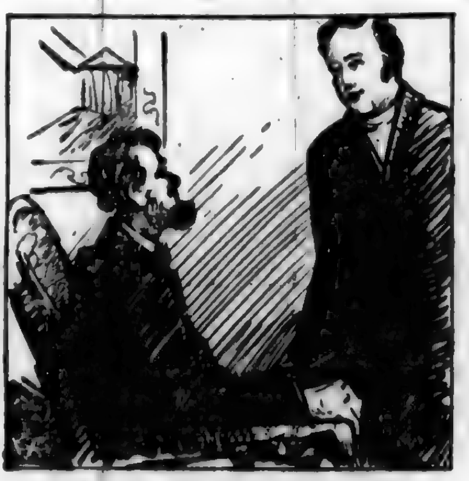
"I AM the loneliest man in America." These words dropped from the lips of Abraham Lincoln one evening in 1863, that period which was so dark and unpromising for the cause of the Union.

In March, 1863, writes W. H. Smith in the Washington Post, I heard the incident related to a small group of distinguished men by Bishop Ames of the Methodist church. I do not know if it has ever appeared in print, but if it has, it is worth retelling. The narration took place in the National Hotel, in Washington, in a suite of rooms then occupied by John Evans, territorial governor of Colorado, and father of Evanston, Chicago's beautiful suburb. My presence is accounted for by the fact that Governor Evans was a relative and I had called to pay my respects.

In the group were two or three Methodist bishops, a member of the senate and two of the house. I am sure no one who heard it related ever forgot it, or the impressive manner of the bishop. President Lincoln and the bishop were warm personal friends, and the President had employed the bishop on some delicate mission connected with the war. The bishop said that one evening in June, 1863, he went to the White House to call on the President. The President was in a very despondent mood. Hooker had just suffered his defeat at Chancellorsville. The conversation lasted until a late hour of the night.

The President reviewed the situation at length. The war had been going on for two years, and the North had made little material progress. The bishop asked if he despaired of a final victory. His response was made with great earnestness:

"No. I dare not despair when I know there is a God who controls the affairs of nations as He does those of individuals, but the thought of the thousands who must yet be slain is appalling."

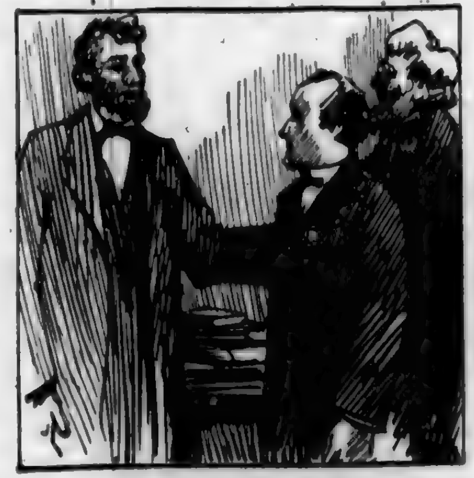


"I Dare Not Despair When I Know There Is a God."

It was then he uttered the words with which this article begins. He said: "I am the loneliest man in America. There is no one to whom I can go and unload my troubles, assured of sympathy and help."

He spoke of the quibbling, complaining and fault finding in congress, and the harsh and unjust criticisms heaped upon him. He spoke with extreme heat of what he termed "that meddlesome body," the committee on the conduct of war.

The President rapidly reviewed Grant's record since he joined the army. He was at Cairo with a small force. He urgently asked permission to move, saying he would win a victory. The consent was long delayed, but it came at last. Within two or three hours his men were on the steamers, and the brilliant victory of Belmont followed.



"Grant," He Said, "Fights, and That Is What I Want."

It was not a great victory, for the forces engaged were not large, but it was a beginning and showed the mettle of Grant.

Back to Cairo, with a larger force he again and again urged for permission to move, and when the permission came he rushed his men to the steamers, and three days later he captured Fort Henry. Not delaying an hour he pushed his small force across the country to Fort Donelson. He was not dismayed by the fact that the force in the fort was larger than his own, but immediately locked the doors on that force. When the rest of his men reached him, by a series of brilliant assaults, he captured, not alone the fort, but an army almost equal in number to his own.

At Shiloh, unlike any other general, he remained to fight after his disaster on the first day, he made no effort to get the remains of his army across the river, but at daylight the next morning became the attacking party, winning a victory. He was now at Vicksburg, and complaints of his delay were many. Only that day two senators had urged Lincoln to displace Grant, but he would not do it. "Grant," he said, "fights, and that is what I want." He said Grant had promised him he would capture Vicksburg by the fourth of July, and he intended to give him the opportunity.

The President, with deep earnestness, then declared: "When he captures Vicksburg, I will find some way to boost him over the heads of all others, and give him command of all the armies. With Grant in command, by Jinks!" (his favorite expletive) "the armies will move and move to some purpose. He fights."

Merchants B. B. Team

FRIDAY NIGHT

The St. Joe Merchants defeated the City Light basket ball team of Fort Wayne last Friday night by a score of 53-51. The Merchants haven't been beaten on their home floor this year and in their string of ten victories have compiled a total of 490 points to 337 points for their opponents, an average of 49 to 33 7-10 per game.

St. Joe started strong holding a lead of 14 to 9 at the end of the first quarter. At half time they still led 26-25. At the ¾ mark City Light were ahead 42-40 and ran the score to 48-42, then the boys got their stride again and tied the game at 50 all with 1½ minutes to play. A free throw for each team and a field goal for St. Joe in the final minute of play added to the excitement and also to the win column of the Merchants.

Paced by Storer and Monroe, who scored 19 and 17 points, respectively, the Merchants displayed a brand of ball we all like to see.

Irons was high for the losers with 18 points.

Saturday Night

The Merchants traveled to Zanesville last Saturday night to play the fast Zanesville Shellane team and were defeated by a score of 21-50.

The reader will realize as did the spectators that this score is not a true picture of strength of the two teams. The facts are a strong, fast team against a strong, fast team, plus a referee. The umpire is not a factor as he only blew his whistle once and that was to see if it would work.

The writer does not want to under state the worth of the Shellane Five but merely to show the inefficiency of or the over efficiency of the officials.

The minimum age of employes in alcoholic beverage establishments would be 21 years under the provisions of a new bill in the Indiana legislature. The proposed law would also prohibit persons under 21 years old in such establishments. Licenses would be revoked upon violation.

It looks like plans will go through for a cattle show, which will include Steuben, LaGrange, Noble, Whitley, Huntington, Allen, Adams and Wells Counties, to be staged at the same time as the DeKalb County Fair. County agents and representatives of breeders of various types of cattle from other counties will hold a meeting soon in Auburn for further discussion.

Commitments for insured mortgage loans under Title 11 of the National Housing Act reached a new high in DeKalb County during 1938, R. Earl Peters, Indiana Director of the Federal Housing Administration, said today. The total for DeKalb reached $44,100 from 18 borrowers at the close of business December 31, 1938 divided as follows: new construction $10,300, and loans on existing construction $33,800.

In the divorce suit of Grace Koch against Joe Koch, an agreement was reached in the DeKalb Circuit Court Friday by which the custody of the child, Jimmy, aged five years, was given to the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koch, of St. Joe, until further order of the court. The defendant is to pay his wife $2 a week for support pending the trial of the cause and also $35 to apply on her counsel fees.

The Auburn fire department answered a call Thursday night at 8:45 at the home of William Quance of 403 Ensley Avenue, caused by a shorted electric wire. Mr. and Mrs. Quance were in Fort Wayne attending the Boy Scout council meeting there at the time. Raymond, who was at home to look after the family had the presence of mind to pull the switch before turning in an alarm, thus the damage was light, burning the insulation from about eight feet of wiring.

Charles Dickerhoff, of Stafford Township, DeKalb County, has filed a complaint for $10,000 damages in Allen Circuit Court at Fort Wayne against Luella Stuckey. The plaintiff says he was riding in an automobile driven by his son, David, last September 25, when the car was struck by a machine driven by the defendant at an intersection southeast of St. Joe. It is alleged the defendant was driving sixty miles an hour. The Dickerhoff machine over-turned in a ditch and the plaintiff says he suffered fractures of the jaw and three ribs and cuts and bruises of his head and face.

Forty DeKalb County farmers attended the Gold Medal Colt Club tour conducted Friday by P. T. Brown, animal husbandry specialist from Purdue University, and County Agent C. E. Baker. The group inspected each of the thirteen colts throughout the county that are nominated for membership to the club and for showing at the 1939 DeKalb County Free Fall Fall. Those colts which are to be shown at the Fair must make a gain of 650 pounds within a year's time in order to qualify. With a total of thirteen nominated for 1939, it is hoped that a much better showing can be made in this department over the 1938 event, in which only three fulfilled requirements.

A birthday dinner was held on Sunday, February 5th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Jennings, north of St. Joe, in honor of their grandson, Jerry Gaff's birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. O. HORSE SENSE

Have you thought about your baby chicks for this year? Remember chicks should be from flocks that have been bred for high egg production and tested for pullorum disease.

Indiana farmers prefer to buy good seed. The Indiana state seed tag helps them to do this.

Heating or fire fanging of manure results in the loss of much nitrogen in the form of ammonia. Nitrogen is the most valuable fertilizing constituent of manure.

Why don't "They" make stocking-darners like a medium sized rubber ball instead of from a hard polished wood? A task not so pleasant in itself would be much easier, for as the rubber gives, the needle moves in and out much easier, thus making evener stitches much more easily.

Woods improvement cuttings will provide fence posts and fuel.

Cows infected with mastitis should be milked last, to prevent the spread of this disease. In the early stage, milking the infected quarter or quarters five to ten times daily is an important treatment.

Don't overlook the "living side" as you go along. It is easy to forget what the whole game is about.

Winter plowing of garlic infested fields will do much to eradicate the ill smelling pest.

LOCAL BOY VISITS OUR STATE HOUSE

Frank Curie, Jr., a sophomore, represented the St. Joe High School and the Ladies Literary Club with a trip to the State House last Thursday. This trip was made possible through the county chairman of "American Citizenship," Mrs. Frank Weathers, of Auburn, and was sponsored by the Federated Clubs.

American Citizenship is one of the club projects for the year. The group consisted of one representative from the Auburnn, Garrett, Waterloo and St. Joe Schools. Mr. Ford from Auburn took them to Indianapolis, leaving Auburn at 5 A. M. Thursday and returning at 8 P. M.

They were conducted through the State House, had a personal interview with the Governor in his office and also with Sen. Brandon and Rep. Harry Shull.

One of the most interesting and beneficial things of the day was being in the legislature and seeing a bill passed which took some time and required so many different moves to get it through. The youngsters are very grateful for the opportunity and it was a trip to be always remembered, not only for the sights but the knowledge gained.

Economic Highlights...

In theory, meetings of the Senate military affairs committee are usually supposed to be strictly secret. In practice, information about what goes on at the conclaves usually starts leaking out immediately after they are over. Senators are only human—and, like anyone else with important special knowledge in their minds, they have a hard time keeping it to themselves.

The recent meeting between the President and this committee at the White House was supposed to be even more secret than most. Even the stenographers were excluded. But, as usual, the leaks were much in evidence. The next day an account was widely published to the effect that the President had stated in conversation that America's frontier was in France, and that this explained the U. S. government's willingness to have the French buy big quantities of war planes here. Still another account stated that the President had gone farther yet, and said that our frontier was the Rhine River.

Two days later the Chief Executive branded these reports as "a deliberate lie," and added that a move was on foot, supported by some congressmen and newspapers, to misrepresent and discredit him. But whatever the truth of the matter, the episode served to unloose a veritable torrent of oratory in the always-talkative Congress—and served as well to bring into sharp focus the fundamental differences that exist over our foreign policy.

We are embarking on the largest armament program in our peace-time history. And when a country builds a war machine, it involves far more than merely appropriating the money, increasing the personnel of our fighting forces, and placing the orders with the arms and munitions makers. It involves the gravest question of policy. It involves our entire attitude toard the relations with the other nations in the world. And thus very directly involves every person in the country.

We have apparently reached the time when our foreign policy must be definitely fixed and established in one or another. And this is going to be a simple matter. For the Congress seems to be bitterly divided over what our policy should be. And it is not in any sense a partisan division—politics plays little or no part in it.

On the one hand are those who believe sincerely that in a sense we are our brother's keeper—that, as the only great democracy immune from immediate attack by a powerful totalitarian state, it is up to us to throw the weight of our influence and resources behind the menaced democracies. These men see the world as a great battleground in which an undeclared war without quarter is taking place between fascism and democarcy. The cause of democracy in Europe, they reason, will soon be lost unless helped by the New World democracy. And if that happens, they argue, we will be next in line for fascist aggression. So, they conclude, the thing to do is to help the Old World democracies stave off fascism before it is too late.

The other school believes with equal sincerity in rigorous isolation. That means a policy of treating all countries, democratic or totalitarian, with equal consideration. They feel we must build up and adequate defensive military machine, and keep our resources for our own use. They favor strengthening, not weakening, our neutrality policy. It is not our business, they argue, to pull any country's fat out of the fire. And, they conclude, if we insist on aiding the other democracies with moral suasion and giving them access to our factories and resources, it will eventually mean that we will have to aid them with our army and navy. President Wilson's refusal to be neutral, they think, and his obvious bias toward the allies, was responsible for bringing us unnecessarily into the World War.

This illustrates the two major extremes of thought. There are, of course, many more moderate groups, which favor a modified neutrality—or a modified internationalism.

No one can answer now the question of which side will win. Mr. Roosevelt, it is believed, feels that neutrality must be somewhat relaxed. On the other hand, there is a strong and determined group in Congress, led by Senator Borah, which is determined to resist to the end, any Administration effort to actively aid the European democracies. At this writing, it looks like a stalemate is in prospect over foreign policy.

The business picture is changing but little. The anticipated downswing remains in evidence, and is characterized by serious losses in security values.

One good sign is sustained strength in commodity prices. They have declined—but to nowhere near the same extent as stock prices. And there seems to be no danger of a big break in this field.

The inventory situation is also favorable. The economists are resting on their oars now, confident that Spring will bring the much-advertised upturn.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD CASTING WIZARD AT SPORTS SHOW

Tiny Larry Long of Indianapolis at the age of four has entered the big league of Sportsmen's Shows. He made his first appearance at the Boston Show starting February 4, after which he appears at the National Show in New York and then he will face the home town folks at Indianapolis when the Indiana Show opens at the State Fair Grounds on Saturday, March 4.

Larry is the grandson of Ollie Baus, well-known throughout the state as Huntin' and Fishin' editor of the Indianapolis Star. Ollie is Larry's instructor. At the Indiana Show young Larry will perform alongside those two sparkling casters, Curley Moulton and Doc Wellman, whose bow and arrow and 'dipsy doodle' and other plain and fancy casts made a hit with Indiana fishermen at last year's show.

ST. JOE HATCHERY TO START BUSINESS SATURDAY

R. A. Gerig, owner of Auburn and Grabill Hatcheries, will open a hatchery in St. Joe, with his brother, Dennis D. Gerig as the operator and manager.

A room 17x37 is being partitioned off in the St. Joe Garage building, ready for the arrival of the new all-electric Petersime Incubator, which has a capacity of 15,000 eggs, the arrival of which is expected Friday or Saturday of this week.

By next week the machine will be loaded with eggs and the new business enterprise for St. Joe will be started.

Success is assured the hatchery before it opens for business, because of the success of the owner at present with his two plants in operation, and the years of experience in this business, also is a further guarantee of success.

Five of the leading breeds of baby chicks will be carried, and customers may rest assured of the best there is obtainable in baby chicks. A stock of feeds and supplies of the very best quality, all having been tried and tested by Gerig's for 26 years, and this again is of value to their St. Joe patrons.

Last year this same company shipped baby chicks into 43 states and with the addition of the St. Joe hatchery their capacity will be increased to one-third million chicks for 1939.

The News welcomes this new enterprise to St. Joe Valley community, and we feel that they will be accorded their full share of the baby chick business. Call at the hatchery next week when in town, talk over your needs for this spring in the way of chicks, and they will be glad to place your order for future delivery.

Remember St. Joe Valley chicks are best.

You may hear something about the Townsend plan that will help you. The bill is now in the Ways and Means Committee and we think will be out for a vote before this meeting next Sunday, so be sure and come. C. F. Kinsey.

MYTHICAL 49th STATE PLANNED FAIR GROUNDS AGAIN PICKED AS SCENE OF LEGION'S YOUTH ACTIVITY

Dates for the third annual Hoosier Boy's State were set for June 17 to 24 at a national conference of Legion leaders held in Indianapolis.

It will be held at the State Fair Grounds in the state capital again this year. This year the boys will be of the 16 to 18-year group. Approximately 600 are expected to attend the training school in American government.

John Mueller, teacher at Arsenal Technical high school, Indianapolis, will be director of the 1939 Boys' State. George Huish, of East Chicago, will be assistant camp director Howard Meyer, of Indianapolis, will be Dean of Counselors.

Homer L. Chaillaux, National Americanism director, told those attending the Boys' State conference that approximately 25 states will engage in the splendid activity this year. More than 15,000 boys will be enrolled nationally.

Legionnaire Huish, East Chicago publisher, showed moving pictures of the Boys' State last year.

Legion Posts are urged to consider sending boys from their community and getting other organizations to enroll boys in the Hoosier Boy's State. Early action is needed.

Soldier's Graves Should Be Properly Marked

The Government will issue, through the Quartermaster Department, upon application, headstones to be placed at the unmarked grave of any soldier whose last service in the military or naval forces of the United States or Confederate States Army was honorable, that is, if his service was terminated either with an Honorable Discharge or died in the service of his Country.

An unmarked grave is defined as one where the head stone is not inscribed with the rank, (if above a Private) and the organization in which the soldier served.

All markers are made of American white marble. The stones for Civil War Veterans, (April 15, 1861—August 20, 1865) and Spanish-American War, (April 21, 1898—April 11, 1899) are 39 inches long, 12 inches wide, and 4 inches thick. The top is slightly rounded, with inscription which consists of name, rank, (if above a Private) and organization, all cut within a sunken shield. The date of death is not inscribed on this stone. "Sp. Am. War" is added to indicate service in that War.

The markers for all veterans, except those of the Civil War and Spanish-American Wars are 42 inches long, 13 inches wide, and 4 inches thick. Within a small circle above the inscription, will be cut either a Latin cross for Christians or a Star of David for Hebrews, or no emblem, as elected.

The inscription will consist of the full name of the soldier, the State from which he came, his rank, regiment, division, and date of death.

The marker for veterans of the Confederate States Army is 39 inches long, 12 inches wide and 4 inches thick. The top is slightly pointed, inscribed with the name, rank (if above a Private) and organization, followed by the letters C. S. A. The date of death is not inscribed on this stone.

A flat marker 24 inches long, 12 inches wide, and 4 inches thick, to be placed flush with the ground is furnished for placing in cemeteries which do not permit the erection of upright markers.

Additional inscriptions, such as name of the Company, Troop or Battery in which the veteran served may be cut on the markers at private expense.

The proper marking of soldiers' graves is but one of the worth while projects being sponsored by Post 283 of the Legion. Five headstones have been ordered to date, while the records of the Graves Registration chairman show five markers needed in Riverside Cemetery, one in Alton, twelve in Evergreen at Newville, and three in Riverview at Newville, making a total of twenty-one.

Information needed on application blanks is as follows: Enlistment dates, Discharge dates, Pension number (if any,) Name, Rank, Company, U. S. Regiment, State organization, or Vessel Date of death, Name of Cemetery and location and if a World War veteran, the Division, State, and Emblem, whether Christian, Hebrew, or none.

Relatives or friends of deceased soldiers, who desire headstonets to be erected, may make application thru the Post Adjutant, Elmer C. Dean, of Harlan, or the Graves Registration chairman, Charles Bassett, of St. Joe.

If the relatives or friends so desire, the Post wil see that the markers are erected at the grave upon arrival.

Some drivers feel that their ability to get out of a tight spot is a demonstration of skill. They drive recklessly, heedless of traffic rules, feeling secure in the knowledge that they know how to handle a car.

A driver may get a thrill from getting out of a tight spot by quick and expert handling of his car, but he should not boast about it or get "cocky," because a good driver rarely gets into a tight spot. He is always careful on the approach to intersections, schools, crossroads, and other places where there is a possibility of his meeting other drivers.

The anticipation of an accident at these spots is the practice of all good drivers.

It's smart to drive carefully.

Ray Cobler, of west of Concord, is nursing a very sore right hand, as a result of being cut while he and his father were splitting posts. As Mr. Cobler was cutting away the slivers, Ray pushed a wooden wedge into an opening of the stick and was cut full length of his right hand. This happened five weeks ago and it will be many more weeks before he will be able to use the hand.

A bill to remove all closed seasons on fishing in 16 northeastern Indiana lakes as an experiment to determine whether fish propagation would be affected, Friday came before the state senate after being passed by the house, 68 to 17. Sponsored by Rep. Hobart Creighton, R., Warsaw, the bill provides that fishing will be prohibited in the lakes only over spawning grounds and at night. The lakes are located in Kosciusko, Marshall, Noble, Steuben and Whitley Counties. Creighton told the house the experiment had been requested by conservation clubs in the area. Rep. Robert Hoover, D., Elkhart, attacked the bill, however, with the contention it was backed by cottage owners, boatmen and baitmen who wished to have a year-around business. He asserted it was opposed by the state conservation commission.

(Opinions expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the attitude of the publisher or editor of this newspaper. —Editor's Note.)

One of the major items of gossip around the Indiana State Capitol these days—while the Indiana General Assembly is in session—is the distinct lack of cooperation that the Republican members of the lower House are receiving from Governor M. Clifford Townsend.

For instance, about ten days ago a resolution was introduced in the House asking for a complete list of all state employees, their duties and the salaries paid to them. The Governor was requested to hand over this information to the House within five days. It is understood that it would not be difficult for him to accomplish this as, according to reports, he has a complete list in a card file.

But, thus far, no such list has been forthcoming. The Republican members of the House are inclined to be pretty angry about it. They think that it is the Governor's way of showing his contempt for the Legislature.

As a matter of fact, the Governor's experience in the Indiana State Capitol would not lead him to have much respect for Legislators. He served as Lieutenant Governor during the administration of former Governor Paul V. McNutt, who now is High Commissioner of the Philippines. Throughout that administration, the Democratic legislators did exactly as they were told by the Governor. They jumped through the hoop whenever he cracked the hoops were on fire, at that.

Then when Mr. Townsend became Governor in his own right, Legislators behaved in much the same manner. Although Townsend never had as complete control over the Indiana General Assembly as did McNutt, during the first session in which Townsend, the Legislators did pretty closely what they were told to do.

Therefore, Governor Townsend is facing a situation with which he is entirely unfamiliar. He is not used to having Legislators who don't regard his word as being the law of the land. But he has a lesson to learn. The Republican members of the Indiana House are going to have that list of state employees—or there is going to be trouble about it.

James M. Tucker, the first Republican to become Secretary of State for many years, did something last week that was rather interesting. Included in the property of the Secretary of State's office, he received a large, expensive, 1937 model airflow Chrysler sedan.

Now, Jim Tucker is a rather conservative young man. He always drives a small car himself. And he didn't know just what to do with that big boat. In addition, he did not see why a state official, whose office is in Indianapolis, needed an automobile to transact the business of the State. It was understood, of course, that most of the employees, who used state-owned passenger automobiles drive them to and from their homes. But Jim didn't go along with that. He wrote a letter to Anderson Ketchum, budget director, and told him that he didn't want the darned thing and asked what he should do with it.

Ketchum hasn't replied to the letter as yet. It probably shocked him so to have a state official refuse to use a state-owned automobile that he hasn't recovered sufficiently to answer the letter. It shocked a lot of other people, too. And Secretary of State Tucker has been receiving quite a number of telephone calls concerning it. Incidentally, there was no criticism. The Democratic employees of the state couldn't criticise—and nobody else wanted to criticise.

Tucker's action certainly established a new precedent—one, at least since 1933.

By ANN SUPPLE MURPHY

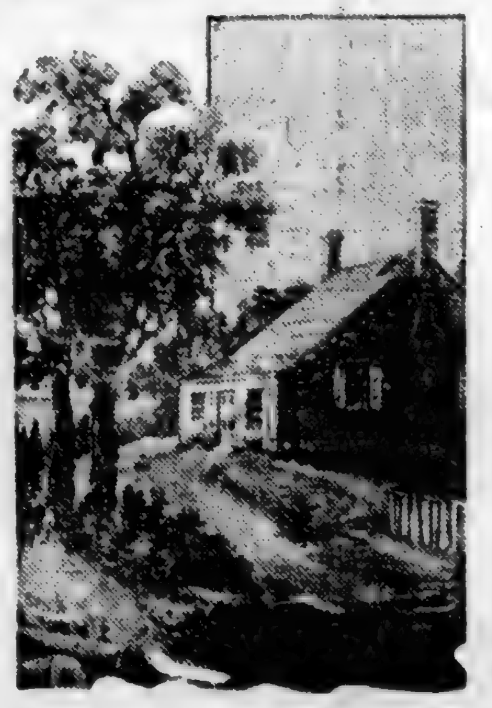
ALERT, self-poised;
 A master brain
Placed in the wilderness to lead;
To give men strength;
To destroy the power
Of grasping kings, of petty hirelings.
"A cloud by day,
A pillar of fire by night."
Of old, Moses was led
By faith through the surging seas
Walled by the will of God.
So the waters of man's covetousness
Rolled back.
Our forefathers,
Like the children of Israel,
In faith and trust
Followed their leader
To freedom.

Immortal Washington!
Today the nation
Of thy upbuilding
Still follows in thy footsteps
While the world stands at salute.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE



WASHINGTON was born in a house facing Popes creek, in Westmoreland county, Virginia, but the house burned on December 25, 1780. The old homesite has been included in the George Washington Birthplace National monument, and the house restored between 1930 and 1932 on its original site.

The old family burial ground, containing the bodies of Washington's father, grandfather and great-grandfather, is included on the 400-acre reservation. The George Washington Birthplace National Monument is 90 miles from Washington on United States route 1 and Virginia State route 3.

The Washington family first settled at Wakefield in 1665, a full century before the Revolution. Col. John Washington, great-grandfather of the President, had come to Westmoreland, Va., in 1656. He died and was buried there in 1676. Maj. Lawrence Washington and Maj. John Washington, his sons, succeeded him.

After their marriages the family lived on separate parts of the Wakefield estate until the house in which George Washington was born burned. After that the Washingtons continued in other houses on the same land, and descendants still live on part of the same Wakefield estate—a continuous possession, in whole or in part, for 264 years—eight generations.

"MY LITTLE GIRL IS IN YOUR HANDS," FATHER STATES

Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Florida, read in the United States Senate the following editorial written and published by the editor of the Eufaula, (Ala.) Tribune.

Everyone who drives an automobile should read it.

"Today my daughter, who is seven years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is Coot, sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved good-by and started off to the hall of learning.

"Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, the girl with yellow curls, and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the trees in the school yard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; and then we studied reading—and then to bed.

"She's back there now—back in the nursery sound asleep, with 'Princess Elizabeth' (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm.

"You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see I'm her Daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts to school, when she walks across the street, then she is in your hands.

"She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time; I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me too look out for her. Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children run from behind parked cars. Please don't run over my little girl."

MORTUARY

STEINBORN

Early Thursday morning, the messenger of death called at the Steinborn home and summoned Fred Ernst, the youngest member to that Divine Presence in that Home not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. His passing was calm and peaceful, the knowledge of his going was a shock indeed to his brothers and sisters and leaves a rend in the closely knit family circle. God is just and kind and His acts are always done with that Divine knowledge which his followers never question, and thus we know that He doeth all things well.

On the 30th of last December, Fred was 46 years old, he was born in Fort Wayne and when 8 years old the family moved on a farm in Lake Township, Allen County, where they lived until 1909 when they came to their present home. During the time they lived in Lake Township, Fred was educated in the Church School of St. John's Lutheran Church, and at the age of 14 was confirmed a member of the church by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Myer, having been baptized in Zion Lutheran Church, Fort Wayne, at the tender age of 23 days. His parents fulfilled their Christian duty when they proclaimed God and His Salvation to all their children.

On June 26, 1918, our Brother was inducted into the Military service of the U. S. Army, being sent first to Camp Sherman at Chilicothe, O., later transferred to other Army Depots and was honorably discharged from service at Camp Dix, New Jersey, February 3, 1919.

His father died August 17, 1914, and his mother October 5, 1925, after which he was looked to as the head of the Household, he assumed the duty of managing the farm and providing the needs of the home, all of which makes his passing seem greater. He exemplified the life of a true friend and neighbor and his good deeds will live long in the memory of his large circle of friends. His brothers and sisters will miss him most for they mourn as did Mary and Martha of old, but they also have the well ground hope of that life beyond the grave, that life that never dies. Round about him lives his friends, sister Bertha, in Fort Wayne, at home are Gust and Otto, Lulu and Mary. In the new home are Father, Mother and Brother Fred.

Funeral services were held Sunday for Fred Steinborn at the home south of Spencerville, death was caused by heart trouble. Burial was made in the Leo Cemetery. Mr. Steinborn saw service during the War in Co. C, 45 Bn. U. S. G., at Camp Dix, N. J. Members of Post 283 American Legion conducted the Military Services.

GOVERNOR BRICKER TO MEET REPUBLICAN EDITORS

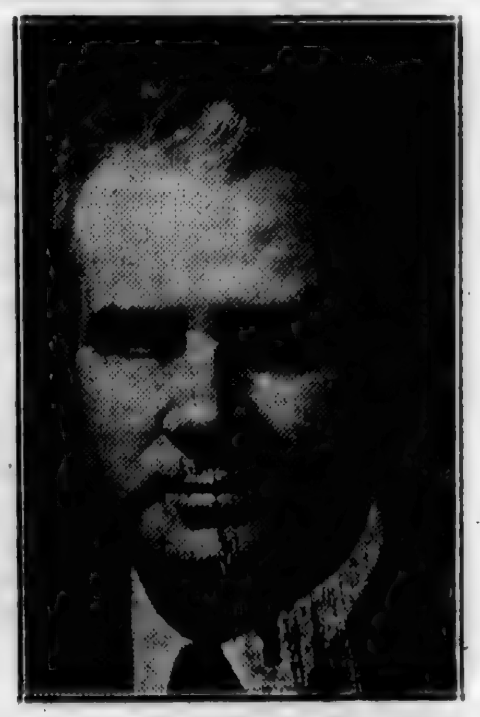
Interest of Indiana Republican editors in their annual mid-winter meeting, March 3 at Indianapolis, was being enhanced by the reception accorded in Topeka, Kansas, to Governor John W. Bricker, of Ohio, who is to be the principal speaker at the Indiana meeting.

Although the Republican editors were delighted to have the consent of Governor Bricker to appear in Indianapolis at the Claypool Hotel March 3, they had not anticipated that he would begin to help write the Republican national platform for 1940 this early.

The Governor, however, did begin to assist in drafting the national platform—or, at any rate, six possible planks in the national platform were attributed to him as a result of his Topeka speech. While these planks may not be included in the 1940 platform in the form stated by Governor Bricker, they unquestionably have attracted national attention and will result in the focusing of increased attention on his address here.

The "planks" suggested by the six-foot, youthful Ohio governor were:

1. "There has been a reckless spending of money.....a flagrant abuse of power. An unbalanced budget is a threat to the national credit standing."



GOV. J. W. BRICKER OF OHIO

2. "The expansion of the Federal government's activities has brought about a drifting, do-nothing attitude ....The paternalism of the New Deal has wakened the old homely virtues of initiative and self-reliance."

3. "Relief is a national, state, and local problem. Its solution means coordination of effort. We must....cut down the tremendous cost of administration."

4. "If the farmer is to be given money, let it be a bonus for production, not for limitation."

5. "Greedy aggressor nations are at the throats of their neighbors.....the Americans should stick together.

6. "The American people have a right to know the attitude of their government on foreign affairs.....and when they demand economy, economy will come."

Governor Bricker became a national figure when, within a month after he was inaugurated, he "laid off" 2,000 of the state's 20,000 employees and cut the state's budget $3,000,000.

Among those who heard his speech at Topeka was John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee.

FORMER ST. JOE LADY DIES IN ELKHART

Mrs. Lizzie Reasoner, of Elkhart, died Tuesday morning of diabetes, after a long illness. About two weeks ago she submitted to having her right leg amputated and she seemed to be recovering, when in the last few days gangreen showed up on her back.

St. Mark's (St. Joe.)

Lent or the Lenten Season is the period from Ash Wednesday to Easter in which Christians focus their attention upon the suffering and death of Christ for the people of the world. For forty days we deepen the joy of our religious life by increasing our prayers, meditations, and sacrifices. This is the Spring-Time of the Christian Church throughout the world, Protestant and Catholic alike. "Take time to be holy, Speak oft with the Lord."

There are many men who regard the international situation as upsetting to their systems as a loose suspender button.

Anyone who would refuse to pay his taxes because there are other fellows who can't pay theirs, wouldn't be a very helpful citizen.

FARM PRICE-FIXING

The opposition to a new farm bill that provides processing taxes on agricultural products comes from Senators from agricultural and cotton states. Among them are Norris, of Nebraska, Gillette, of Iowa, Ellender, of Louisiana, and Lucas, of Illinois. A few days ago Louis B. Ward, of Detroit, asked Congress to fix the minimum prices on 50 agricultural products, and the objections came from supporters of Secretary Wallace.

Indications are that the agricultural states have lost considerable faith in the ability of the Government to manipulate production, consumption and price-fixing by the usual methods. There is further evidence of a determination by Congress to restrict any farm benefit payments, somewhere between $1,000 and $5,000 annually.

T. V. A. BUYS

The great public utility war in the TVA country is being brought to a finish through the sale of the Commonwealth and Southern properties in Tennessee to the government. Thus TVA will have a clean field in which to supply cheap power to the public.

There has been a real fight for years, in which the government has not been reflected in a favorable light because the TVA authority persisted in its efforts to beat down the private companies and obtain a price that would have been a detriment to stock-holders. President Wilkie is entitled to great credit for having stood out under trying difficulties.

WHO ADVERTISES MOST?

An important part of the actual business of any national industry relates to the service of great armies of advertising copy-writers, and large clerical forces. This work increases the activities of editors, publishers, pressmen, news dealers, the postal service and hundreds of industries. This all helps employment in the great army of persons who constitute directly, or indirectly America's Fourth Estate.

The question of lineage in advertising is consuming a good deal of space in publishers and editors publications. Editor and Publisher, Advertising Age and Printer's Ink agree that the automobile manufacturers are the newspaperman's best customers. It is interesting to note that insertions of automobile advertising lead the schedules again this year, as one manufacturer of a high-priced car steps off by engaging space in over 2200 newspapers. Manufacturing in the low-priced field, or smaller cars, are using two or three times that number of newspapers.

Thus the automobile industry furnished the most desirable and largest quantities of all the advertising that goes into American publications.

LOOKING BACK TO GET AHEAD

"Go West, young man, go West!" was the advice of Horace Greeley many years ago. The great editor was looking ahead.

"Be prepared!" is the motto of the Boy Scouts of America. The founders of this splendid organization were looking ahead.

"The world isn't finished!" is just one of the many pithy expressions of Charles F. Kettering, head of research for General Motors. This scientist looks ahead.

So should we all constantly have our gaze fixed—ahead. However, Patrick Henry once said: "I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know no way of judging of the future but by the past."

Just as introspection is good for the soul, so does retrospection help in gaining a better appreciation of the present, a better approach to the future.

Take the automobile for instance. Go back 30 years to 1909, when production of cars went above 100,000 for the first time. According to a General Motors employe magazine, "many of us have not been around long enough to remember what the automobile industry was like 30 years ago. The 1909 models, compared with today's cars, were just horseless buggies.

"Those were the days of the automobile's infancy—and of our infancy. Many people still regarded the automobile as an expensive toy, and on city streets as well as on country roads cars of all kinds were far outnumbered by horse-drawn vehicles. Motoring was regarded as a sport that would never appear to very many people.

"Of course, people in those days had no way of foreseeing the many technical developments that would enable millions—intsead of thousands—t o own and operate cars. Even for us, looking back, it is hard to realize how far we have come.

"Up to 1909 fewer than a quarter of a million automobiles were produced. Since 1909 hundreds of thousands of American workmen have had a hand in producing more than 70,000,000 cars and trucks. Almost 6,000,000 new jobs in service stations, garages, dealers' salesrooms, highway transportations, and refineries—as well as those in automobile plants—are one important result of the industry's growth. Because of ever better values in automobiles, most of these new jobs have been created since 1909.

Yes, it's good to look back occasionally just to satisfy ourselves that we don't want to go back, as did Lot's wife. But to make us happier about the present and to strengthen our hope for and faith in the future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION WAS SUCCESS

With installation services for the re-elected officers and an address by E. T. Albertson, state secretary, the seventy-fourth annual convention of the DeKalb County Council of Christian Education closed in Auburn Friday night. Already county leaders have started planning for the diamond anniverary of the organization which will be observed in 1940.

Opening the Friday night session, an orchestra under the direction of Frank Campbell, of Auburn, presented a half-hour program which was followed by a song service led by Jeff Buss, of Richland Township. Rev. H. F. Craven, of the Auburn First Presbyterian Church, was in charge of the devotional service.

Mr. Albertson served as the installing officer. Those officers present to participate in the ceremony were: Fred B. Leighty, of St. Joe, president; Albert Yoder, of Jackson Township, first vice presidnt; Forrest Harding, of Corunna, second vice president; Earl Beeber, of Auburn, third vice president; Miss Sadie Coy, of Auburn, secretary-treasurer; Miss Dora Carnahan, of Jackson Township, chairman of the Children's Division; Mrs. Ines Dosch, of Jackson Township, chairman of the Young People's Division; Arthur Friend, of Jackson Township, chairman of the Adult Division, and Mrs. Nora McDonald, of Corunna, Educational chairman.

Mr. Albertson announced the state convention which will open at Madison June 25, and said that he hoped DeKalb County would send a large delegation inasmuch as this will be the diamond anniversary of the state council.

The total registration was 544 workers from the Schools of DeKalb County.

A GOLF GAME

Use a medium-sized round rubber balloon for a golf ball, a short pole or walking stick or yardstick can be used for a golf club. Each player has only three strokes. One player at a time "tees up" and in the middle of the floor is placed a wastepaper basket or a large pail. By gently striking the balloon he attempts to get it inside the basket. Those who succeed in thus getting the inflated balloon inside without using more than three strokes, wins.

A letter from him this week said: "Will you please send my love letter, 'The News' down here among the hills, rocks and sticks. This is sure a rough conutry, no good roads. One can hardly tell where they are going even by following the trails. The people know how to make one feel welcome. We have a few churches around here, but it is tough going to get to them. The roads are full of rocks and the holes full of water. There is little money here for up keep of roads. It is plenty cold here, more than I expected."

CHARLES K. HARRIS was born in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. The family moved to East Saginaw, Mich., when he was a year old. He became an usher and call-boy and saw Joseph Jefferson as "Rip Van Winkle."

The family moved to Milwaukee, Wis., and Harris began to compose. He would hum a melody, which a musician would arrange for the piano. He was asked to go to Chicago to write some songs for Eddie Foy.

Like most successful songwriters of that day, he derived his inspiration from events that went on around him. Such an inspiration came to him when he attended a ball in Chicago with his sister, Ada.

At the ball, he overheard a lovers' quarrel, and saw the young girl left alone, while her former sweetheart went off with another. Harris thought to himself "Many a heart is aching, after the ball."

Next day, he was resting, trying to think of a song for the Wheelmen's Minstrel Club Show, when projected on the ceiling was the scene of the night before. Every detail was vividly re-enacted before his eyes.

He wrote the words and music in an hour, and his arranger put it into form. But the song was a failure at the Minstrel show. Annie Whitney sang it in Providence, R.I., in Clark's Burlesquers. Then May Irwin tried it.

"After The Ball" really became a hit when James Aldrich Libby sang it, and the song was established when Sousa played it at the World's Fair in Chicago. The sheet music sales were enormous.

Harris has passed on. His songs remain to enrich the world. His membership in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers remains to protect his literary property for the benefit of his heirs.

FROM ABOUT ST. JOE

Mrs. Loretta Hull is spending the week in Auburn with relatives.

The Auburn office of the Indiana State Employment Service has been awarded the Veterans' Placement Plaque for the month of January for having the greatest percentage of veterans' placements of any of the forty offices in the State of Indiana. While some offices throughout the State had more placements of veterans than the Auburn office, their percentage against the file of veterans registered was not as great as that in Auburn.

Gerald Gee is convinced that he has some friends in St. Joe. Last Wednesday, he was engaged in cutting wood with some of the young bloods about town, and as they say, they got Prudy's goat, and rather than say he was all in, he cut his right foot with the ax, and he hurried home. The boys got together and sent him a box of thistles as an expression of regrets for the serious accident. He was relieved at once and has been trying to find out who sent the token.

INDEPENDENT BASKETBALL TEAM DEFEATED

St. Joe's valient Merchant Basketball Club entered the Markle Independent Tourney under the name of St. Joe Pickles, as per agreement with Ralph Sechler, went down in defeat last Friday night to International Harvester, of Fort Wayne. The final score 27-28.

This was a very tough game to lose being very closely fought the full time. The score by periods being 3-5; 13-16; 22-23; 27-28.

Of approximately 350 fans who witnessed the game 325 were of the firm belief that our boys were robbed or something and cries of "rotten" "crooked" etc., resounded after the game. It was very noticeable the referees did not stay for any friendly arguments after the game, either.

The boys were keyed to too high a pitch fo rthis game and weer not at top form at any time during the game, but they played hard nevertheless as the scoer shows.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, March 2, 1939 NUMBER 9

Muck Crop Farmers Welcome!

Muck Crop and Market Experts Co-operating With B. & O. Will Be Heard at St. Joe

ON SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1939

Farmers Are Requested To Attend And Bring Soil Samples For Testing

SPECIAL TRAIN ON B. & O. TRACK

Will Carry Display And Special Lecture Car For Convenience Of Farmers Attending

Attractive and varied displays of muck land products and of important recommended muck land practices have been prepared and will be housed in the exhibit car of the Purdue-B. & O. Muck Crops Special Train, which will make a one-day stop at St. Joe next Saturday, March 4th, according to County Agricultural Agent, C. E. Baker.

All DeKalb County muck land farmers and others are being urged to visit the train, inspecting the exhibits and attending the well-rounded program that has been planned. Purdue University specialists will be on hand to take part in the program and to answer individual questions brought in by train visitors.

Adapted varieties of crops for muck soils will be the theme of one of the important exhibits. Sweepstake onions and potatoes of the last State Muck Show will be on display and in addition there will be adapted varieties of field and sweet corn.

Another exhibit will deal with the "pH of Soils and Its Importance to Production of Specialized Crops." Adapted varieties of various crops for very acid, average, and alkaline soils will be shown. Also, the various soil types will be explained through actual displays of soil samples, showing the difference among the various types.

A comprehensive marketing will show: U. S. grades of onions, potatoes, and carrots; compare potato packs from large marketing centers to common Indiana packs; a display and use of "Hoosier Seal of Quality;" and a brushing display for onions and potatoes.

THE FARMER AND THE RAILROAD

By O. K. Quivey, Manager, Agricultural Development, B. & O. Railroad

So much has been heard of the problems of agriculture that the mind of the average American citizen is left in confusion. Agriculture has had and will continue to have its problems. The same thing is true of transportation and other industries.

Perhaps we Americans have been too content to leave to each group the solution of its own problems. It is undeniably true that the problems of agriculture and transportation are so inter-related that a satisfactory solution would be reached more readily if each group were intelligently conscious of the problems of the other.

The Baltimore and Ohio, America's pioneer railroad, has also been a pioneer among eastern railroads in lending practical aid to the farming industry in the territory served. The idea of promoting interest in its rural communities through demonstration projects, educational methods and boys' and girls' club work, developed from the "good neighbor" policy of the Baltimore and Ohio. This policy was enunciated by its president, Daniel Willard, more than 20 years ago, in the belief that it is not only more pleasant to treat your neighbor with consideration and in a friendly, helpful manner, but that in a majoirty of cases it is also just plain good business to do so.

The "PURDUE-B. & O. MUCK CROPS SPECIAL" is a continuation of the cooperative program begun in 1924 by the Purdue Agricultural Extension Service and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad with the organization of potato clubs in the muck area, followed by onion club program, and more recently the Muck Crops Achievement Program, having for its purpose a great diversification of muck crop production.

The success of the Northern Indiana Muck Crops Program is an example of effective cooperation between farmers interested railroads, agricultural extension service and local public interests.

NEW WASHINGTON COLUMN APPEARS FIRST TIME TODAY

The St. Joe News is pleased to present for the first time today a sparkling, new column of Indiana news from the Nation's Capitol—"Gilt Off the Dome" by Charles A. Baird, well-known Hoosier newspaper writer.

Prepared especially for the St. Joe News and a select group of Northeastern Indiana newspapers, "Gilt Off the Dome" reviews in terse, spicy fashion, interesting sidelights on the Washington scene of particular interest to readers in this locality.

Charles A. Baird, author of this new weekly feature, is a former resident of Northeastern Indiana and a newspaperman of many years' experience. He most recently served as reporter and political writer for the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, a position he resigned to become secretary to Rep. George W. Gillie.

For news of what Indiana Congressmen and Senators are doing on Capitol Hill, and what Washington thinks of your public officials, follow "Gilt Off the Dome" each week in the St. Joe News.

Turn now to another page and read Mr. Baird's human, humorous comment on behind-the-scenes happenings in the Capital City. Then tell us what you think of this new feature which will appear exclusively in the St. Joe News in this territory.

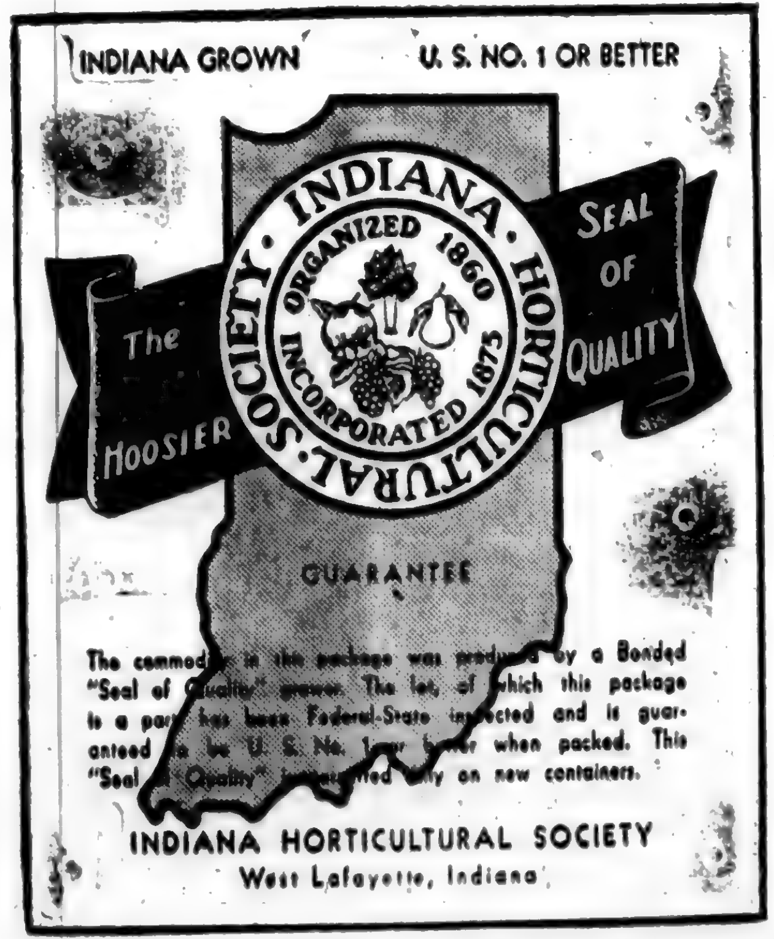
Hoosier "SEAL of QUALITY"

A Plan for Standardization of Indiana Fruits and Vegetables

By F. C. Gaylord, Asst. Head of Purdue Horticultural Dept.



The Hoosier "Seal of Quality" is a method of standardization and packing that enables growers to still retain the rigid individualism of their forefathers and yet meet the needs of present day conditions through a guaranteed, standardized product.

Most of the fruit growers are acquainted with the Hoosier Seal. It is a distinguishing label placed on packages that guarantees products in the package to be Indiana grown and to be U. S. No. 1 or better quality. In other words it is a guarantee that in the package with the Seal, distributors and consumers will find the Cream of the Hoosier Crop.

The requirements that must be met by those who pack under the "Seal of Quality" are:

1. That the product must be U. S. No. 1, or better.

2. That the product must be Federal-State inspected and passed.

3. Fruits and vegetables must be packed in new containers.

4. The growers packing under the "Seal of Quality" must sign contracts and give acceptable $500 performance bonds that they will meet all requirements as designated for the use of the "Seal of Quality."

In addition to the rigid requirements necessary for the growers to meet, the Hoosier Seal has back of it:

1. The most progressive and substantial commercial growers of the State.

2. The Indiana Horticultural Society with its 75 years of leadership.

3. The Federal Government, because every lot of fruit and vegetables that bear the "Seal of Quality" has back of it a Federal-State certificate that guarantees the quality in the packages that have passed the requirements for U. S. No. 1 or better quality.

F.C. GAYLORD

Among the prominent persons who will accompany the Purdue—B. & O. 'traveling school" will be Fay C. Gaylord, assistant chief of the Purdue University horticulture department. THE FORMATION OF MUCK

By G. H. Enfield

The very nature of muck itself hints its weakness. It is nothing more than the accumulation of partially decayed plant material. This accumulation took place in poorly drained areas where water preserved the plant residue from rapid decay. During this period of formation, the mucks have been subjected to muck soaking, leaching and resoaking. This process has removed most of the easily soluble plant food which is so important in producing large crop yields.

Shortly after a plant dies, even before decay takes place, over 75 per cent of the potash of plants is easily removed by leaching. Phosphorus and nitrogen, the other two important plant foods, are more or less a part of the organic matter itself and are not easily soluble until after decay, or partial breakdown of the complex compounds take place.

Farmers have so often associated the dark color of soils with high productiveness that it seems foolish to many of them to apply additional plant food to a soil that is already black like muck. However, most of the successful muck farmers are aware of the need for an addition of both phosphate and potash to produce large yields under an intensive cropping system. The question of just what and how much is more difficult to answer, but in most cases with the aid of the soil test, this can be easily determined.

Soil will be tested for both phosphate and potash on the Northern Indiana Muck Crop Train. Farmers who want to know, may find out the fertilizer needs of their muck soils by bringing a quart sample of their soil types to the train. There will be no costs connected with the testing of the soils.

MUCK CROP PROVING GROUND

By N. Kent Ellis, Purdue Muck Research Specialist

Just as every large automobile manufacturer has an area set aside on which to try his product, so the muck farmers of Northern Indiana have a trial ground on which corps grown on muck soil are under observation. This proving ground for muck crops is located on the County Line between La Porte and St. Joseph Counties, four miles west of North Liberty. It is part of a vast area of muck soil found in the Kankakee Valley. This muck land region comprises a large amount of Indiana's 300,000 acres of muck, practically all of which lies in the northern three tiers of counties. The central location of the experimental farm makes it accessible to all interested growers.

Muck farming in Indiana is practically as old as in any other state having large deposits of muck, yet exact information on cultural practices, fertilizations, and crop varieties for many of our special crops is not available. Close observers have long known that the same crop will not always react the same under different climatic conditions and that similar soils require different treatments for the same reason, so Indiana's muck farmers have a trial ground established in their own area to which they go for information on problems relating to the growing of their special crops.

The first essential on this project was uniform drainage. Tile lines were laid in the land at regular intervals and parallel to one another. Many thousands of acres of land have been over-drained and so these tile were established in such a way that control gates could be placed in the lines if necessary to hold the moisture in the land. One area was set aside for further work on the response of various crops to water level control and irrigation. The polts were situated on a continuously flowing stream so that either drainage water or well water could be used for the irrigation project.

In most all muck areas and in wi expanses such as the Kankakee Valley in particular, there is always menace of destruction from wi. Within the last few years many growers have been practically "blown" of business by winds and blowing muck. This was taken into consideration in planning the area. The sections parallel one another from e to west in such a way that permanent type windbreaks were established between each section. The Purdue Forestry Department cooperated in the project and it has been hoped to develop a more permanent type windbreak than the willows now commonly in use in many sections of the country. However at present, cuttings of the green willow not native in this state, were planted for wind protection.

A complete series of fertilizer tria were established to determine both th proper analysis of fertilizer to be used and the economical quantities to use. Studies on the placement of fertilize in relation to the plants for all different crops were undertaken. With the introduction of the more concentrated fertilizers and age of the muck area we find more and more that new elements become essential to plant growth. A set of plots designed for studying the effect of the lesser used elements on the growth of a number of vegetable crops were also established at the farm. One section was devoted to a demonstration and further study of the proper soil reaction for the many crops grown. The effect of liming the soil as well as making the soil more acid have been tested.

Indiana mucks are not generally [illegible] for growing perennial crops except in the production of peppermint. However, an area has been devoted to the production of asparagus, rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries, blueberries, and other perennial crops. Fertility and soil reaction studies have been made on these crops along with trials to determine the adaptability of different varieties to muck soil.

Very little has ever been done to measure the effect of cultural practices. Growers generally practice the methods of cultivation and field preparation which are most easily done with the equipment at hand. Some of the problems determined on the experimental farm have been the effects of deep and shallow plowing together with Spring and Fall plowing for many crops. Another problem is the compaction of the soil before and after seeding, the use of heavy rollers as compared to floating the land. Then the question of deep versus shallow cultivation is debatable for many crops and these practices have been studied.

A comprehensive study of varieties of crops, either grown on muck at present or having possibilities if better varieties can be developed, has been undertaken. These include our commonly grown vegetable crops as well as crops such as brussels sprouts, endive, and broccoli. An attempt has been made to select high oil yielding mint plants, the low state yield of oil warrant this work.

N. K. ELLIS

N. Kent Ellis, in charge of research at the Northern Indiana Muck Crops Experimental Farm in St. Joseph County. Since Mr. Ellis came to Purdue University in 1935, he has become widely known among Hoosier muck land farmers. Besides appearing on the B. & O. Muck Crops special train to answer local muck land questions, he will appear on the morning program to be held in the lecture car, discussing "Promising New Muck Crops."

Have you noticed that it often takes an entirely new spring outfit to make some women forget as well as forgive?

One of the most important things in life, is to realize that if you want other people to like you, you must like other people.

The man who never speakes ill of anyone won't need a monument to mark his resting place. He'll be remembered!

A GOOD IDEA

There are none of the older generation who do not remember those days during the World War when the situation called for using pinto beans instead of navy, doing without sugar, folding bandages, knitting socks, making patriotic speeches and buying Liberty Bonds. Sometimes we must be reminded of those days, however.

In Ohio there is a growing movement for refreshing the memory. Through the Council of Churches cities are having "Lest We Forget" luncheons where beans and wartime bread is served to groups of citizens. This is followed by intelligent discussion of problems of today affecting world peace. Material necessary for such a discussion is furnished. This is an effective means of furthering peace. A movement such as this will not die, surely, when it is in the hearts of so many of that peace might reign. Good for Ohio and her "Lest We Forget" luncheons.

Records show that more old people live in the country. This indicates the value of fresh air, light and space in which to turn around. The idea that you live longer because someone else lived long in your family, may be true. You read where certain centenarians have been orphans, been ill during youth, careless in eating, have smoked and even drank. But usually these habits and conditions are altered after the age of forty. Animals live longer than their usual lifetime if fed extra rations of lime and all the vitamins. Milk supplies our lime, greens our vitamins and a word to the wise.

It is found that people who live to this ripe age of 100 years have a balanced nervous system. This means to keep your blood pressure down and take things as they come. After all, do you want to live to be 100? Many a St. Joe fellow says no for there are too many wrinkles that accompany it.

GOOD NEIGHBOR WEEK?

We take it for granted that every one in St. Joe appreciates his neighbor, but we so often neglect to let him know it until we need his help. During the year you pick up news about the good deeds of good neighbors. You hear where neighbors helped a recently widowed woman to get her threshing done, where farm neighbors husk the corn for a sick neighbor. We know of many such deeds of kindness about us, and are aware of the many acts of neighborliness shown.

There are weeks to honor pineapple, potatoes, candy, and then comes days to honor Mother, Father, Sweetheart. Why not put aside some time when you pay due respect and tribute to your good neighbors?

GOOD NEIGHBORS AND BAD ONES

South American countries are approaching the United States in single file, because—if we must face the truth, the Lima Conference of 21 Republics was not such a howling success as we might have wished it to be.

Dr. Oswald Aranha, Minister of Foreign Relations of Brazil, has just talked "off the record" before the newspaper army of Washington. He is one of the outstanding diplomats of all Latin-America, and considerable prominence has been given in Washington to his visit.

Brazil is bigger in size than the United States and we buy most of its coffee; and in turn they are good customers and good neighbors of ours. In testimony thereof the Maritime Commission named a ship of the Good Neighbor Fleet "Brazil."

Brazil is putting forth its best arguments to support its hopes that the new United States Export-Import Bank should make large loans to Brazilian institutions to accelerate trade—a program of the Washington Administration to use taxpayers funds to purchase good neighborliness, which has not so far worked in Mexico. But Dr. Aranha has nice, pretty hobbies that streamline into popular news headlines, and thrill American officials. He suggests immigration of unemployed from the United States to Brazil. He declares that Brazil is willing to offer free entry to certain American products. Sandwiched in between, he it hot in his belief that American capital will find profitable investment opportunities in Brazil.

To these suggestions the United States is friendly, particularly because Brazil resists the efforts of Fascist and Communist nations to gain footholds on their soil.

There are other nations in Latin-America that can present equally good cases. In fact most of them are our good neighbors. But just as a rotten apple in a barrel spreads its taint to other apples so does a bad nation in the Southern Hemisphere polute the good neighbor situation. It seems natural to cover up the faults of the black sheep and try to reform them. But to what extent is this justifiable?

Mexico is our outstanding bad neighbor, and her offenses have been recited many times. Mexico has stolen hundreds of millions of dollars worth of American-owned properties at different times—principally American oil properties. Mexico takes these products and barters them with enemies of democracy, in Europe. What are we doing about it?

We have a remedy! The United States has no reason left to buy Mexican silver. We don't need it. Still, Mexico sells us her silver at prices that have been inflated so high above the world market, through taxation and other processes that it costs as much as domestic silver. Why continue this folly—just "to help them out." All the United States needs to do to bad neighbor Mexico is to stop soft-soaping her. And one way to quit soft-soaping her is to quit buying her silver. That's a practical way to reform a bad neighbor. In doing so we would gain in greater respect from Good Neighbors like Brazil—and other Republics that are standing up to scratch for the solidarity of America.

A few weeks ago in this colulmn I suggested that horns be eliminated from all motor vehicles. Some of my friends, in commenting on this, said the idea was too radical—that such a change would immediately cause a tremendous increase in accidents.

Would it?

Whenever weather conditions are extremely bad for driving, such as fog, sleet, ice and snow, communities pride themselves that no motor vehicle fatalities have been reported during such a period. The reason is this: all drivers become more careful when driving conditions are bad. If the elimination of the horn would control some of the thoughtless driving habits by slowing us down, then the idea cannot be too radical.

ST. JOE MERCHANTS WIN ANOTHER GAME

The St. Joe Merchants defeated the Reanis Nursery team of Leo last Sunday afternoon at the Hicksville gym. Score by quarters 9-9; 26-32; 35-41; 43-59.

Our boys were handicapped by the loss of Leonard Curie, who was entertaining the "flu" but gave a very good account of themselves never-the-less. Storer was high for the winners with 25 points. Bender and D. Stuckey were high for the losers with 10 each.

BIG DAIRY SHOW DURING DeKALB COUNTY FAIR

At a meeting of dairymen representing six counties in Northeastern Indiana, held Friday afternoon in Auburn, it was decided to hold a Jersey Parish show and a Guernsey regional show in connection with the DeKalb County Fair October 3-7. This is the first time such a showing will have been made in DeKalb County.

Directors were elected, representing the Jersey and Guernsey breeds from the different counties. The counties represented in this meeting were Adams, Allen, DeKalb, Noble, Steuben, and Huntington. It is proposed to invite the following other counties in Northeastern Indiana to elect directors to represent them in future meetings: LaGrange, Whitley, and Wells. At future meetings of the directors classes to be shown and rules governing the show will be decided upon.

It is thought that this district dairy show held in Auburn will do much for the dairy industry in DeKalb County and in the district as a whole. The dairy industry has been expanding rapidly in DeKalb County. There were 8,500 cows on farms in the county in 1930 and in 1935 there were 11,500 cows, showing an increase of 3,000 cows in the county in the five-year period. This trend has continued since 1935.

Since the average butterfat production in Indiana for dairy cows is only approximately 180 pounds, one can readily see what it would mean to DeKalb County if this average could be raised to around 300 pounds annually for butterfat production. The primary purpose of this district show is to show to the farmers and public in general what can be accomplished in the way of butterfat production.

DeKalb County residents should consider themselves very fortunate in being able to have such a dairy show to be held in connection with the fair and it is in line with the interest which the business men have taken in bringing industries into Auburn and their sponsoring of better crop production and livestock feeding and breeding programs.

MORTGAGE EXEMPTIONS MAY BE FILED IN DeKAIB COUNTY

The annual period for the filing of mortgage exemptions opens Wednesday, March 1, and continues to Monday, May 1. Claims for soldiers' exemptions may be filed in March and April only. Blanks are now available at News office in St. Joe.

Beginning last year, a new standard form, known as No. 5, is in use for mortgage exemptions and County Auditor Burley Ensley advises that this is the only one acceptable. It is necessary to place the amount of the assessed valuation of the real estate and improvements in the affidavit. In case the mortgagor is not a resident of the county where the affidavit is filed the form must be prepared in duplicate, a copy then being sent to the county where the owner resides in order to check against exemptions beyond the legal limit.

Approximately 2,000 DeKalb County people take advantage of this law and in most cases the exemption is the maximum allowed. The description of the property, the name of the holder of the mortgage and its amount must be sent out in the blank and the instrument must be sworn to before a notary public.

The law also provides that any soldier or sailor who served three months or more in the army or navy during the Mexican or Civil War and who shall have reached the age of seventy years or more, may have $1,000 deducted from his taxable property where the assessed value of his taxables does not exceed $5,000 as shown by the tax duplicates for that year, and the balance constitutes the basis of taxation.

The widow of any soldier or sailor who shall have reached the age of sixty years or more is entitled to a like exemption. Soldiers and sailors of other wars have the same rights, but must have like qualifications as to age, etc.

INDIANA NEWS FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Tiny Robert Grant, of South Bend, shortest and youngest member of the Indiana Congressional delegation, barely comes to the shoulder of George W. Gillie, of Fort Wayne, who holds the title, tallest member of Congress"—yet the two Hoosier Republicans are constant companions....Louis Ludlow, of Indianapolis, is the largest member of the delegation—he weighs well over 250 pounds .... Forrest Harness, dark-eyed adonis from Kokomo, might rate as the handsomest member—friends see a resemblance to Gary Grant, the movie star....Charles Halleck has the curliest hair....John Boehne, Ja., of Evansville, likes to boast that he has never delivered a speech on the floor of the House during his eight years in Washington....Raymond Springer, ot Connersville, two-time GOP gubernatorial candidate, is called "Judge" by his friends....William Larrabee, of New Palestine, is "Doctor" and Representative Gillie is "Doc"....Noble Johnson, of Terre Haute, is the only new Indiana Republican who ever served in the House before....He was defeated in 1930 after spending six years on the Hill....Senator Van Nuys vows that he will never go through another campaign like the last one....He has a picture of R. Earl Peters, Fort Wayne Democrat, hanging in his office—but one can find no photo of Paul V. McNutt or Governor Townsend.

NOT A CANDIDATE: Homer Capehart, sugar daddy of the Indiana GOP, was a recent visitor in Washington. He spiked speculation that he will be a candidate for office by telling newsmen (quote) "I am not a candidate for Governor of Indiana, for Senator from Indiana, for National Republican Commiteeman or for President of the United States." Wonder if he'd like to be Vice President? More over Mr. Garner.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Congressmen and Senators have individual shaving mugs in the House and Senate barber shops—with their names written on them....Barbering is free on the Senate side and easy on the pocketbook in the House....Shades of yesterday, they still have snuff boxes in the Senate chamber....In addition to their $10,000 salaries, Congressmen are allowed $5,000 a year for secretarial hire, $125 for stationery—and they still have a hard time making ends meet....Contrary to general belief lawmakers do pay Federal income tax, although they are exempt from the state gross income tax....two weeks ago the House passed a bill (with every Indiana Congressman but one voting for it) which will remove this exemption.

CONGRESSIONAL MAILBAG: There's never a dull moment on Capitol Hill. One Indiana legislator (he was born in Scotland) entertains his colleagues with the following letter from a constituent:

"Dear Congressman:

"It have just moved into a house that has bed bugs. Would you please send me a booklet on how to get rid of them? They are a big bother and I would appreciate it if you would help me.

"P. S. If you have an extra booklet send it to John Smith. He has bed bugs too."

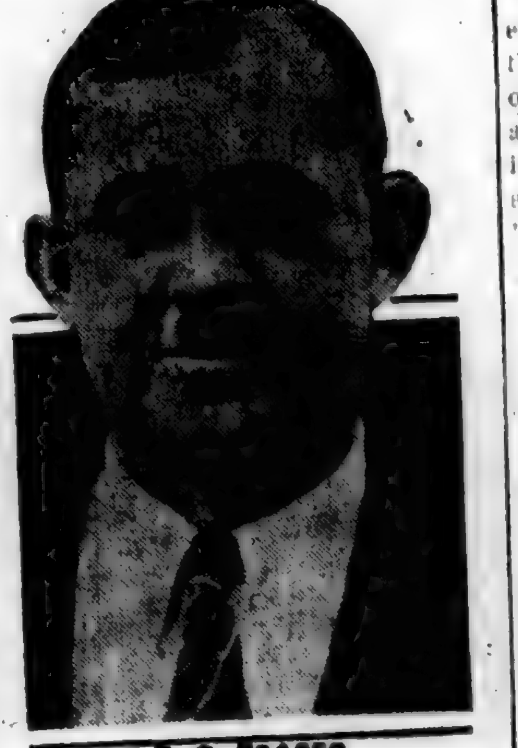
NEWVILLE MAN RELEASED ON A BOND OF $200

A motor vehicle collision that took place at the north end of Road 27 resulted in slight injuries to four persons and the jailing of Thomas M. Clark, of north of Newville, on a charge of drunken driving.

Clark was taken before Judge Endicott in the DeKalb Circuit Court Monday. His attorney, Capt. H. C. Springer, stated that his client would waive arraignment and enter a plea of not guilty. Bond of $200 was signed by Orrin Hook and H. D. Sechler and Clark was given his freedom pending trial.

Clark was accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johnson and Mrs. Garcille Hoffer. Clark was driving south. He attempted to stop at the intersection of Main and Van Buren Streets and his car sideswiped a large transport truck driven by Carl W. Wilkins, of Pontiac, Michigan, who was north bound. The automobile was badly damaged. Mrs. Thomas, the Johnson couple and Mrs. Hoffer all suffered minor cuts and bruises and were treated at the office of an Auburn physician. Mrs. Hoffer had several ribs broken also.

Chief of Police Dan Kreamelmeyer and Officer Ora Lyons of the city police were called to the scene and they turned Clark over to Sheriff Artus Coyle. An affidavit was signed by Wilkins and the state was represented at the hearing by Geo. E. Mountz, prosecuting attorney.



R. R. FRASER

Known throughout Hoosierdom's muck land areas is Roscoe Fraser, Purdue University's extension muck crops specialist, who will be with the Purdue—B. & O. Muck Crops Special. Mr. Fraser will discuss during the afternoon program in the lecture car "Making the Most out of the 'Hoosier Seal of Quality'."

MUCK SOILS PRODUCE HIGH YIELDS OF POTATOES

The high yields of potatoes grown on muck soils stimulate thought on the reasons why these yields are possible on mucks and not on many mineral soils. Application of practices on mineral soils which will approach those on muck may serve to raise the yields on upland potatoes.

High yields of potatoes on muck are a very real thing as is seen from the records over the past few years. The potato champions for the past five years are as follows:

1934 Otho Bryle, Huntertown, 470.81 bushels.

1935 Perry Ort, Churubusco, 486.90 bushels.

1936 Everett Troyer, LaOtto, 493.11 bushels.

1937 Everett Troyer, LaOtto, 649.95 bushels.

1938 Louis Ruderman, LaOtto, 637.12 bushels.

Some of the qualities which mucks have, that mineral soils do not have, are as follows: (1) Organic matter; mucks are the result of years of decomposition of organic material in areas where water has stood over the area for part of the year. Mineral soils in this state rarely have over 5-10 per cent organic matter while mucks usually have 40 per cent or more. (2) Water holding capacity is tied up with the organic matter. A good muck soil may hold 300-400 times its own weight in water. (3) Easily worked, well aerated seed beds in muck are ideal for handling the potatoes. (4) Fertility is held in an easily available form so that the plant may secure a ready supply. (5) Varieties which seem well adapted to the muck area are available.

DeKALB COUNTY SWINE SCHOOL PROGRAM MARCH 7

The following program for the DeKalb County Swine School which is to be held in the Court House assembly room in Auburn, on Tuesday, March 7th is announced by County Agent C. E. Baker.

The program of which Mr. Lawrence Wagoner, of Jackson Township, is chairman, is to start at 10 o'clock in the morning. During the morning the outlook for swine will be presented; the various Gold Medal activities sponsored by Purdue University will be explained and plans for the coming year for the DeKalb County Swine Breeders will be told.

In the afternoon Dr. F. A. Hall, veterinarian from Garrett, will explain the role sanitation plans in the control of hog diseases and parasites. He will also tell of a disease which is becoming rather prevalent which most farmers are unfamiliar with. This disease 's Hog-pox and is similar to chicken pox.

Mr. Lyman Peck, of the McMillan Feed Mills, will talk on Feeds and Feeding of Hogs. Mr. Peck is well qualified to speak on this subject and members of the program committee were pleased that his services could be secured.

GEORGE ENFIELD

"Muck Soil Management" is the topic to be discussed by George E. Enfield, Purdue University extension agronomist, on the program scheduled for the lecture car of the Purdue—B. & O. Muck Crops Special. Besides this morning appearance, Mr. Enfield will busy himself the rest of the day by testing free of charge all muck land soil samples brought to him by train visitors. From this testing, he will make fertilizer and other soil treatment recommendations for various crops.

ANOTHER FIRE SCARE AT SPENCERVILLE THURSDAY NITE

Last Thursday evening at nine o'clock residents of Spencerville again heard the call of "Fire! Fire!" as fire from an overheated stove set fire to the partitions and upstairs floor of the Hurley Saylor house which is tenanted by Millard Snyder and family. Mrs. Snyder discovered the smoke and sought aid from Dr. Shook who immediately located the source. Mrs. Shook sent in the alarm immediately and then drew water from all the taps in her home because no water was available at the Saylor property.

Plenty of help arrived at once and after chopping through the floors and partitions, the fire was brought under control in a few minutes with the aid of water and fire extinguishers. Mr. Snyder and Mr. Saylor guarded the house most of the night but there were no more outbreaks.

The house is already under repair, plastering, papering and wood work being practically completed. They contemplate building an outside chimney. Damage to household goods was mostly from water and smoke and was quite slight. The St. Joe fire department arrived just as the fire was extinguished.

LOCAL BOY SCOUT TROOP WIN IN CONTEST

The scout first-aid team won the semi-final contest in their division last Saturday. They showed a very fine knowledge of first-aid work making a score of 97% on 500 possible points. This score was the highest of the 19 teams on the floor during the semi-finals.

During the finals they placed fourth. Although they placed fourth, they were only a few points behind the leaders. All members were complimented highly by the judges on their ability and coolness in work.

We have advanced a step each year and hope next year to win the finals.

HIGH WATER AT SPENCERVILLE DOES DAMAGE

High water due to the abnormal amount of winter snow and heavy rains caused the St. Joe River to escape its banks last week. Damage at the sight of the WPA dam at Spencerville is quite extensive. The dam was placed by WPA labor and was still incomplete, however it seems that the high water rolled over the dam without actually washing away part of it as was first feared. The dam was placed crosswise right in the bend of the river and due to its position, height and possibly to the fact that all underbrush had been cleared from the river bank on the outside of the curve, caused the river to wash out the bank.

Several large trees were swept away and much of the bank. A cement abutment at the sight of the old dam stopped the washing out at one point, but more heavy rains at this time would endanger the present road bed. County road men have stretched cables around the danger point and are keeping an accurate check on the danger.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of conveying our sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted in extinguishing the fire which occurred at our home last Thursday night.

Last Wednesday evening the Ladies Literary Club held their annual "Gentlemen's evening."

A three course dinner was served at the Aikens Tea Room. The tables were attractively decorated in keeping with the celebration of Washington's Birthday. Our host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Leighty, then opened their home to us for the rest of the evening's entertainment.

A special guest entertainer, a well known elocutionist and accomplished musician, Emily White Hull, of Hicksville, Ohio, sang "Come in and Welcome," by Kennedy Russell. An amusing skit was given by Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Shull. A song, Bells of St. Mary's was sung by Mrs. Mabel Hatch. A piano duet, "Robin's Return" by Mrs. Fred Leighty and Mrs. Harry Bollinger. They played an encore entitled Pizzicati, from Sylvia.

Mrs. Hull then gave the following numbers: Song, "Supposing," by Bishop. A reading, Frederick Shiller's, "Mary Steward," Act 3, Scene 4. A comedy one act play, "Company for Dinner." Mrs. Hull has entertained the club previously at times and her numbers are always greatly appreciated.

Then all participated in several in several contests that the entertainment committee had arranged. Those on the comimttee were Mrs. C. C. Woodcox, Mrs. Charles Krise, Inez Hadsell, Mrs. tional organization of Sigma Chi in an enjoyable evening.

The Senior Class will sponsor a splendid evening of entertainment in the near future in the way of motion pictures. Watch for later announcements and give the class your patronage.

The local basketball team drew the Orland H. S. team for their opponent in the Sectional Tourney which opens in Angola on Thursday evening of this week. The St. Joe-Orland game will be played at eleven o'clock of Friday forenoon. These teams seem to be evenly matched and the score will be close. If you are attending the Sectional Tourney buy your season ticket of the local school.

Pictures were taken of the school's basketball teams on Tuesday noon of this week by Mr. Smith of Findlay, O.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

FOUGHT FIGI ISLANDERS

U. S. Marines and bluejackets have accompanied scientific and other missions to all parts of the globe, but rarely have such enterprises proved more exciting than a surveying expedition to the Fiji Islands, where a treaty with the native chieftains was signed in 1940.

Primitive customs still prevailed in the archipelago, where cannibalism was said to be practiced, and the Fiji Islanders viewed the arrival of a naval squadron manned by white men with some suspicion. Shortly after the peace pact was signed, hostile natives robber a cutter which had drifted ashore in a storm, the naval men escaping in a launch which had accompanied the cutter.

The Americans retaliated by burning a native village, but a few days later were again set upon by the natives while they were attempting to barter for supplies. On this occasion two of the naval officers were killed and a seaman was wounded.

Again the marines and bluejackets took steps to exact retribution from the islanders, who were not brought to terms before two other villages were attacked and destroyed. The natives then admitted that the murder of the naval men had been entirely provoked and sued for a pardon which was quickly granted.

Fifteen years later in 1855 and again in 1858, U. S. Marines and bluejackets took punitive action against the Fijians after they had been guilty of both murder and robbery ,the memory of similar offenses and the punishment therefor apparently having been forgotten.

It was not until 1874, when the islands were annexed by Great Britain, that the safety of American ships in those waters could be assured. Since that time only the friendliest relations between the inhabitants of those Pacific Islands and our own country have been maintained.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1939 NUMBER 10

B. & O. MUCK CROP SPECIAL VISITED ST. JOE

The colorful Purdue-B. & O. Muck Crops Special, while enroute eastward on a week's journey across Northern Indiana's last agricultural frontier, spent busy days Friday and Saturday at Garrett and St. Joe. Approximately 190 farmers from DeKalb and adjacent counties boarded the train for the "educational tour" which included an inspection of the many interesting exhibits and a special program staged by Purdue University specialists.

Highlighting the day was the luncheon during the noon hour, which was followed by a special program for the business men and farmers attending. F. C. Gaylord, assistant chief of the Purdue horticulture department, was the principal speaker. "As early as 1906, the Purdue Agricultural Experiment Station found that the muck soil's unproductiveness was largely caused by a deficiency in potash, an essential plant food," the Purdue man declared "Since the, with a slow development at first, brains and brawn have worked together until today, some 30 years later, we are just beginning to realize the greater possibilities of this muck soil.

Gaylord estimated that approximately $11,000,000 in new wealth could be added to Northern Indiana's annual income by bringing into intensive production during the next ten years another 100,000 acres of muck land, which would still leave 100,000 acres yet undeveloped of the 300,000 acres in the state.

George Enfield, Purdue agronomist, spent most of the day in a special compartment on the exhibit car, testing samples of soil brought to the train by the visitors. Following the testing, he made specific fertilizer recommendations for each sample tested. "Nearly all of the samples showed a need both for phosphorus and potash" commented Enfield. "During the winter muck soils should have a living cover of some kind, preferably rye. If truck crops are to be grown, I would suggest start a willow bind-break to prevent wind erosion, use a rye cover crop during the winter and use plenty of the proper analysis fertilizer" the agronomist told the train visitors.

Farmers are now making the most of their opportunities, Roscoe Fraser, Purdue extension muck crop specialist, claimed until they had considered the use of the 'Hoosier Seal of Quality" marketing program, which has proved popular among cantaloupe, tomato, apple and strawberry growers. On the same program, J. E. Dickerson, Indianapolis, state and federal inspector, outlined the major points to a program of standardization with U. S. grades.

In charge of the train and appearing on the program were O. K. Quivey, manager of the B. & O. Agricultural Development Department and A. F. Stephens, Agricultural Agent for this area of the B. & O.

N. K. Ellis, Purdue research muck crop specialist, recommended the following varieties, which had been tested at the University's Muck Experimental Farm near Walkerton; sweet corn, Golden Cross Bantam for freezing purposes, Marcross for early corn, Sun Cross for 80-day corn, and a Country Gentleman strain of Illinois 5x10 for white corn; celery, Golden Bloom from American seed for early production and the Green varieties of Utah strain for good eating and the Pascal for good shipping; potatoes, Katadhin, Chippewa and Cobblers; onions, South Port Yellow and Globes; and cabbage, Golden Acre for early, Marion Market for midseason, and for late, Danish Baldhead for shipping and Bugner for kraut. He warned farmers to buy cabbage plants resistant to the "yellows" disease.

Of the 96 samples of soil tested, 46 per cent were low in potash, 25 per cent medium in potash, 45 per cent low in phosphorus, and 27 per cent medium in phosphorus. The average size of the farms operated by the train visitors was 80 acres with 12 acres of muck soil. These farmers grew an average of 4 acres of potatoes and 1 acre of onions. The acreage represented by the visitors was 15,200.

Among the more than a score of exhibits on the train was one calling attention to the "five essentials to more profits' 'namely: grade to U. S. No. 1, brush or wash the potatoes, use new containers, brand your best, and let 'Hoosier Seal" help you. Another exhibit showed comparatively washed, brushed and field condition potatoes. Leading varieties of many muck crops were represented by actual displays of typical products. An interesting exhibit was the one showing the many ingredients in muck soil including 11 compounds and water.

ST. JOE LOSES TO ORLAND IN TOURNAMENT

St. Joe played the second game Friday morning in the sectional tourney with Orland. Orland boys were much larger than the local boys. At the end of the first quarter St. Joe led 6 and 2. At the half the score was 14 to 18, Orland and at the third quarter it was 18 to 23 Orland but in the fourth quarter Orland pulled away from the local boys 23 to 34. The local boys only wish the "flu" had got them sooner so they could have recovered before the tournament or waited until later.

MELON GROWERS MET AT ST. JOE FRIDAY NIGHT

County Agent C. E. Baker and B. & O. Railroad representatives are planning to contact melon growers in the St. Joe Valley to determine if a sufficient number would form a group to warrant a grading and shipping system. Twenty-five melon growers attended a meeting in St. Joe Friday night to discuss marketing methods, and inasmuch as this group represented only one-sixth of the total number of growers in the county, the canvass will be made.

In 1930, 1931, and 1932, there were nearly 700 acers in the county in melons, County Agent Baker said. He went on to comment that because of marketing difficulties, the acreage had dropped to between 250 and 300 acres during the last season.

Two marketing methods for melon melon growers are now under consideration, first, a cooperative method by which the growers would band together and make arrangements for grading, packing, and marketing, and second, a method by which growers will interest a commission house to install the necessary sizing and grading equipment and do all the crating, handling, and marketing on a commission basis.

Considerable interest was shown in the project and this seems to be the only way to get the outlet for the crop that can be produced in the St. Joe Valley.

Economic Highlights...

From business' point of view, the most cheering utterances to come from a high government official in many a moon are found in Harry Hopkins' address of February 24. Before the talk was made, word came along the grapevine that carries leaks from official Washington, that it was to be definitely encouraging to business, and was to point to a new and stimulating Administration policy. But no one imagined it would be as encouraging as it was.

Mr. Hopkins dwelt at length on the utility problem, and strongly urged a real government should generally stay out of business. He said that it was essential to recovery that the railroad problem be settled in a manner that would permit this industry to make and spend money. He lectured labor for permitting internecine warfare; said in effct, that it was cutting its own throat, and that this country is plenty big enough for two major organizations to live together in peace and plenty. He observed that there could bo no such thing as prosperity until the people on relief could get real jobs—and that could only be accomplished by invigorating private business. He said that industry and government could work together amicably without destroying the necessary and beneficial reforms executed by the present Administration. And, perhaps most important of all, he intimated that the period of "experimental" legislation was about over—that today's job is to consolidate and make workable what has been done in the past.

In brief, Mr. Hopkins made the most constructive talk the nation has heard in many years. The result was a chorus of plaudits from all over the country ,and immediate strengthening of the security markets. Many a business man who was opposed to Mr. Hopkins' appoinment to the Commerce secretaryship, in the belief that he was radical, drastically changed his point of view. It is a highly significant fact that a number of very important industrialists are reported to be coming to the view that Mr. Hopkins is today their best friend at court—and that they are confident he will do an A-1 job in his important new post.

So far so good. But there is one very large fly in the ointment—and that is the burning question as to whether Mr. Hopkins' notable talk does mark a volte-face in Administration policy. Mr. Hopkins, the commentators think, is unquestionably on the level and spoke with complete sincerity. But Mr. Hopkins, in a manner of speaking, is only a hired hand. His only authority is that bestowed on him by the President. Anything he might say or do could be instantly overruled and changed if the President desired. And in the past, the President's opinions have been known to vary with bewildering rapidity. On many occasions government officials have made encouraging speeches—only to have the good effects annulled by subsequent actions or statements that discouraged business.

However, there are good reasons for arguing that the policy laid down by Mr. Hopkins may be put into effect. Administration leaders are worried about the swing to the right shown by the voters at the last election. Democratic ranks in House and Senate are split wide open, and such potent officials as Vice President Garner are openly working in the interest of conservatism. So thus it may be, some of the experts are saying, that Mr. Roosevelt is bowing to the inevitable, because of the urgent need for bringing about peace and quiet within his own party. Even as God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, so does a good politician temper his opinions to the conditions that confront him.

The House defeat of the proposal to fortify Guam was of considerable importance for the light it casts on the problem of national defense. Administration leaders, for the most part, were strongly back of the proposal, on the principle that we should take the "strong line" in our Pacific defense against a possible assault by Japan. The majority whips in the House did their best to line up enough votes to carry the measure, but they failed by a considerable margin.

Reason for failure is found in the apparently growing opinion that, if we are to keep out of war, we must spend our money principally for the weapons essential to territorial defense. Many experts think that it is tactically impossible to defend either Guam or the Philippines—and that if we attempted to do so, by sending our fleet thousands of miles from the major bases of supplies, we would risk a ruinous defeat. They argue that no power could successfully attack either the Hawaiian Islands—where our Pearl Harbor Naval base rules the Pacific—or our mainland. This is our logical sphere of power, they reason, and we should look no farther.

Some development may change this plan before long. But the House vote on the Guam fortification bill indicates the general trend of sentiment.

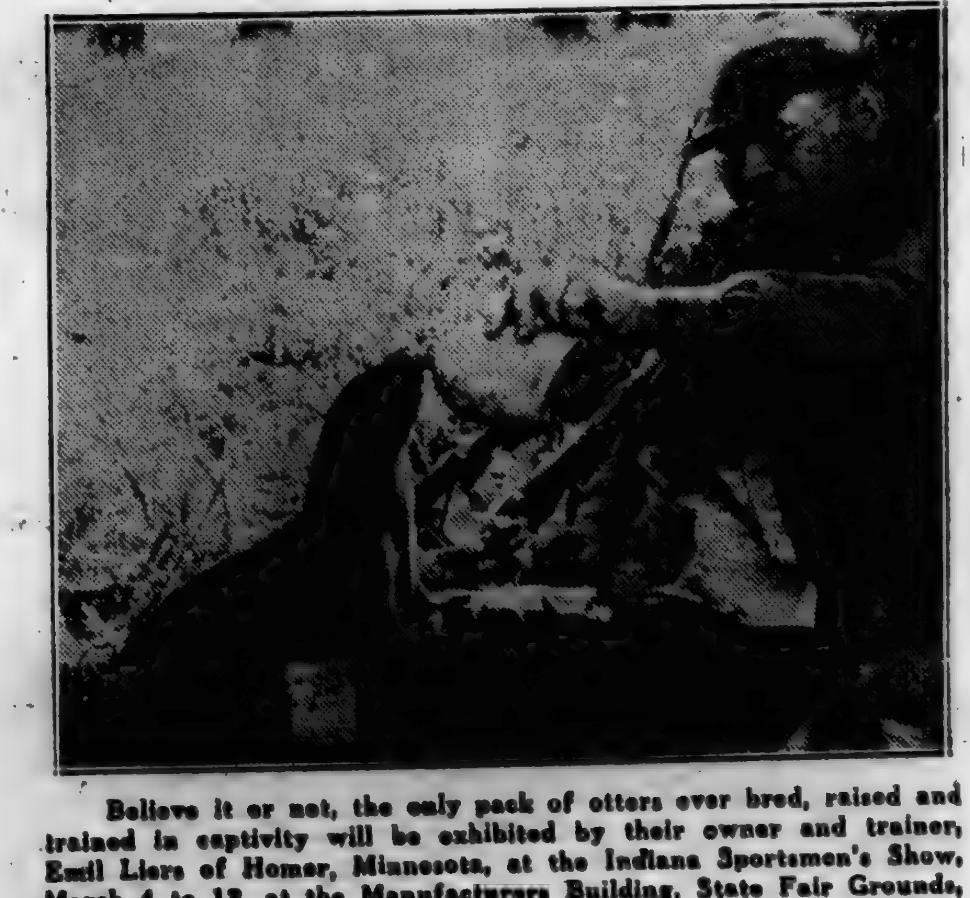
Twelve Trained Otters Feature Indiana Sports Show March 4-12



Believe it or not, the only pack of otters ever bred, raised and trained in captivity will be exhibited by their owner and trainer, Emil Liers of Homer, Minnesota, at the Indiana Sportsmen's Show, March 4 to 12, at the Manufacturers Building, State Fair Grounds, Indianapolis.

Liers has trained his pack of twelve to do practically anything a hunting dog will do. Otters, averaging 24 pounds, are as fast as dogs on land and faster in the water. Their exhibition at the Indiana Sportsmen's Show will be one of the most amazing animal features ever presented.

Otter fur coats are the most expensive of garments and when Liers' brood of twelve were born they looked into his kindly face and decided they would rather do tricks for him than be liquidated into an expensive wrap for some rich lady.

If a farmer hitched a team of horses to both ends of a wagon and attempted to move the wagon in opposite directions at the same time, he would be laughed at. He might even be committed to an institution for mental observation. At best, he would pull his wagon to pieces.

Nevertheless, there are apparently some in Washington who think the two - directions - at - once theory has possibilities. And to test it, they have put it to practice.

Here are a few "horses of inconsistency" hitched to the Nation's economic wagon, as gleaned from a survey of current Federal functions, policies and theories:

1. One agency, the Bureau of Reclamation, is busy spending millions to reclaim waste land and put it to productive use. Another agency, the Agriculture Department, is spending considerably more millions to take land out of production by paying farmers for not planting on the land.

2. One agency, the Agriculture Department again, is trying to boost prices by an enforced scarcity. Meanwhile, other government agencies (TVA for example) are trying to force prices lower by putting government in competitive business with private enterprise and thus create the extreme opposite of scarcity—abundance.

3. Any number of government agencies are endeavoring to put more money in circulation (by pump priming spending) to boost the national income to 80 billion dollars annually. At the same time, the Social Security Board is attempting to drain, by taxation, 40 billion dollars from the nation's purse for a reserve fund for use in 1980.

There are other "horses" hitched to the economic vehicle and pulling against each other, but those just mentioned are the ones putting the greatest strain on the harness—and on the wagon.

C. M. T. C.

What It Is It's Advantages

By Howard Orr,
(Sal. Chairman, Post 47)

The American Legion has definitely interested itself in C. M. T. C. The writing of this column is prompted by the numerous questions put to the writer regarding "C. M. T. C." As to the initials C. M. T. C. they stand for "Citizens Military Training Camp," which is a very definite project that has been carried on over a period of twenty years by the Federal Government. The project is one which offers young men between the ages of seventeen and twenty years, who are physically fit and with acceptable school grades, an opportunity each year to receive military training of the highest order under qualified regular army officers and the best equipment available. This training being given over a thirty day period without cost to the man or military obligation beyond the thirty day period. The camp sites used are the established army reservations and posts.

Discussion of C. M. T. C. Tie In

At the present time this old world of ours is considerably shadow cast with war clouds. However, I feel sure that the people of the United States, which still remains an outstanding democracy and is blest with many advantages which permits of life at its best, are definitely committed to enduring peace. The Legion's feeling in this matter is evidenced by the outdoor posters on display.

International relations have a direct bearing on our national well being and when peaceful relations become broken between nations other than the good old U. S. A., it, in turn, and to a marked degree, affects us, in that our Government must establish and affect policies with respect to the beligerent nations.

The point hardly needs discussion that our federal government, which in turn represents the people, must have adequate "National Defense" to protect our boundaries and International rights should OUR relations with other nations become strained and broken.

To quote another paragrapher:

A weak nation asks for peace. A strong nation can demand it.

The quotation presents a question as to what constitutes a strong nation? Is it its Standing Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force? Is it its National Guard? The answer is definitely "NO." The real and utlimate strength of the Nation lies in the number of civilians with adequate training in modern military tactics that can, with minimum delay, supplement our existing Army, Navy and Air Corps. Therein lies the value of C. M. T. C. from the standpoint of National Defense.

To answer the much asked question again. "A young man entering C. M. T. C. does not obligate himself to the so-called army hitch but only obligates himself to modern military training for a 30 day period in any one year." If we enjoy the advantages offered by the U. S. A. we should prepare ourselves to defend them from aggression should it ever become necessary.

The Legion has swung into action, the opening gun being fired Friday night, January 27, when the Legion State C. M. T. C. officer; Northern Vice Commander, Carl Graham; District Commander, Fred Lynch; Post 47 Commander Floyd Allen, Capt. W. M. Enslen, C. M. T. C. Officer, Post 47, numerous Commanders from near by towns, together with many boys who have signified their intentions of attending C. M. T. C. this year, attended the Anthony Wayne Chapter Reserve Officers dinner in interest of this year's C. M. T. C. Now it is up to each Legion Post to see to it that every C. M. T. C. county quoto is filled this year.

The application blanks will be available sometime in April and in filling C. M. T. C. quotos we contribute in no small way to the major American Legion program of "National Defense."

INTERESTING LETTER DIRECT FROM THE CANAL ZONE.

The following letter was received by Geo. Wilson and wife last week from Dewey E. Wilson and wife who are in the Panama Canal Zone. Mr. Wilson is an uncle to the young man, he being the son of L. W. Wilson of Estes Park, Colo.

Albrook Field, C. Z.
February 13, 1939.

Dear Uncle George and Aunt Lida:

"Received your letter and surely was glad to hear from you. A letter from home folk really means so much to us a way down here. Altho it doesn't seem we are clear out of touch of U. S. A. as much as it did in the Phillippine Islands. The boats pass by here so much oftener, and the army transports come here more often too.

"In P. I. an army transport only came every three months. That was always a holiday as we had to meet it when it came in to welcome friends and then it always took some friends away with it. Most of the ladies had their little cry as they would see it pulling away. But they go so often now we hardly notice them unless some special friend is arriving or leaving here.

"We are having our dry season and it is the cool season too. It hasn't rained hardly even a little sprinkle since the first of January. It is rather windy, but it is a cool wind and we surely do enjoy it. The dry season lasts about four months and then rain the rest of the year. That is the only seasons we have. It is warm and hot the year around.

"We live in the Canal Zone which is a strip about ten miles wide extending from Pacific to Atlantic with the Canal in the center. It is under control of U. S. Government and run about the same as one state of the union. It has an American Governor. The Canal Zone towns are really just residential communities. Each community has a theatre, a club, and a large commissary run by the government for Army, Navy and Canal Employees only. The commissary is a real department store handling most any article we need. Besides that, each army post has a commissary, a post exchange and theatre too.

"Panama City is in the Republic of Panama. It is a city of about 80,000 population. It is about the same as any American city. The Spanish language is spoken mostly but nearly every store has clerks that talk good English. We really enjoy going there to shop. They depend a great deal on tourist trade, so of course they have lots of novelties that are quite interesting. This is sort of a cross roads of the world and there are goods from nearly very country on sale here. They have chinaware from England, France, Czechoslovakia, China, Germany and Japan. It really fascinates us, but really too expensive for poor folks. They have the most beautiful Chinese hand made rugs and linens also. Silk is cheaper than calico here and Bertha is having the time of her life sewing.

"There is some manufacturing but of course not on a scale with U. S. There are several breweries. There are a few furniture factories also. They sell mostly American made automobiles.

"There is quite a bit of stock raising, and they grow most all kinds of vegetables and citrus fruits. Cocoanuts and bananas are raised extensively. They also grow pineapples. We can get a whole stock of bananas for 15 cents. We haven't grown tired of them yet. Apples or peaches do not grow here.

"They have free primary schools and it is compulsory. They are taught in Spanish. They teach American in the Canal Zone schools. The children at Albrook Field are hauled in trucks to Balboa, which is about a mile and a half away. They use money just the same as U. S. currency. The same denomination and of same value. We get paid in U. S. curerncy but in making change, etc., we have about as much of one as the other and it is good either in the Zone or Panama.

"The Catholic religion is predominant, but religious freedom is guaranteed. We visited a Catholic Church with a golden altar. It certainly was a beautiful sight. There are quite a few Protestant Churches also.

"I haven't been out to see any big timber, but they say they have great forestry resources here.

"Our quarters are furnished us free. They say rents are very high in Panama. The places where the poor people live in Panama City look like our very worst city slums in U. S. A. Of course they don't need warm buildings, just some think to keep out sun and rain. The rich have some of the most beautiful Spanish type homes I have even seen. I guess it is the same the world over.

"We have a Chinese garden right on Albrook Field. It is just across the street from our house and we get all kinds of fresh vegetables the year around. The prices are probably a little less than in states. Canned goods and such that come from states are slightly higher. Meats are high also.

"The soil seems to be a dark sand and clay mixture. They fertilize quite a bit and seems to take an awful lot of water. We made a little drive out yesterday. We went through some old ruins of a convent, which had been built in about 1530. We could see from what was left that they had been very nice buildings. They were made of stone and some sort of cement. It seemed to me that their weakest point was the mortar. Probably if they would have had a quality of cement we now use the buildings would still be alright. There are some books in our library about the history of Panama. We plan to get them and read them as there are some very interesting legends about this country.

"One thing that is quite odd is that the sun rises in the Pacific for us and sets in the Atlantic. The Pacific end of Canal is east of Atlantic end. The Pacific Ocean is 12 feet higher than Atlantic.

"When we came here they gave us rather short notice to prepare to leave the states. We had to get our furniture packed and crated and we had to be in San Francisco a few days ahead of time to arrange to get our car on the boat. We drove it to Frisco. Our car is very useful here. We had to get license for C. Z. and Panama, too. We drive on left side of street and have a maximum highway speed limit of 30 miles per hour, and ten to twenty miles per hour in the city. We buy gasoline through our army filling station for eleven cents per gallon. This country is very hard on an automobile. Everything rusts so bad and cloth mildews terrible. Most of the cars that are manufactured for sale here have leather upholstery.

"We certainly would be very happy if you could come down to visit us here. I am sure you would enjoy the trip and we would be delighted to show you all the places of interest.

"We are hoping to go back to Texas when our time is up here. We liked it very much at San Antonio. We have quite a few friends there in the army and out too. We liked San Francisco very much. That is a great city to live in. Tacoma, Washington wasn't such a bad climate, but we never did like it so well there.

"Well I hope I answered some of your questions satisfactorily. I am very happy to give you any information I can, so please just ask any question and I'll try to answer as best I can. It is rather hard for me to write otherwise as we go quite a bit and see so many strange things that it has become rather common place, and we just can't imagine anyone being interested. Please write and we will be glad to hear about any of the relatives and friends of the family. We think so much of you all, but are just poor writers. Hope this finds you all well and happy."

Love to all,
Dewey and Bertha.

COMPLETE electric service not only means a better home but it also means greatly lowered cost for each additional unit of electricity. . . . Now with our Progressive Rate Reduction, it will pay you to use Electricity freely.

The reduction in January cut the cost for the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours to 6 cents and the lower blocks to bargain prices. On July 1, 1939, there will be another reduction to 5½ cents for the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours and on December 31, 1939, it will be cut to only 5 cents per kilowatt-hour.

Modernize your home with complete electric service. Prices of electrical equipment have never been lower than they are today. Appliances may be purchased over long terms for small monthly payments. It is true economy to buy all of your household service from a single source so that you may step down your electric cost to the low level wholesale rates.

A SIMPLE RULE OF SAFETY

Do you know about the danger in overheated radiators? Do you wait until the boiling has stopped before removing the cap?

Care should always be exercised in taking off the cap from an overheated radiator. Use a large rag to cover it and keep your face turned away when the cap is removed.

Be especially careful when pouring water into a radiator which has been overheated due to water running low. It should be allowed to cool. If water is poured in while the engine is still hot, the cylinder block may crack or a bad boil-over may occur, blowing the hot water into your face.

Check your anti-freeze liquid frequently to see that you have the proper amount.

HORSE SENSE

Good chicks are the result of good management, which means obtaining chicks from proper pullorum tested stock that has good livability, high production, large egg size, and fast growth.

Impaction colic can be prevented by allowing horses all the water they need and by feeding them a good roughage along with some grain.

You may prevent spring losses of livestock from poisonous plants by keeping the animals out of the pasture until the grass has made considerable growth. Many poisonous weeds start their growth early and are often eaten by livestock for the want of something green.

Trim the colt's feet every six months. If your colt's feet have not been trimmed during the winter, do it now before the spring work begins. Clean out the dirt with a knife and then cut away the excess wall growth with a pair of hoof nippers.

You never "find time for anything." If you want time, you must make it.

Will it pay to clear that steep slope. Soil washing and gullies follow poor land use, say Purdue University specialists.

An abundant supply of Korean lespedeza seed and low prices per pound will encourage extensive use of this valuable legume on rolling soil. Also, a few pounds per acre, along with red top, make a valuable growth for erosion control, pasture, and soil building.

"As the man soweth, so shall he reap." Plan now to sow seed of tested quality.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —
CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senator Frederick Van Nuys and Governor Clifford Townsend are still "fueding" privately—the Senator can't seem to forget the Governor's pronouncement of his political doom from the steps of the White House back in the hectic pre-campaign days.

The Senator, however, is on friendly terms with Frank McHale, right-hand man of High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt; McHale, you remember, engineered the "truce" between Van Nuys and the State House crowd last year.

One of Van Nuys' friends, unaware of the strained relations, recently requested him to ask a personal favor of the Governor. Nan Nuys refused to contact Townsend directly but agreed to intercede through McHale.

Senator Van Nuys and his junior partner, Shay Minton, have been in opposing Senate camps for months, but they are expected to join forces to promote McNutt's presidential hopes in 1940. But Minton won't be much help to the ex-Governor because he'll have a fight for re-election on his hands—probably against Ray Willis.

HARD WORK: During his first two months in Congress, George W. Gillie, of Fort Wayne, has applied himself principally to farm and old-age pension legislation . . . He has testified frequently at committee hearings on agricultural and pension bills . . . The new Indiana Congressman, who towers above all his colleagues in the House, has delivered but one speech—on the proposed Anthony Wayne Memorial project . . . He has introduced more than a dozen bills, mostly of a special nature . . . His nearest office neighbor is Louis Ludlow, author of the War Referendum Resolution which Gillie is pledged to support . . . The former sheriff, once a farmer, attends sessions of the House religiously but can't accustom himself to sitting quietly for five or six hours at a stretch listening to speeches . . . After one gruelling session he remarked: "This is the hardest work I've ever done. I'd much rather be plowing a field or turning a hoe."

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Charlie Halleck, of Renssalaer, no longer the lone Republican Congressman from Indiana, is the proud father of twins—Charles and Patricia . . . Thain Farley, son of the former Representative from the Fourth District, still holds his job as doorkeeper of the House . . . Mrs. George W. Gillie has been named secretary of the "Spirit of Seventy-Six" Club, an organization of the wives of newly-elected members of the Seventy-Sixth Congress . . . Forrest Harness, of Kokomo, wounded in action during the World War, is a member of the Military Affairs Committee . . . Raymond Springer, a former judge, is active on the Judiciary Committee . . . Sam Pettingill, former Congressman from South Bend, is now writing a syndicated newspaper column . . . His successor, Bob Grant, is only 35 years old.

"Dear Congressman:

"Enclosed is a list of precinct committeemen for Blank County. Unless otherwise indicated, the wives of the committeemen are their vices."

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1939 NUMBER

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE AS REPORTED BY BOBBIT

Indianapolis, Ind.—Although hampered at every turn by administration opposition, the fifty-one Republican members of the Indiana House of Representatives and the sixteen Republican members of the State Senate had three major platform accomplishments to their credit when the Indiana General Assembly adjourned last week.

One accomplishment was the elimination of the obnoxious beer importer and wholesaler system, which had provided political plums for the Democratic organization in Indiana ever since former Governor Paul V. McNutt entered the state capitol in 1933.

Another was the reduction of the Indiana State Budget under the amount requested by the administration—a definite indication that the administration's power under the Legislative boss is weakening, inasmuch as the bill had to receive some Democratic support in the State Senate in order to become a law.

The third major accomplishment was the central counting bill, which will tend to eliminate frauds such as were practiced during the last election by having all ballots counted at a central point under the eyes of the public.

All three accomplishments are the result of bitter battles, which prolonged the session until almost 4 o'clock in the afternoon of March 7 after the clocks had been turned back repeatedly so that the session could be adjourned officially on March 6.

Cuts in the budget totaled $1,232,966.85. The budget, as adopted, was $83,568,449.15, as compared with the $84,801,416 budget originally proposed by the administration. Members of the House originally had sought to make cuts ranging from five to eight million dollars in the budget. They were defeated in this purpose because of the fact that they were so bitterly opposed by the administration of Governor M. Clifford Townsend and the administration leaders in the State Senate.

It was because of the battle over the budget, as well as the efforts to repeal the truck tire weight tax and to refund the money collected in the past under that tax, that the session of the Legislature was prolonged sixteen hours beyond the limit allowed by the Constitution.

Other reforms which the Republicans in the House and Senate attempted to enact included:

1. A measure to reduce the retailers' gross income tax from 1 per cent to a half of one per cent.

2. A plan to distribute approximately $4,000,000 more of the state's gasoline taxes to the counties and local units or government.

3. A bill to repeal the reorganization act insofar as it affects the constitutionally elected officers of the state government.

4. The bill which would place the "Two Per Cent Club," through which the administration has collected a tremendous quantity of campaign funds, under the terms of the Indiana corrupt practices act.

5. The election reform bills, aside from the central counting bill that was passed by the upper house.

Strenuous efforts to enact all of the above reforms into law were made by the Republicans in both Houses but, lacking either a majority in the Senate or a chief executive in the Governor's office who was of Republican faith, they failed.

At the conclusion of the session, Arch N. Bobbitt, chairman of the Indiana Republican State Central Committee, said that the Republicans of Indiana have every reason to be proud of the fifty-one members of the Indiana House.

"They stood loyally behind the Republican party's program," Mr. Bobbitt said. "They quit only when they realized that the power of Governor Townsend and the Indiana State Senate was too great for the members of one House alone to combat, and that the administration had definitely determined to refuse to make further reductions in the state's operating expenses."

One of the most strenuous battles of this season was over the truck tire weight tax. The tax always has been exceedingly obnoxious and the Democrats repeatedly have wished that they never had enacted it. Republican members of the House introduced a bill to repeal the tax, passed it, and sent it to the Senate. At that time, Governor Townsend was struggling desperately to obtain more revenues to meet the highest state budget in history. He persuaded the Senators to amend the repealed bill by inserting a clause increasing gasoline taxes. The Republican members steadfastly refused to adopt any new taxes and the administration declined to agree to eliminate the gasoline tax, so the bill was killed.

The Republicans also were the authors of the bill to reduce the tax paid by retailers from 1 per cent to one half of 1 per cent on the gross income. Democrats in the Senate revised the tax to a sliding scale ranging from three tenths of 1 per cent to 2 per cent. Republican members of the House and Senate declared that they wanted to reduce taxes not increase them. They offered to compromise on a reduction of the tax on retailers to three-fourths of 1 per cent but the administration and its Democratic support in the Senate refused to agree. The bill died in a conference committee appointed by members of the two Houses.

Republican members of the Legislature also had hoped to repeal the reorganization act insofar as constitutional offices were concerned. They passed bills to accomplish this purpose, as well as a bill to place the Two Per Cent Club under the Indiana corrupt practices act, but the bills died in the Senate. The Two Per Cent Club is the organization through which the Democratic administration collects its tremendous campaign funds.

Only one of the election reform bills was enacted into law. There were five bills in all.

Probably the greatest victory won by the Republicans during the session was the abolition of the beer importer and wholesaler systems. Under the old law, enacted under the administration of former Governor Paul V. McNutt and amended during the administration of Governor Townsend, the importers were limited in number. So were the wholesalers. This meant that the importerships and wholesalerships could be distributed to political favorites as political plums. The result was that they were of great assistance in building up a tremendous political machine.

Under the new law, proposed by the Republicans, the importerships are abolished entirely and the wholesalerships are unlimited in number. Anyone who can qualify may become a wholesaler. If his application for a wholesaler's license is rejected by the State Excise Commission, he can appeal the decision to the Marion County Superior Court. It was expected that this law would add not curb the operation of the Democratic political machine.

Other bills enacted but which had no great political significance included:

1. Prohibition of the sale of fireworks effective after August 1, 1939.

2. Extension of the milk control law to June 30, 1941.

3. Requirement of medical examinations of applicants for marriage licenses, providing for pre-natal syphylis tests.

4. Appropriation of $20,000 for a state public council of eleven persons to advertise Indiana.

5. Granting a period to March 1 for purchase of automobile license plates.

6. Appropriation of $10,000 to aid in the fight against freight rates discriminating in favor of southern states.

7. Granting indigent persons the right to be admitted to the Robert W. Long or the William W. Coleman Hospitals in Indianapolis by order of the Circuit Court Judge. Permits admission of crippled children between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years to the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for children, with the counties bearing the cost of treatment.

8. Reorganization of the State Board of Health to give membership to six physicians, one of whom will be secretary, the Board also including a veterinarian, a destist, an engineer and a pharmicist.

9. Requiring three years residence in Indiana and one year in the township, for eligibility for township poor relief.

10. Requiring licensing of funeral directors.

11. Creates a public harbors and terminals commission primarily for the construction of a public harbor on Lake Michigan, in Porter County.

12. Creating membership in the State Board of Education to a member of the Negro race.

13. Creates a State egg board for the grading and standardization of eggs sold at wholesale.

Wildlife Poster Stamps on Sale in St. Joe

C. R. Swain (left) secretary of the Indiana Conservation Advisory Committee and Regional Director of the National Wildlife Federation, discusses the 1939 Wildlife Stamps with Virgil M. Simmons, Commissioner of the Department of Conservation.

Wildlife poster stamps were placed on sale in St. Joe by the Conservation Department and may be secured from The News office or members of the Club who will secure as many as you like it was announced by F. B. Leighty, secretary of the St. Joe Conservation Club. The stamp sale will continue until March 25.

The local clubs will receive 25 per cent of the receipts from the sale of stamps to further conservation projects in which they are interested. Ten per cent will go to the State Conservation Committee and the balance will be sent to the National Wildlife Federation.

There are eighty stamps on a sheet, the series selling for $1.00. Included in the attractive, colored series are pictures of waterfowl, birds, animals, fish, trees and wildflowers found throughout the United States. The stamps have a special appeal to collectors as well as conservationists and other persons interested in the advancement of both the local and the state conservation programs.

In 1938 more than 350,000 of these stamps were sold in Indiana and it is anticipated that this number will be doubled this year.

Sale of the Wildlife Stamps is one of the activities scheduled by the local clubs in observance of National Wildlife Restoration Week, being celebrated in Indiana and throughout the nation from March 19-25.

Safetygrams

What about law enforcement on our streets and highways? Do the drunks in your community get by with a small fine, and are they allowed to go back on the roads and repeat their offense?

It behooves every citizen who travels on our highways and who obeys the traffic laws to investigate this.

Fixing tickets is as bad a violation of decency and courtesy as the crime itself. Spineless enforcement, usually diluted with politics, can never reduce highway accidents. It's bad enough for motorists to wink at the law, but when the law winks right back, the people in a community are not safe on the highway.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA.

Just been reading about the pay-roll of the WPA—the salaries paid the Boys up there around the top. And stranger, up there, they are living on the fat of the land.

And the piece I was reading, it was copied from the Ladysmith, Wis., News, and anybody who has any faint idea that the editors of the weekly newspapers are not awake, they are standing on their foot. And there are big City Editors who can take their hat off to these scribes in the smaller places away from the elbowing and taxicabs—where there is more time to ponder.

And this Ladysmith Ed., he says there over 27 thousand on salaries greater than 3,000 dollars a year—and they run up to 12,000 a year. As a sample, 78 fellers, each of them, they get between 7 and 8 thousand.

And press-agents—they have 290.

It is not hard to savvy why we are in a mess every few weeks and need another 150 million, and also it is easy to see why the Boys at the top, they want to make the job permanent and perpetual.

There is one thing about a tractor, you can't breed it.

We figure that a born pessimist is that St. Joe man who is always ready to remind you, when the worst happens, that he is the one who told you it was going to.

We are wondering if this craze for wooden shoes and wooden jewelry was brought on by Charlie McCarthy.

There is many a reform that gets no further than a resolution and the collection plate.

The way many a young fellow drives, it looks like he is flirting with a girl and courting the undertaker.

Though Sherman thought was was one thing, there are a good many nations that think they can't get along without one.

Theer is many a man who dislikes going to bed at night because he dislikes more intensely to get up in the morning.

One of the most hopeful and optimistic outlooks is that picture of a 93-year old man, head buried in a seed catalogue.

Today, even if you were as wise as Solomon, there are still fellows who would walk away disgustedly saying you were talking through your hat.

If a man does not make new acquaintances as he advances through life, he will soon find himself alone. A man, sir, should keep his friendship in canstant repair.

HATS FOR MEN

We have been in a constant dither regarding the funny female headgear that appeals to the masculine sense of outrageous indignation. But let us get our minds off of the ladies hats and consider the news that America has 12 "best-hated men." They were named by a hat industry. According to them, a best-dressed man must have twelve hats, which means a hat for everything—a high silk, sports, straw, panama, homberg, derby, snap brim, and so on! This doesn't take into consideration the good 'ole fishing hat that Mother has tried to burn, and the kind of hat that Father wears to the barn, to carry out the ashes, and to hoe in the garden.

"TEMPLE OF RELIGION"

At the World's Fair in New York there will be an exhbiit of all the different faiths known to man. The investment of $250,000 is understood by the public. John D. Rockefeller was the patron for this building. It is hoped that this "Temple of Religion" will give added attention to all faiths and increase attention to religion. This is to be seen. There is always the hope that good men of various faiths will have an influence on others not inclined to religion. In the Chicago Fair in 1893 there was a similar exhibit called the "Congress of Religions." This proved an interesting exhibit rather than a powerful influence. But whatever impression this temple holds, it acknowledges the force of religion in the life of the world.

SMALL PURSE DIETS

We don't need a survey to tell us that the low-paid workers buy food that "sticks to the ribs" and pays not so much attention to that type of food which contains the most needed minerals and vitamins for health. When you have a very small income and each penny counts, the vital foods that are rich in health-building are not given as much consideration as they should be. The report of the survey showed that folks, allowing $1.25 a person a week for food, had only half as much milk, ½ as much butter, eggs, green vegetables, meat, poultry and fish, as the budget that allowed $3.75 a week per person. It doesn't take an outstanding local St. Joe mind to reply that the larger the income the more varied and wholesome is the food. We are all pleased to get a quantity of fresh vegetables on our plates instead of a constant diet of potatoes, rice, grits, navy beans and so on. In order to have these vitamin-strong foods a lot, we must be able to afford them. Who wouldn't rather have fresh strawberry shortcake with whipped cream instead of dried prunes? Our suggestion is, it wouldn't take much time to check your grocery list and see if your family is getting some of the proper foods, whatever be your weekly budget.

STRING-SAVERS

Who in St. Joe hasn't a string-saver some place in their family? There are some of us who poke fun at them, but today they come into their own. In Cleveland, Ohio, there has been formed a Royal Society of String-Savers and its members call themselves, collectors. The fact that all of the officers of the now national organization, live in the Cleveland area, may mean that the society is centralized in this section. But there are string-savers covering the globe! We have stamp, doll, bottle and hundreds of other sorts of collectors, why not a string collector? There may be many noteworthy occasions when strings play a prominent part. Probably there are rare pieces of string as there are rare coins. Long may they save!

During a former session of Congress, Government Reorganization received a set back, but is neither dead nor sleeping. As a compromise Reorganization is toned down in a bill recently introduced in the House, Congress retaining the right of veto over the power of the President to combine and unite government machinery. It is provided, further, that a dozen or so government agencies shall remain untouched, the best known of wihch perhaps are the Coast Guard, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Veterans' Administration.

The contribution of the Supreme Court for the week is that sit-down strikes are high-handed proceedings, without shadow of legal right; which is plain, hard-fisted law that anyone can understand, regardless of whether or not he agrees with the ruling.

There is always one thing you don't have to advertise for—that is for trouble!

530 TRAIN LOADS

How much money is $45,000,000,000—the amount of the national debt by 1940, as expected?

Nobody knows.

So A. A. Busby, local figure bug, set his head and hand to work to give us some idea of what $45,000,000,000 is—just forty-five billion silver dollars. (Older citizens may remember what one looks like.)

A silver dollar, Mr. Busby says, is 1½ inches in diameter. The circumference of the earth at the equator is 25,000 miles. There are 63,360 inches in a mile or 1,584,000,000 in the earth's circumference. Dividing, the mathematician finds that 45 billion dollars laid edge to edge would circle the earth at the equartor 42.6 times!

Then he goes on to give us another slant on the vastness of that national debt by considering the weight of 45 billion dollars.

It takes 17 silver dollars to weigh a pound, he says. You'll find, if you take the time to figure a little, that 45 billion dollars (if there were that many) would weigh 2,647,058,823 pounds, or 1,323,529 tons, or 529 train loads of 2,500 tons each, or one train reaching across Kansas from north to south!

Can you get that into your mind?

If your great grandchildren get it paid off, it will be the surprise of our life!—Bronson, Kan., Pilot.

Flowers will keep longer if the water in which they are placed is salted. Meat will keep longer if it is salted down—and so will money. It is easy enough to get the salt, but how will you get enough money to apply the salt to?

Frank Porter and family spent Sunday in Fort Wayne with Mrs. Alice Smethers. Albert Moore and children accompanied them. As they were entering Fort Wayne they discovered a fire at the Floyd Snyder home, resulting in a near complete loss, besides Mr. and Mrs. Snyder being seriously burned. Mrs. Snyder was confined to her bed at the time the fire occurred.

Extreme heavy explosions of dynamite were heard all forenoon on Tuesday, arousing the curiosity of everyone. It was the blowing of cement abutments of a bridge in Allen County, just east of the Henry Walter farm, where the road is undergoing repairs.

The Misses Bonnie and Beth Weikel daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Weikel, of just north of St. Joe, have launched into the business world for themselves, by buying a beauty shop in Fort Wayne, located at Tecumseh and Tennessee Avenue. The sisters graduated from a beauty school in June and have been working in the hope of locating. The girls graduated from our local high school two years ago. Here's wishing them success.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

DRAMA IN THE CLOUDS

Trapped by twelve enemy planes which suddenly appeared out of the mist, Lieutenant Ralph Talbot, a young Marine Corps pilot, and his observer, Corporal Robinson, engaged in a thrilling air fight against overwhelming odds near Pittham, Belgium, in October, 1918.

Instantly aware of their predicament, Talbot and his companion zoomed high above the attacking squadron and then dove downward with blazing machine guns into a sea of swirling wings. In a few short minutes the Americans had accounted for two of the enemy planes. Then both guns jammed.

Sensing their plight, the German airmen raked Talbot's airship with lead. Hit three times by enemy bullets, Robinson was knocked unconscious and slumped down over the controls. The ship spun earthward and Talbot barely managed to right it before crashing.

With his plane so crippled it was barely able to respond to the controls, and his observer gravely wounded, Talbot knew there was but one chance to save his comrade and to escape from the ten remaining foes who were so close he could feel the shock of bullets tearing through his weakened plane from his pursuer's machine gun.

As he neared the front lines, the roar of a German barrage rose over the sound of his motor, while their batteries laid a drum-fire on the portion of the Allied lines he was compelled to cross. He raced straight into the storm of bursting shells. Fortunately he got through safely and in time for the surgeons to save Robinson's life.

For his valor Talbot was awarded a Medal of Honor. Although by a seeming miracle he escaped this desperate encounter without a scratch, less than two weeks later he was killed when his plane crashed and burned just as he was taking off for a routine fight.

At the fourth district meeting of American Legion Auxiliary Units in Auburn Thursday, the name of Mrs. Iva Reynolds, of Garrett, was presented for district president. Nominations for the offices will be held open until the May district meeting at Churubusco.

Defeat of the direct primary bill for the popular nomination of U. S. Senator and governor means that organization leaders in both Democratic and Republican parties probably will handpick the two heads of the ticket next year whom they consider to have the best chance of winning—a difficult feat particularly in 1940 when the Democrates will be battling to retain power after their losses in 1938, and the Republicans will be trying to consolidate their recent gains in complete victory.

Orange Herrick celebrated his 76th birthday last Sunday. A great carry-in dinner was enjoyed by a large group of relatives. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herrick, Mrs. Hazel Post and son, Wayne, and Mrs. Anna Herrick, all of Cuyhoga Falls, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Herrick, Mrs. Stella Welch and Mr. and Mrs. Mell Herrick, of Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Herrick and family, of Fort Wayne, accompanied by Miss Hickman, Miss Coughlin, and Fred Day; Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Baker, and little Miss Delores Baker, of St. Joe. Mr. Herrick received many useful gifts.

Notice has been received by County Auditor Burley Ensley from the state board of tax commissioners of changes made by the recent legislature in the law applying to mortgage exemptions. Now only resident property owners of Indiana may qualify for mortgage exemptions on real estate in the state. Applications for exemptions from out-of-state residents are to be refused. The law also provides that owners may not delegate authority to any person to apply for exemptions except upon duly executed power of attorney. No provision is made in the law for applications to be filed by other agents. Blanks are obtainable at News office for filing. Do it now.

Economic Highlights...

Some ieda of the difference of opinion over major issues is slowing the current Congress' work to a snail's pace, can be found in a score sheet of results recently printed in the United States News. During the first two months of the session, thousands of bills were introduced, but only five public laws were actually enacted. None of these, with one possible exception, are of any great importance, and none involve any highly controversial issues.

In the last Congress, by comparison, eleven bills successfully ran the gamut during the first two months and became the law of the land.

Teh reason for this isn't hard to find. This is the first Congress since the election of Mr. Roosevelt to show any strong signs of rebellion against what some members regard as White House dictatorship. Whether that rebellion is warranted or not, is, of course, a matter of opinion. But even the strongest New Dealers admit it exists. The majority leaders in both Senate and House find their control threatened—and they have been completely unable to gather together ringing majorities in favor of Administration-backed measures over which there is any real difference of opinion. Attendance is often bad, with speakers arguing their proposals before near-empty chambers. And in the all-important committees, where the real work of Congress is done away from the public gaze, the rebels are wielding more and more influence.

This Congress is really worrying about spending. That doesn't mean it will balance the budget—the chances are overwhelmingly in favor of a total of appropriations that will substantially exceed estimated federal income. The gigantic armament bill alone, over which there is general agreement as to principle, in spite of disagreement over details, seems to make a distorted budget again inevitable. But a strong bloc of congressmen, led for the most part by the conservative Southern Middlewestern Democrats (the Republicans are still playing a waiting game and are watching with pleasure squabbles within the majority party) are casting about for ways and means of cutting costs. Potent Senator Harrison has recently come upon the stage as a biting critic of what he thinks is excessive spending, joining such other important Democratic Senators as Glass, Byrd and Clark. Mr. Harrison has said, in effect, that a continuance of spending-in-excess-of-income is an invitation to national fiscal disaster, and a menace to our much talked about recovery movement. And he has found many followers.

Other big worry of Congress is foreign affairs. The President's foreign policy has produced passionate opponents as well as passionate proponents. A great many congressmen who are in favor of building up our national defense to the very hilt are also in favor of rigorous isolation and are strongly opposed to aiding any country with such favors as trade credits. They think that an active alliance with the European democracies would lead us to war—and they think also that our participation in a war would bring about some kind of a dictatorship at home.

So, though there have been no major, open breaks between White House and Congress, most of the experts feel that they are coming. And they think too that this Congress will "make haste slowly" in passing new laws.

As the Annalist puts it, "The business recession continues, though at a leisurely pace." Business is now operating at about the level of the end of 1935. Time's index stood at about 98 during a recent week—as against 103 at the end of 1938, 105 at the end of 1937, and 118 at the end of 1936.

Yet the best commentators are not discouraged. They point out that the bad spots in the picture—the national debt, declining world trade, reduced agricultural income, high unemployment—are nothing new. As Ralph Robey, of Newsweek, observes, "They were with us throughout the extraordinary rise of business in the second half of last year." And there are good spots to be seen—reduced inventories in most lines, steady commodity prices, prospects for new security issues. As a result, the authorities cling almost 100 per cent to their past prediction that April will mark the start of a stron upward movement that will bring th indexes to their highest point sinc depression, by the end of the year— or, failing that, to a point very near i.

Slackness in security sales is perhap one of the worst of immediate factors. There has been no sharp, severe drop in values—it's just that both buying and selling are at extremely low ebbs. Investors are playing close to their belts.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

Indiana News from Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Cloak room gossip: Washington politics don't think much of Paul V. McNutt's presidential chances . . . Even his Hoosier friends here can't get worked up over his candidacy . . . As a middle-of-the-roader, they fear he is likely to have the opposition of both the liberals and conservatives in his party . . Frank McHale, his campaign manager, is a frequent visitor in Washington . . . Naturally he is Paul V's most enthusiastic booster . . . McHale claims his oragnization is almost completed in Indiana and is rapidly spreading to other states . . . He confidently predicts that the "tall, tan and terrific" McNutt will go places in 1940.

HOOSIER VISITORS: The recent unehraided visit here of Ray Willis, Arch Bobbitt, Tim Tucker, Carl Ogle and other Indiana GOP leaders has again aroused rumors that the election of Senator Van Nuys may be contested in the Senate . . . The newspaper boys were hot on their trail but couldn't get them to talk much.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: While Washington is reputed to be the most expensive city in the world, prices for some things are ridiculously low . . Suits and dresses can be cleaned for 19 cents . . . The average taxi fare is 20 cents . . . Cars can be washed for a quarter . . . Colored maids will work for almost nothing . . . One reason: Washington has a Negro population of more than 150,000 . . . Some dark cloud! . . . Representative George W. Gillie is attempting to have one of the new naval cruisers named "Fort Wayne" . . . The Navy already has a "Vincennes" and an "Indianapolis" . . . Dr. Gillie introduced his thirteenth bill in the House this week . . . Which reminds us, "Gilt off the Dome" now appears in thirteen Indiana newspapers . . . Help! . . . Washington has an Indiana Avenue . . . Forrest Harness, of Kokomo, has introduced a bill to outlaw New Deal reciprocal trade agreements . . . The Associated Press erroneously listed Louis Ludlow, of Indianapolis, as a Republican last week . . . He comes as near to being a Republican as any Democrat we know . . . Ludlow once moved his residence in Indianapolis to get into his correct district for re-election; there was a redistricting bill passed and he found himself living in the edge of the city, but in a district he couldn't carry.

BUDDING SENATOR? Friends of Charlie Halleck believe he will make fine Senate timber some day . . . As the lone Hoosier Republican in the House last session he was frequently referred to as the "Congressman-at-Large from Indiana" . . . He ranks high in party circles here.

DINNER CANCELLED: The dinner arranged last week-end by former Senator Jim Watson for GOP members of the Indiana Congressional delegation was called off when employees of 13 leading Washington hotels went on strike for a closed shop.

Reason: The Hoosier representatives didn't wish to offend their Labor followers by passing through the picket line at the Mayflower Hotel, where the dinner was to have been held.

Note: The strike did not effect the Roosevelt Hotel, where Representatives Gillie, Springer, Johnson and Larrabee, of Indiana reside.

CONGRESSIONAL MAILBAG: They start writing letters to their Congressman at an early age these days. Representative Gillie received the following letter this week from a 12-year-old Fort Wayne school boy:

"Mr. Congressman:

"I think that we, the people of the United States, have a right to know what the American government is doing in regard to foreign affairs. You and your president's cabinet must take we people for saps. Our country didn't know that you were selling planes to France, and we didn't know many other things that the president and his cabinet were doing. I think that President Roosevelt shouldn't stick his nose into foreign affairs or the foreign countries will give it a good burn, and it won't be a friendly one."

The letter was signed "A Republican who loves peace."

It received a prompt reply.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

There is no questioning the fact that weeds cause heavy losses to the land owner but just how much the weed tax is and how the loss is brought about has not been given much thought. A report made in April, 1930, by the Agricultural Service Department Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, placed the annual loss due to weeds in the United States at $3,000,000,000.

Several items were listed at contributing to the loss including livestock losses from plant poisoning, crop reduction in yield, dockage of seeds and grain, tillage, mowing and cost of other methods of control. The total estimated loss was said to be 12 times the losses from animal diseases, one and two-thirds times the estimated losses caused by plant diseases and three times the estimated annual losses from insect pests of plants.

An estimate made in Indiana some years ago placed the annual loss due to weeds at approximately $44,000,000. Although it is readily conceded that the estimate is far from accurate, nevertheless the startling figure obtained is thought to be as nearly correct as it is possible to estimate. The figure of $44,000,000 does not include damage caused by hay-fever weeds, the losses caused by weeds harboring insects and plant diseases, the esthetic loss, and the reduction of value of property due to the presence of weeds.

Specific losses in dollars caused by weeds has been estimated as follows: Estimated loss due to extra cultivation necessary for weed control, $11,105,450; loss due to reduced yields $27,415,000; discount or dockage losses due to weeds, $3,394,920; losses due to land rendered incapable of profitable cultivation, $100,000; clearing weeds from railroad right-of-ways, $150,000; damage by turf weeds, $200,000; cost of cutting roadside weeds, $157,000; cost of cutting pasture weeds, $1,050,000, and miscellaneous loss $500,000.

The staggering loss attributed to weeds should cause us to pause and think more seriously of the weed problem. When we do, the question naturally arises, "what are we going to do about it?" The answer is, take every precaution to prevent the introduction of new weeds and apply effective methods of control. The use of clean seed is fundamental to the control of weeds. Unless pure seed is used, all other efforts to cleanse fields will be of little avail. The importance of killing weeds before they mature seeds cannot be overemphasized. Pastures, fence rows and waste places should be mowed and proper cultivation and crop rotations used in the field. It may not be possible to completely eradicate all weeds but with all efforts directed towards weed control the enormous weed tax can be reduced.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1939 NUMBER 12

NEW TRACTOR IS PURCHASED BY DEKALB COUNTY BOARD

In a special session held Monday the county commissioners awarded to Albert Dunn, of Waterloo, a contract for a new F-20 McCormick-Deering tractor for use on the county highways.

At the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Sanders, he made a trip to Indiana, and spent several weeks here. His many friends here will join The News in extending congratulations.

DOG TAX MONEY NOT SUFFICIENT TO PAY CLAIMS

County Auditor Burley Ensley Friday distributed $1,261.10 among seven township trustees for the purpose of paying claims for livestock killed by dogs, but the amount was insufficient, a deficit of $261.31 remaining.

The law provides that a trustee shall pay such claims from his dog tax receipts if he has an adequate amount. If there is a balance, he may reserve $100 and remit the net balance to the auditor. The latter turns the money over to the trustees who report deficits in order that they may meet their claims. Mr. Ensley did not have enough to meet all claims and therefore made a pro rata distribution to the trustees. They will pay the balance of their claims from dog tax collections this Spring.

Concord, receipts $168, disbursements $147, unpaid claims $229.75.

BOARD EXPLAINS PROVISIONS OF MORTGAGE EXEMPTION ACT

The State Board of Tax Commissioners took steps to aid county officials in carrying out provisions of the new mortgage exemption law which prevents nonresidents of Indiana from taking advantage of the exemption law.

Bulletins of the instruction and interpretation were dispatched by the state board to the various counties.

The new law will place approximately $5,000,000 of property valuation, previously under exemption and held by nonresidents, on the tax duplicates, according to C. R. Benjamin, tax board member. Probably $1,000,000 more may be added through elimination of duplications, Mr. Benjamin said.

Interpretation of the law given by the tax board holds that the primary requirement in obtaining a mortgage exemption under the new law, effective since March 2, is that the applications must be signed by the owner or property authority and "not by an agent."

Forms prescribed by the State Tax Board also must be used by the local officials, Mr. Benjamin said.

Loan companies or notaries public may deliver applications to the county auditor, the tax board ruled, but the applications must be filled out properly and signed by the applying property owner or his attorney-in-fact. Power of attorney may be filed with the county auditor or be recorded in the office of the county recorder.

Under the new law, an Indiana property owner is permitted to have only one mortgage exemption.

Applications for exemptions may be filed between March 1 and the first Monday of May, the law provides.

YES, sir, cows go a-fishin', too! From out in Holdenville, Okla., comes a news item about one Farmer Bob Childer. According to the story, Farmer Childer had a Jersey cow which especially enjoyed cooling its feet in a nearby fish pond. So-o-o, our ingenious farmer friend, being very busy with the chores one day, tied a couple of lines around old bossy's neck and, lo and behold, there were fish for dinner that night!

HOME BUREAU

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Borthwick. Opening songs were led by the chorister, Mrs. Mary Krise. Secretary's report was read by the secretary, Mrs. Mable Weikel, same being approved. Roll call was repsonded to with Irish jokes, seventeen members being present. The jokes were rich in Irish humor, and were much enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Myrtle Pugsley conducted a very clever contest which tested the skill of the participants as they tried throwing Irish potatoes into the mouth of a green pig. Mrs. Laura Washler was winner of the prize for this feat.

Mrs. Millie Shull then gave a most enjoyable reading which portrayed the return from college of the farmer's daughter who had gone decidedly highbrow while away form home.

A riddle contest which proved to be rather a tricky affair was conducted by Mrs. Minnie Ulm, Mrs. Katie Storer winning the prize for out guessing the rest.

Mrs. Clara Sible gave part of her report from the Agriculture Conference at Purdue at the request of members who were not in attendance at the last meeting. The hostess, with her committee Arline Koch and Mary Washler, served delicious refreshments consisting of whipped jello salad, wafers, pickles, sandwiches, coffee or tea. The color scheme of the luncheon was in keeping with St. Patrick's Day.

Mrs. Harriett Baker was a guest and also assisted her mother with the serving. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Maude Jenkins, with Mrs. Millie Shull and Mrs. Minnie Ulm assisting.

NEW LICENSES FOR WOMEN, VACATION ANGLERS PRINTED

New fishing licenses for women and vacation anglers, authorized by the last session of the General Asembly, are being printed and will go on sale April 1, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation has announced.

Women anglers, residents of Indiana, will pay a fee of fifty cents for a license good for fishing only and during the calendar year. Non-residents of the state will pay $1.00 for a license good for fishing any place in Indiana for a period of fourteen consecutive days from the date of issue. The 14-day non-resident fishing license replaces a similar license issued for the past two years at the same fee but good for only 10 days.

Both special licenses will be placed on sale at offices of county clerks and regularly designated license agents in each county and are expected to meet a popular demand during the coming weeks as warmer weather renews interest in fishing throughout the state.

In the past, women were required to secure a regular combination license, covering hunting and trapping as well as fishing, issued for the last two years a cost of $1.50. With the issuance of a special fishing license at a reduced fee, it is anticipated that hundreds of women will participate in the fine fishing found in Indiana lakes and streams.

The special non-resident fishing license has been popular with vacationists and tourists, more than ten thousand of these 10-day permits having been issued during the past fiscal year. The change in the license, making it good for 14 instead of 10 days, was made to correspond with the average length of the vacation period. Before the vacationist spending two weeks on an Indiana lake, was deprived of fishing for a part of the time or forced to take out a second license.

Fishing is rapidly becoming one of Indiana's major attractions for vacationists from other states and is responsible for the expenditure of thousands of dollars in Indiana by these visiting anglers. The Department of Conservation, with the cooperation of the conservation clubs, planted more than 25,000,000 game fish in Indiana waters during 1938 as a step in further improving both lake and stream fishing.

DRAMA PLEASES STUDENTS, "PROLOGUE TO GLORY"

Calling all students!

That picture of Abraham Lincoln that hangs in the hall of every American school will be brought to life in Fort Wayne the coming Saturday and Sunday with daily matinees when the Federal Theatre presents its popular stage story of Lincoln's early manhood, "Prologue to Glory."

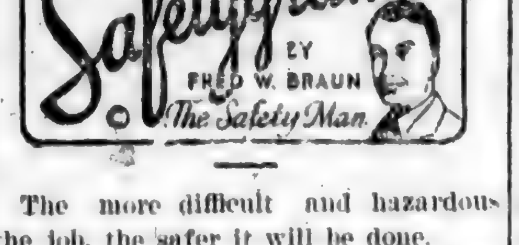
The play will be presented at the Shrine Theatre in Fort Wayne. Curtain-rise will be at 2:15 in the afternoons and at 8:15 each evening.

The author of "Prologue to Glory" which Lloyd Lewis of the Chicago Daily News termed one of the few "first rank" Lincoln plays is E. P. Conkle. Conkle wrote the now famous epic drama as part of his work for a degree at the University of Iowa, and its 34-week run in New York marked the first time a Doctor of Philosophy Dissertation has ever reached the Broadway stage.

"Prologue to Glory" is of special interest to grade and high school students. It breathes life into characters who mthey have met heretofore only in history and civic books. It shows Lincoln at that early period of his life when his ambitions and problems were most nearly akin to their own.

The play will be staged in Fort Wayne with Clive Rickabaugh's unique black and orange sets. These sets, which were used also in the New York and Chicago productions, represents a new and interesting departure in theatrical design.

The Federal Theatre is sponsored by the United States Government and the play is sent out with the understanding that prices be made within the reach of every purse, and for that reason, the prices at the Saturday and Sunday matinee are, reserved seats 55c and general admission 25c with a special school-children's price of 25c for the reserved seats and 15c general admission. The evening prices range from 25c, 55c, 83c, and $1.10. Children attending the evening performance with their parents can also enjoy the special prices.



The more difficult and hazardous the job, the safer it will be done.

When roads are slippery, when sleet freezes on the windshield, when the weather is foggy and vision is poor, America's automobile drivers are noted for their caution and safe driving. Why? It is because the need for safety—not so much for others but for themselves—is so apparent that everyone exercises the utmost care. Self-precaution!

Why can't we exercise the same caution during clear weather and when roads are good?

It brings to mind the oft repeated statement: when driving an automobile, only you are responsible. The safety of others depends upon your actions. It is a definite personal responsibility.

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

MEMBERSHIPS IN COUNTY FAIR TO BE SOLD AT 50 CENTS

The important question of membership was settled at a meeting of the boards of directors of the DeKalb County Fair Association Monday night in Auburn. Memberships this year will be sold at fifty cents each and will entitle the head of a family and all of his immediate dependents to exhibit for premiums in any department of the fair.

The directors also decided that no cash prizes will be paid to exhibitors who are not association members, excepting 4-H clubs, schools, and such other organizations as the board may deem advisable to exempt.

Following the passing of the motion on membership, tickets to be in use this year were explained by Arthur Grube, membership chairman, and by H. E. Hart, association president. Tickets were also distributed. Directors are to turn in both money and ticket stubs at the City National bank in Auburn.

Lester Boger, of east of Auburn, the director-at-large, was named as the Union Township director at the Monday night meeting, to succeed the late M. E. Leighty. Frank Farley, of northwest of Auburn, was elected director-at-large, and William Miser was elected Franklin Township director. Thomas Myers, of Franklin Township, because of ill health is now an ex-officio board member.

A resolution by Capt. W. D. Stump, association attorney, written on the death of M. E. Leighty, was read to the board.

Mr. Hart explained the plans for the 1939 fair premium books, which will be ready for distribution about April 15, earlier than in any other previous year. Board officials want the premium books, which will serve as guides to exhibitors, to be in the hands of DeKalb County persons for six months. Directors are asked to complete solicitations by April 1, and turn over their material to Joe Sprott of Auburn, premium books chairman.

Tentative plans for the Guernsey regional show and the Jersey parish show, to be held in conjunction with the fair this year, were discussed.

Under the present plans, the fair board will supply housing for the animals as well as first bedding. There will be no cash premiums but ribbons will be given for the best animal and the exhibitors will be paid per animal, per mile. On April 5, E. T. Wallace, extension dairy specialist from Purdue University, will be in Auburn to discuss plans for the shows.

The fair association will be asked to furnish $150 per breed for the two shows. The $300 would be used chiefly for mileage of the exhibitors.

Mr. Hart announced committee asignments for the 1939 fair and a brief discussion of the individual duties of each committee followed. At the conclusion of the business session, a motion was passed that all superintendents of departments will hereafter automatically become members of the board of directors by virtue of their office. This act will increase the personnel of the board by eight persons.

The Imperial Shows and Rides Co., of Chicago, will furnish the amusement concessions this year, Mr. Hart stated. The company has many innovations never appearing in Auburn before, he said.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

WHEN BOXERS REBELLED

Hordes of fanatical Chinese were attempting to block the advance of the Allied troops, bound to the relief of the beleaguered Legations at Peking in the Summer of 1900. In the expedition were American, British, Russian, German and Italian troops who had joined together in a common enterprise.

A formidable barrier to their objective was the city of Tientsin, where the Chinese Boxers had gathered in great strength and for a time were able to delay the Allied advance.

All day long on July 13, men of the 9th Infantry, U. S. A., had been fighting under their gallant leader, Major James Regan. The fire of Chinese snipers had wounded the officer and several of his men, but the fighting was so heavy elsewhere that none of the Allied forces was able to go to his assistance.

At nightfall, when the din of battle had partly subsided, American and British Marines volunteered to remove the wounded to a place of safety. Continually under fire from the belligerent Chinese, three U. S. Marines, under the leadership of Sergeant Alexander J. Foley went to the aid of Major Regan.

They were without Red Cross equipment and had no litter on which to carry the wounded. Stripping off their shirts and stretching them over their rifles to improvise a litter, they carried the helpless officer for three miles over the roughest kind of ground while fully exposed to the enemy fire.

Not until the last wounded man was carried to a place of safety did the Marines cease their efforts. Foley was awarded a Congressional Medal of Honor. In commending his rescuers, Major Regan wrote: "Such men are worthy of all the distinction the government can confer upon them."

WITH OUR CLUB LADIES

LADIES' LITERARY CLUB ENJOY ANNUAL MUSICAL EVENT

Music was the subject of study and entertainment at the Wednesday evening meeting of the Ladies Literary Club. After calling the meeting to order by the president, Mrs. Glen Cole, and the reading of the Collect, the program was turned over to the committee in charge, composed of Mrs. John Leighty, assisted by Mrs. Fred Leighty and Mrs. Harry Bollginer.

The exercises opened with a short story by Mrs. John Leighty recounting the development of muisc, its beginnings by primitive man and how it progressed through the ages to its highest form, also its present day trends. She said in part:

"That the chant was the first form of musical composition and up to 900 A. D. all music was sung in unison. At that time a new type of construction came to the front which involved the singing of 2 tones simultaneously, the introduction of harmony, and from that beginning, modern music has developed. However, it took 800 years to develolpe musicians who wrote in strict conformity to generally accepted musical law. This classical form is represented by the compositions of Bach, Haydn and Mozart.

"They were succeeded by the group known as Romanticists of which Beethoven was the greatest exponent. He was called the Homer-Michael Angelo and Shakespeare of music. To this group belonged Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, and the great masters of harmony and orchestration, Richard Wagner and Tschaikowsky.

"After the World War impressionism of which DeBussy was the most popular adherent, would not be denied, and other moderns, catered to the emotional impulse, which follows in the wake of war, with something which we now call Jazz. The history of music is fascinating in its development from curves and dots over words, to denote in what direction the melody progressed from, that point to the stabilized five line staff in use today, with notes which one may read as easily as print. Also the changes of the scale which have taken place in the past with other changes on the way for the future.

GILT -off the DOME

CHARLES A. BAIRD

Indiana News from Nation's Capital

Washington, D. C.—Cloakroom comment: Hoosiers in Washington unanimously agree that Ray Willis made a wise move last week when he announced that he would be a candidate for Senator in 1940 . . . They believe that his action may serve to discourage other would-be GOP candidates from entering the race . . . Willis, because of his fine campaign and the doubt surrounding the election outcome, is rated the Number One Republican prospect . . . His friends say he has earned the nomination and predict that he would give Senator Minton a real battle . . . One political prognostigator, writing recently in an Indianapolis paper, mentioned Charlie Halleck, Raymond Springer and Forrest Harness as potential candidates . . . Old Jim Watson, veteran of many campaigns, isn't in the running . . . At this writing it looks like Angola's Willis vs. New Albany's Minton—Ray against Shay—with prospects of a Republican victory the brightest since pre-Roosevelt days.

G-MEN: The G-Men are on their toes. During a recent visit to J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation, Rep. George W. Gillie put them to a test and found them not wanting. Recalling that his fingerprints had been taken several years ago while Sheriff of Allen County, Representative Gillie suggested that they make new prints and attempt to identify him from them.

A fingerprint expert was summoned. New prints were taken. Within five minutes the expert had traced them among the thousands on file, matched them with the old ones, and had returned with the correct card. "You're George W. Gillie," he said. "And you live in Fort Wayne, Indiana."

MATRIMONIAL BUREAU: Rep. Forrest Harness has proof that in the Spring an old man's fancy too "lightly turns to thoughts of love." Last week's mail brought a letter from a 68-year-old Portland farmer who said he was lonely and was searching for a mate.

Representative Harness, essaying the role of Cupid, called on his friend Everett Watkins, Washington correspondent for the Indianapolis Star. Watkins wrote a story about the farmer's plight. Two days later letters began coming in from matrimonially-inclined women all over the state. Cupid Harness, pleased with the response, is forwarding them, together with pictures, to his elderly constituent. He confidently expects that wedding bells will soon ring out.

P. S. It still isn't too late, girls, if you're interested.

CAGE NOTE: Indiana Representatives and Senators are following the State Basketball Tournament with considerable interest . . . It's more important to some of them than the weighty problems of the Nation.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Rep. Gerald W. Landis is a third cousin of Judge Landis, the baseball czar . . . Secretary of State Jim Tucker made a real hit with Washington politicians during his visit here last week . . . The six-foot-four-inch Pride of Paoli posed for newspaper photographers back to back with the six-foot-five-inch Representative Gillie . . . Arch Bobbitt, handsome GOP state chairman, paid his respects to Hoosier lawmakers but had to cut short his visit when a Republican dinner he planned to attend was postponed due to the hotel strike . . . Rep. Bob Grant made a hurried trip to South Bend last weekend . . . Rep. and Mrs. Gillie visited relatives in Columbus, Ohio, where they met and married nearly thirty years ago . . . They were students at Ohio State University.

CONGRESSIONAL MAILBAG: Congressmen frequently receive letters addressed simply: "The White House, Washington, D. C." . . . It gives 'em delusions of grandeur . . . Many of the letters begin: "I voted for you in the election and . . ." Fifty per cent of the mail is pure propaganda . . . This hits the waste basket . . . A poorly-scrawled letter from a relief worker will receive more attention than a beautifully-typed message from a bank president . . . Relief workers you see, comprise a larger bloc of voters than bank presidents . . . That's democracy.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1939 NUMBER 13

VETERANS DAY AT FAIR HEADED BY CLARK SCHOLES

Tentative plans for Veterans' Day of the 1939 DeKalb County Fall Fair were made Friday night at a meeting at the city hall of representatives of the DeKalb County American Legion posts, the Spanish-American war veterans, and the 40 and 8 voiture. This year will mark the third annual observance of Veterans' Day at the fair.

H. E. Hart, president of the county fair association, assured the representatives that the fair board would appropriate $150 for the day, to be used principally for prizes for floats and bands. Thursday, October 5, of the fair week will be set aside as Veterans' day.

Clark Scholes, of St. Joe, an active member of the St. Joe post, was named Tuesday night as the chairman for the day.

District Commander Fred Lynch and District Adjutant Gene Carteau, both of Kendallville, were present and the district commander stated that all twenty-two Legion posts in the fourth district will be asked to cooperate with the Auburn veterans in making the event a big success.

Commander Lynch also said that a prize will be offered to the post with the highest percentage of membership present on that day.

It was also decided that the speaking program will be held in the Court theatre in the afternoon and that a big parade will be staged that night.

Fire of unknown origin last Wednesday morning caused damage estimated at $1,500 at the general store owned by Virgil Freeburn in Ray, on the Indiana-Michigan State Line. The owners, who live in the second story of the building, were awakened by smoke and fled to safety. The blaze was discovered at 5 A. M.

Most of the damage was done to the building. Neighbors and firemen from Fremont, Coldwater, Camden, and Montgomery, Michigan, aided in carrying out the stock. They fought with chemicals and a bucket brigade for two hours before extinguishing the blaze.

GEORGE PRICE STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS MONDAY

George Price, 77, brother of Dr. C. R. Price, of St. Joe, who has been making his home, since last December, with Mrs. Inez Hadsell, suffered a light stroke of paralysis Monday afternoon, rendering his left side helpless.

Mr. Price has been quite poorly, but with the nice weather of the past week he had been insisting that he be allowed to go out and chore around. All his years he had been active and it seemed rather hard to him that he would not be allowed to go about the farm. So Monday afternoon, about 2:30 he went out and took a grubbing hoe and went south of the river bridge to the drive to the Hadsell fields and there puttered around for some time.

Harry Martin, the farm hand, who was working near by, could see Mr. Price working away. Mrs. Hadsell thinking it about time for Mr. Price to come to the house, went to see after him and she found him lying in the side ditch unable to help himself, but conscious. She drove her car around and with the help of Mr. Martin, they got Mr. Price into the car door where he was held until they could get him to the house.

Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Hadsell reported that he had not been conscious only for a short time.

WE'VE all heard of "killing two birds with one stone," but how many of us have ever killed two foxes with one bullet from a gun "that wasn't loaded"?

According to the report, Christopher Moederl, a resident of Rosenheim, Germany, was taking his rifle into Munich to have the sights adjusted when he slipped, in climbing a fence, and the gun was discharged. The bullet passed through the first fox, ricocheted from a rock and killed the mate. The gun was not supposed to have been loaded, according to Moederl's statement.

MORTUARY

STEWARD

Florence Hazel Steward, daughter of Edwin and Ada Berry, was born May 13, 1890 at St. Joe, Indiana, and departed this life on March 24, 1939, (at 1:40 P. M. Central Standard Time,) at the age of 48 years, 10 months, and 11 days.

She was united in marriage to William Peter Steward on March 20, 1909, and to this union was born three children, Ercil Carl, Erma June, who passed away in infancy, and Florence Louise. She was preceded in death by her husband on April 17, 1925.

On January 1, 1926 she assumed the Postmastership at Spencerville and continued to serve in that capacity until her death.

At an early age she was baptized and received into the membership of the St. Joe Methodist Protestant Church and later transferred her membership to the Methodist Episcopal Church in Spencerville. For a number of years she has been an active member of the Order of the Eastern Star, and a member of the DeKalb County Past Matrons Association.

Those who mourn her departure include her mother, Mrs. Ada Berry, of St. Joe; a son, Ercil, of Fort Wayne; a daughter, Florence, of Auburn; two grandchildren, Delores Jean and Richard Eugene Baker; a brother, George Berry, of Richmond, Indiana; a nephew James Hatch, of St. Joe, and a niece, Jeanne Hatch, who has made her home with the deceased for the past eight years, besides many other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Steward has not only been faithful to the church, but also has been interested and active in different phases of community life. Her cheerful disposition, a welcome smile, the desire to serve, along with other Christian virtues combined to make a pleasing personality which make her passing a great loss to the entire community and to all who knew her.

Funeral services were held from the M. E. Church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. Earl Clayton, officiating. Interment was made in White City Cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to all who have offered their sympathy, for the beautiful floral offerings, the consideration and kindness of the neighbors and friends, to those who provided the music, and to the minister for his message of Christian hope and love.

SUSAN AND GOD

John Golden will bring to the Shrine Theatre in Fort Wayne on Friday and Saturday, March 31 and April 1, his New York company in Rachel Crothers' very successful comedy "Susan and God." The role of Susan will be in the hands of Jessie Royce Landis, who will be assisted by the entire New York company, including Paul McGrath.

In these days of the theatre, it requires a great deal of courage on the part of a producer to pack a New York cast and production on board of a train, with instructions to representatives to sell a high class product to the public at the lowest possible scale of admission.

This is exactly what John Golden has done. He is sending to Fort Wayne the New York cast of Susan and God, Rachel Crothers' successful comedy, as well as the New York production to the last pin.

"I do not want the front of the orchestra filled at high prices, and then rows of empty seats. I want all the seats filled, and the only way that it can be done, is to scale the theatre so that every one can go."

These are John Golden's instructions, and that has been his policy with all his successes. That may have added greatly to the popularity and financial success of all his attractions.

Thus the prices in Fort Wayne will be the same as charged in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and other cities; namely, the best seats at $2.20, with good balcony seats at $1.65, $1.10, and 55 cents. Inasmuch as this will be the last big stage attraction to be seen at the Shrine Theatre this season, it should prove attractive. It is guaranteed not only to be one of the best shows this year, but one of the best in years.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Furnish and son were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Inlow and family.

WALTER WHITEHURST POST No. 283
Meeting Night: Second & Fourth Tuesday of the Month. - - - -

The third Annual Hoosier Boys State at the Indiana State Fair Grounds, Indianapolis, from June 17 to 24th inclusive.

Sponsored by the American Legion Department of Indiana, it gives practical training in the duties, rights, privileges and responsibilities of American citizenship.

To inculcate a sense of individual obligation to community, state and nation, and thus help to preserve and perpetuate our heritage of "Government, Of, By, and For the People."

To foster love of country, with an appreciation for its form of government, and with faith in its ideals and processes.

The Hoosier Boys State is a practical experience in the actual problems of self-government as it is carried on under the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

It is NOT intended to take the place of the theory of American governments as taught in the schools of our State, but to supplement this theory by actual participation in its mechanics.

It is an experience in the nation's largest and most important business, 'Government."

Although Hoosier Boys State is a Legion activity, enrollment is in no way restricted to the sons of Legionnaires. We seek the enrollment of the finest type of Indiana boys between the ages of 16 and 19.

We solicit the aid of all groups interested in selling to the coming generation our American form of government. It is our belief that a thorough understanding of our scheme of government is all the defense it needs.

Our post has on file the names of the eight winners in the American Legion School Award. This includes the three Senior, and five Eighth Grade winners from the schools included in our area. In addition we are giving an honorable mention certificate to the runner-up to each winner.

Judge Clarence R. McNabb, of Fort Wayne, has been secured as the speaker for the Award Presentation Ceremonies, which will be held at Harlan, Tuesday evening, April 11, at 7:30 o'clock. This program is free to the public.

Next week we shall publish the names of the winners, and further details of the program.

The Post Safety Chairman, Comrade John Crothers, has secured James Adams, of Columbia City as speaker at the P. T. A. meeting held at Spencerville, April 5, at 7:30 P. M. All Legionnaires and their families are urged to attend.

The Legion's annual Church Pilgrimage will be on April 16th. The Post will attend church at Harlan. Reverend Goff, a member of the Post will conduct the services.

District meeting will be held at Garrett on April 20th at 8:00 P. M. This will be a joint meeting with the Auxiliary at the gymnasium. Indiana News from Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C.,—Indiana's claim to fame as the home state of many literary notables is well substantiated by such widely-acclaimed native sons and daughters as James Whitcomb Riley, Gene Stratton Porter, George Ade, Booth Tarkington, George Jean Nathan and many others. But not so well known is the fact that Indiana has produced as many first-rate magazine and newspaper writers as any state in the union.

Indiana-born and Indiana-trained newspapermen are legion in Washington. You'll find them too in London, Paris, New York and other news centers—sons of Indiana who have made their mark in the field of journalism and are proud of their Hoosier heritage.

Not a few members of this exclusive press fraternity have strayed from the fold into other pursuits. Claude Bowers, once editor of a Fort Wayne newspaper, is U. S. Ambassador to Spain. Rep. Louis Ludlow, one-time Indianapolis reporter, became the first Washington correspondent to move directly from the Press Gallary to a seat in Congress.

The current crop of Washington writers includes three popular Hoosiers—Everett C. Watkins, of the Indianapolis Star, Mark Thistlethwaite, of the Indianapolis News, and Dan Kidney, of the Indianapolis Times. Watkins, better known as "Watty," has covered the Capital newsfront since before the World War. Thistlethwaite, also an oldt-imer, once served as secretary to the late Tom Marshall, former Vice President of the United States.

CLOAKROOM COMMENT: You hear it whispered in Washington but little or no mention has been made of it in the public prints—that Representative Ludlow, of Indianapolis, would like to be the next Senator from Indiana . . . Intimates say Ludlow would have opposed Senator Minton for the Democratic nomination in 1940 had the direct primary bill passed the Indiana Legislature . . . He hasn't decided yet whether to attempt the fight in convention . . . Ludlow, a hard worker, arrives at his office every morning at 6 o'clock . . . He once wrote a book called "Senator Spiffledink," a satire on political bunkum.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: The middle initial in Rep. George W. Gillie's name does not stand for "Washington" as some suspect. It signifies nothing, was adopted by the Fort Wayne Congressman to distinguish him from another George Gillie . . . "Dick" Elliott, former GOP House member from Indiana, continues to hang on as Acting Controller General of the United States . . . Recently, another oncepotent Hoosier Republican, Fred S. Purnell of the Terre Haute district, was appointed one of Elliott's aides . . . Before Purnell was defeated in 1932, he ranked just behind Representative Snell in the Republican hierarchy . . . Had Snell ever been elected Speaker, Purnell would have inherited the Majority leadership . . . Indiana Democrats with juicy political plums include Pleas Greenlee, one-time patronage secretary to Governor McNutt, who is a member of the Bituminous Coal Commission, and Oswald Ryan, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

HOUSE MAKE-UP: The Indiana Congressional delegation contains five lawyers (Halleck, Grant, Harness, Springer and Johnson,) one doctor (Larrabee,) one newspaperman (Ludlow,) one manufacturer (Boehne,) one theatre operator (Schulte,) one merchant, (Crowe,) and one veterinarian (Gillie.) All five of the lawyers are Republicans.

GALLERY GAWKER: The practice of Republican freshmen remaining faithfully on the House floor during all proceedings, ready to cast their votes against New Deal proposals, is irritating Democratic leaders no end.

"They don't know they can leave the floor," jibed one New Dealer. "One of them just asked Joe Martin if he could go to lunch."

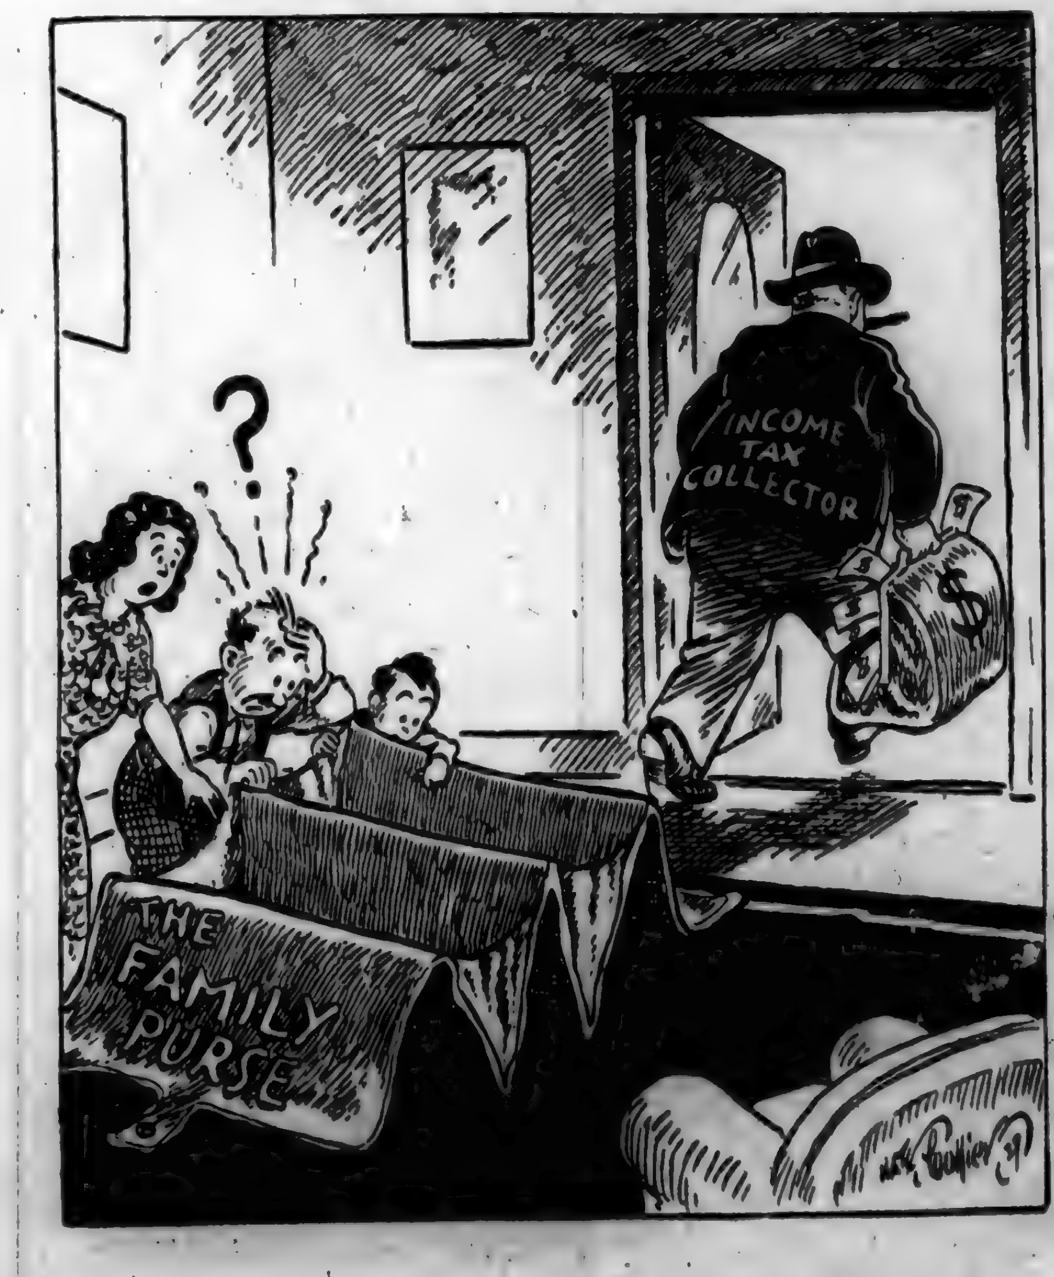
The Indiana group is typical of the entire Republican delegation. Representatives Grant, Landis and Springer have not been absent yet. And Representatives Gillie, Halleck, Harness and Johnson have missed but seven roll calls all told.

But even the GOP is not without its troubles. One of the Hoosiers was strangely missing the other day when his vote was needed. A frantic search was launched and finally the vagrant was located perched high in the visitors' gallery.

Gesticulating wildly, his colleagues signaled for him to come down. The truant member leaned far over the gallery railing.

"What's the matter?" he shouted, "Can't I vote up here?"

EMPTY AGAIN!



CELEBRATES EIGHTH BIRTHDAY

Saturday Joan Leighty was eight years old. The event was celebrated by a party, in which twelve little friends joined her, for the afternoon.

Games and music provided the enterttanment. Prizes were won by Margaret Wade and Marie Breidenbaugh.

A big birthday cake, was the center of the refreshment area, completely surrounded by sandwiches and ice cream.

The guests were much entertained by several selections on the flute, played by Grace Breidenbaugh.

Those present were Virginia Wilbern, Marilyn Wade, Patty Chorpenning, Audrey Stewart, Jackie Kees, Margaret Wade, Joan Shuff, Marie Breidenbaugh, Gwenn Wade, James Kees, Grace Breidenbaugh and Cordella Fluke.

HONOR MRS. MARY SECHLER

About 35 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Mary Sechler on Sunday in honor of her birthday. A pot luck dinner was served.

Those present were Mrs. Cora Smith and John Smith and family, of Auburn; G. W. Bowen and family, Walter Bowen and wife and Leon Sechler, of Fort Wayne; Bernard Sechler and family and Naomi Sechler, of Kendallville; Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Reichelderfer and William Foote, of Harlan; William Staman and wife, Hollis Dilley and wife, John Dilley and wife, Robert Sechler and family, and Ralph Sechler and family.

CONGRESSMAN GEO. W. WILLIE ISSUES STERN PROTEST

WASHINGTON, D. C.,—A warning that President Roosevelt is "directing us on a course of international intrigue that will surely and certainly lead the United States into a second World War" was sounded in the House of Representatives by Rep. George W. Gillie, Indiana Republican.

Declaring that "America is hovering dangerously near the brink of another European conflict," the Hoosier Congressman predicted that "unless Congress intervenes to strengthen existing neutrality legislation as a counterstroke to the current Administration effort to weaken such legislation, the history of the Wilson Administration will be repeated."

Representative Gillie charged the President with "usurping power that rightfully belongs to Congress and the people," and announced that he would condemn this action by signing the petition to discharge from committee the Ludlow War Referendum resolution.

"I urge my colleagues to join me in this effort to give the mothers of America the right to decide whether their sons and husbands shall again be sacrificed on the European slaughter block," he asserted.

Representative Gillie said that he would oppose the bill introduced in Congress this week by Senator Pittman, providing for the sale of war supplies to foreign nations on a "cash and carry" basis.

"Cash and carry sounds inviting," he said, "but how long would the cash hold out? If Europe can pay cash for new war supplies, she can pay debts incurred for purchase of supplies in the last European blood-letting.

"Millions of Americans hungry and in need can furnish customers for more than we have ever yet produced without going into the murder-merchandising business, the ultimate consequence of which must be destruction of civilization and creation of the very conditions that brought dictators to Russia, Germany and Italy."

Mr. Gillie's remarks prefaced his introduction in the Congressional Record of an editorial on neutrality from the Fort Wayne, (Ind.) News Sentinel.

Russia has just estimated her present population at 180,000,000.

2 AND 2 STILL MAKE 4

The national debt nears 45 billion dollars and the President and Secretary of the Treasury want the debt limit raised to 50 billion. Congress says "there's nothing doing."

Another deadlock exists over the 50 million dollars that the President asks for the WPA. Congress holds it back.

Congress has been in session about 2 months, and even though it does heartily disagree with the president on a lot of things, it votes appropriations easily enough for things like armament, relief, etc. When spending is so liberally authorized it means that the taxpayers will have to put up the money and that will have to be appropriated.

President Roosevelt must be doing some inward chuckling at the way Congress is playing into his hand. The new "independent" Congress needs to learn that 2 and 2 make 4. So far Congress is saving only small change.

Safetygrams BY FRED W. BRAUN The Safety Man

Pedestrian, walk with the lights. Do not ignore this warning. The lights are put up for your protection and should be used accordingly. There are just as many pedestrians trying to "beat" the lights as there are auto drivers. Why take a chance? Why invite trouble?

Contrary to all instructions issued in newspapers, magazines, and other publications, pedestrians still walk along the right-hand side of the highway.

Everyone is too prone to blame the auto driver when we as pedestrians could exercise more care at crossings and on our highways.

Life will be longer, sweeter, and safer if we use just ordinary common sense in walking and driving.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

DIED FACING DANGER

Tons of munitions blew up with an explosive roar which all but wiped out the Naval Ammunition Depot near Dover, N. J., on a hot July evening in 1926. Death and disaster followed in its wake and the reverberations of the explosion were heard twenty-five miles away.

Extraordinary precautions had been taken to protect the depot from this hazard. Every modern safeguard was provided to prevent such a disaster. A succession of blasts seared the landscape in the vicinity, and left in their wake the bodies of many victims and the charred and blackened debris of shattered buildings.

Lightning struck one of the buildings and caused the initial blast. Before the echoes of the first explosion had died away a second detonation occurred, sending shells hurtling through the air to tear gaping holes in the terrain which soon resembled No Man's land.

Shrieking sirens added their strident tones to the dull booming of bursting shells as the U. S. Marines hurried to their fire stations. Fear of imminent death in that blazing inferno could not deter them from following their traditional obedience to duty. Ten of them lost their lives and many more were injured among the more than a score of victims of the disaster.

Searchers in the ruins found the bodies of the ten marines. Pride and sorrow tempered their emotions when they noted that the position of each man indicated that he was bound toward the exploding buildings to put out the fire, and not seeking his own safety.

Following the disaster, the late President Coolidge said in part: "Devotion to duty and heroism are not confined to the battlefield. The officers and men killed and wounded were serving their country in a hazardous post and deserve all the honor that can be paid."

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1939 NUMBER 14

DISCUSS LOCATION FOR CORN HUSKING IN DeKALB COUNTY

At a meeting of the 5-Acre Corn Club Friday evening in the county agent's office in the court house, locations were discussed for fields, any one of which may be selected as the site for the 1939 DeKalb County corn husking contest. Club officials plan to have three or four fields in mind, then choose the best one for the annual contest.

Lester Boger, D. L. LaRowe, and James Rugman were named as a committee to arrange for the planting of the fields. Two grains will be planted in each hill, and the hills will be arranged to facilitate husking.

In order to compensate the farmer where the contest will be held, this year two dollars per acre will be paid for the acreage of the field, the group decided.

Another plan which will be put into effect this coming season will be the planting of ten varieties of hybrid corn in different sections of the county on various types of soil. This will be done to determine which kind of hybrid corn is adaptable to a certain soil. Next Fall the club will make a tour of the trial plantings.

Membership was also discussed. Last year there were 54 members of the 5-Acre Corn Club in this county, and officers wish to raise this figure to 100 for 1939. The deadline for registration is June 1, and at the present time 10 members have enrolled.

Officers are Orlo Deetz, of Fairfield Township, president; Virgil Korff, of Grant, and Leal Woolever, also of Grant.

TYSON—REAS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reas, of Auburn, announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Lavern, to Mr. Leo Tyson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tyson, of Butler, Indiana.

The couple was married January 17 in the home of Rev. Goldsmith, at Covington, Kentucky. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tyson, Jr., of Covington, brother of the groom and Mrs. Herbert Tyson, Jr., being a cousin of the bride.

The bride was dressed in Teal Blue with wine accessories and the groom wore oxford gray.

The young couple will make their home in Butler some time this Spring. Congratulations are now in order.

After a short business session, and a talk on, "Character Education," led by Mrs. Charles Krise, we had a spelling bee, and then games were conducted.

As the lunch was served to us, we were all expecting an Aprol fool of some kind, (wondering if we might bite into red pepper or soap, etc.,) but the joke was on us as nothing happened and it was a delightful lunch.

Every one reported having a grand time. Our next and last meeting until Fall will be at the home of Mrs. Chas. Krise, April 12th.

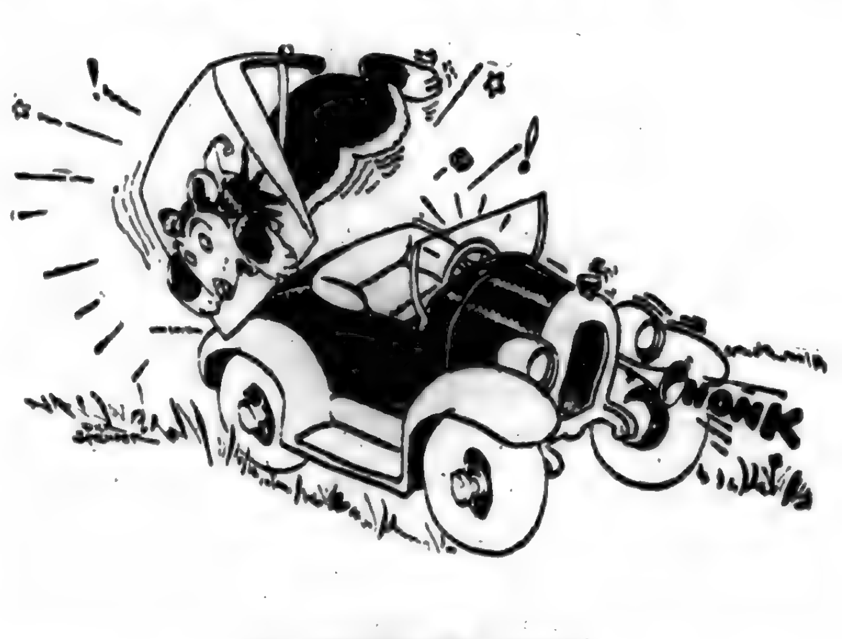
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

ACCORDING to the San Francisco Call, a young couple went camping in the Tuolumne country. They parked their car, which was equipped with an especially loud horn, beside a stream and started out on a hike. The door to the driver's seat was left open.

Pretty soon an inquisitive but, apparently, good-natured bear strolled along. He climbed into the front seat and began looking for something to eat. During the process, he accidentally parked his hindquarters on the horn button. The wail that rent the air scared the poor old bear so badly, he jumped right out through the top of the car.

SEBERT

Jessie Celestine Sebert, only daughter of James J. and Josephine Coleman, was born January 13, 1874. Her birth place was 4¼ miles northwest of St. Joe, where she spent practically her entire life.

She attended the local school and at 20 years of age was united in marriage with Frank Sebert, November 11, 1894, who preceded her in death January 5, 1934.

To this union was born one child, Mrs. Mildred McCann. Mrs. Sebert united with the Christian Church at St. Joe in 1909 and continued true to the end.

She departed this life at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Pauline Oberlin, at Butler, Indiana, March 28, 1939, at the age of 65 years, 2 months and 15 days.

She leaves of her immediate family her daughter, Mildred, with whom she had made her home part of the time since stricken with paralysis February 13, 1936, and seven grandchildren, Pauline, Donald, Jessie, Josephine, James, Marshall, Martha Jean, and three great grandchildren who cherish her in loving memory. Funeral services were conducted at the Newville Christian Church Friday, March 31, at 10:30 A. M. by Elder J. O. Rose, of Angola, assisted by Elder Milton Fronsoe, of Butler, and burial was made in the Newville Cemetery by Mayola Kinsey & Son of St. Joe.

Spring Thoughts

Spring is such a splendid Season
That Everyone likes for various reasons

Some like the air
—so warm, so soft,
Some like the sky
so lovely aloft

And some proclaim that for Nature's best, her budding flowers
eclipse the rest

Still others admire
the drops of dew
That glisten brightly when day is new

But as for me,
I like every thing
Each has its place
In the scheme of Spring

All blend together wonderfully right—
A "super-production" of sound and sight

It's the masterpiece of God's creating—
Spring, to me
gets highest rating

PEACE

The pulpit and press, schoolroom and platform have resounded through the many years with the words of peace and love. There are instances when the echo has been heard, that the need has been felt, that the words have carried weight, but this was only temporary and the echo died away. The power of the great of the earth is not equal to the call. The heeding of the lowly ones falls too far short to stop the onslaught. What manner of man will we hear when he calls, "Peace?" One man said it, and the light of an Easter morn brings its echo again to us, a world in grave need of its comfort. When a loving voice, many Easter mornings back, spoke the words of wisdom, "Peace be unto you," the sound fell through the ages to be repeated among the peoples of the earth. But to what avail! The love and fellowship of man for man, has not vanished from the world, it is here for us, who are too engrossed to remember that the wisest man has showed us the way.

We arise with the radiance of an Easter morning in our hearts, and the lesson of an Easter teaching in our homes. Is it not possible for us to carry this lesson into the rest of the year's calendar? The resurrection and the rebirth, the chance to live again, is given to us all. There is no man who would not improve himself, his morals, his entire existence, when given another chance. Life again, with its foundation based on Peace, is a satisfying picture to a hate-inspired world. It is Easter that reminds us of the need to remake, remodel and remove. We would wash the world clean and purge ourselves of petty hates, unfair practices, smallness in deceit and intrigue both individual and international. We have wanted many a time to remove the unpleasant and undesirable things in our lives and to begin anew with a fairer and wiser hand. Throughout the year we slumber in self-satisfaction and self-pity. We awake on Easter morn to righteousness, of love instead of hate, of a new life in a rebirth. Must we be born again to high aspirations with its keynote of love and peace, to die again until another Easter morning awakens our spirit?

For those of us who desire and seek the answer of what lies beyond, for those of us who wish the light and the truth, we have it with us though we do not consider it. Spoken by Him, "Peace be unto you."

Roscoe Walter, of Spencerville, was appointed in the DeKalb Circuit Court Monday as guardian of Amanda and Wm. R. Boots because of infirmities. Bond in each case was fixed at $2,500. Both petitions were filed by Merritt A. Butler.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Crick and son Bobby, of Anderson, spent Friday night and Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morr and Saturday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morr of Auburn. On Friday evening they all called on Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson at St. Joe.

ENGINE MODEL ON DISPLAY IN NEWS OFFICE WINDOW

The readers of The St. Joe News who are interested in model making, will perhaps find something to their liking, in the miniature model of a stationary steam engine, now on exhibition in the show window of our office.

The model, which is, the fourth in number built by Clarence Coburn, over a period of many years, was built of scrap material of steel, brass and bakelite.

In its construction, all machines except a hand drill, which was used in making a drill press, were made of scrap material, and consumed as much time as was expended on the model exhibited.

In a manner, the miniature is a freak, combining, as it does, principles not common in the regular type of stationary engine, used in mills and manufacturing plants; for instance, in the model you will observe the Stephenson link gear is used, which permits the reversal of the engine by means of a lever. This, however, is the system used in the construction of the steam locomotive. The locomotive has two sets of link gears, and are mostly of the Stephenson, Walseharst, or Baker pattern. Stationary engines do not employ this reverse principle.

A working model governor, patterned after the Corliss type, was hand made, with the exception of a few parts, which were purchased.

A full oiling system will be added to the model engine, if the health of the builder will permit.

GILLIE SPEAKS ABOUT RELIEF APPROPRIATION

The $100,000,000 additional WPA appropriation voted in the House of Representatives last week will be "more than sufficient" if every cent appropriated goes to persons actually in need, Rep. George W. Gillie, Indiana Republican, declared today.

Charging that President Roosevelt is attempting to give the impression that Congress is indifferent to the sufferings of the people, Representative Gillie asserted:

"Nothing is further from the truth. Enough money has been appropriated to prevent it. But that money must go to persons really in need."

The Fourth District Congressman explained that he voted for a reduced appropriation because he felt that the question at issue was "whether we shall continue to follow the wasteful, extravagant methods of the New Deal, or force a reckoning and try to make them adopt more honest and efficient methods.

He asserted that "the weaknesses in our relief set-up must be remedied. We all know only to well that money set aside for the deserving unfortunate is being wasted and stolen. Good jobs are going to politicians. The poor but needy reliefer must take what he can get.

"I want a square deal—not a raw deal—for the deserving needy, and pink slips for the chiselers, the grafters, and the political favorites."

TRIBUTE TO MRS. HAZEL STEWARD

Mrs. Florence Hazel Steward, postmistress at Spencerville for the last several years, who died Friday afternoon, March 24th, in the Methodist Hospital at Fort Wayne, was the widow of the late "Pete" Steward, who for many years was associated with the grain company of Spencerville. In the fourteen years since his death she has devoted her time to rearing her own two children, Ercel and Florence, and her niece, Jeanne Hatch, who has made her home with her since the death of her mother.

Although Mrs. Steward had not been in excellent health for some time, yet she had not been ill and had been able to attend to her work in the post office and in her home. Late on Saturday night she was stricken with a severe earache which she feared might be the beginning of an attack of mumps since there have been several cases in this community. In a very short time "flu" symptoms developed and she was confined to her bed. Suddenly on Wednesday morning her condition became very critical and on the advice of Dr. Shook, she was taken to the Methodist Hospital on Wednesday noon and Dr. Beaumont Cornell called in to make an examination. After making certain tests including a spinal puncture, the diagnoiss of meningitis was confirmed and treatment for the disease was given. Her condition failed to respond to the treament and she died on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Steward was an ardent worker in the Methodist Church and an active member of the Eastern Star. Her absence is felt by the entire community for she had been not only a very successful postmistress but also a very friendly one enjoying visiting with the patrons who called for mail. Her friendly smile and affability plus her integrity made of her a loyal, courageous friend who will be sorely missed.

In her sudden passing we are reminded of the words of the poet—

"There is no death
The stars go down to shine
Upon some other shore.
And in another jeweled crown
They shine forevermore."

The busiest man in St. Joe is that fellow who spends his time living up to his wife's expectations.

Enjoyment of Spring flowers and buds is because they last for such a short while. If they lived for six months we would fail to notice them.

Do you realize there are fewer folks who say, "there ought to be a law?" Today—there is!

We really shouldn't be too hard on the German people for not doing something about it all. Maybe if we had a gun poked in our back we wouldn't find much fault with the government either!

It is strange. A boy spends years learining how to write so you can read it, and goes into business and writes a hand that nobody can read.

Spring fashions may change in men's clothes somewhat. But men hope it never comes to where they wear their trousers up to their knees one season and drag them on the ground the next.

One thing about the birds who remain North in the Winter. They don't have to remember where they put their overshoes when they leave the house.

So often the fellow who argues that this is a free country is the same one who expects it to provide him with a living free of charge.

O. E. Ginther says he would like to be the fellow they talk about when they say, "he has more money than is good for him."

In the old days we used to think you had to have money to spend it. Today the government has shown us that we are wrong.

"It often puzzels us, how a bachelor can finish a story he started, without having some help from a wife.

Lady Astor says she is sorry the U. S. can't be included in the British Empire. We didn't dump a lot of tea overboard for nothing!

The mother who used to swear her child was six years old so he could ride for nothing, now swears he is sixteen so he can drive the family automobile.

When anybody says something is lousy, I always think of the way the farm colts suffer in the Spring when they are shedding.

With Summer not far away, we will soon see dresses on the streets that are intended to starve the moths to death.

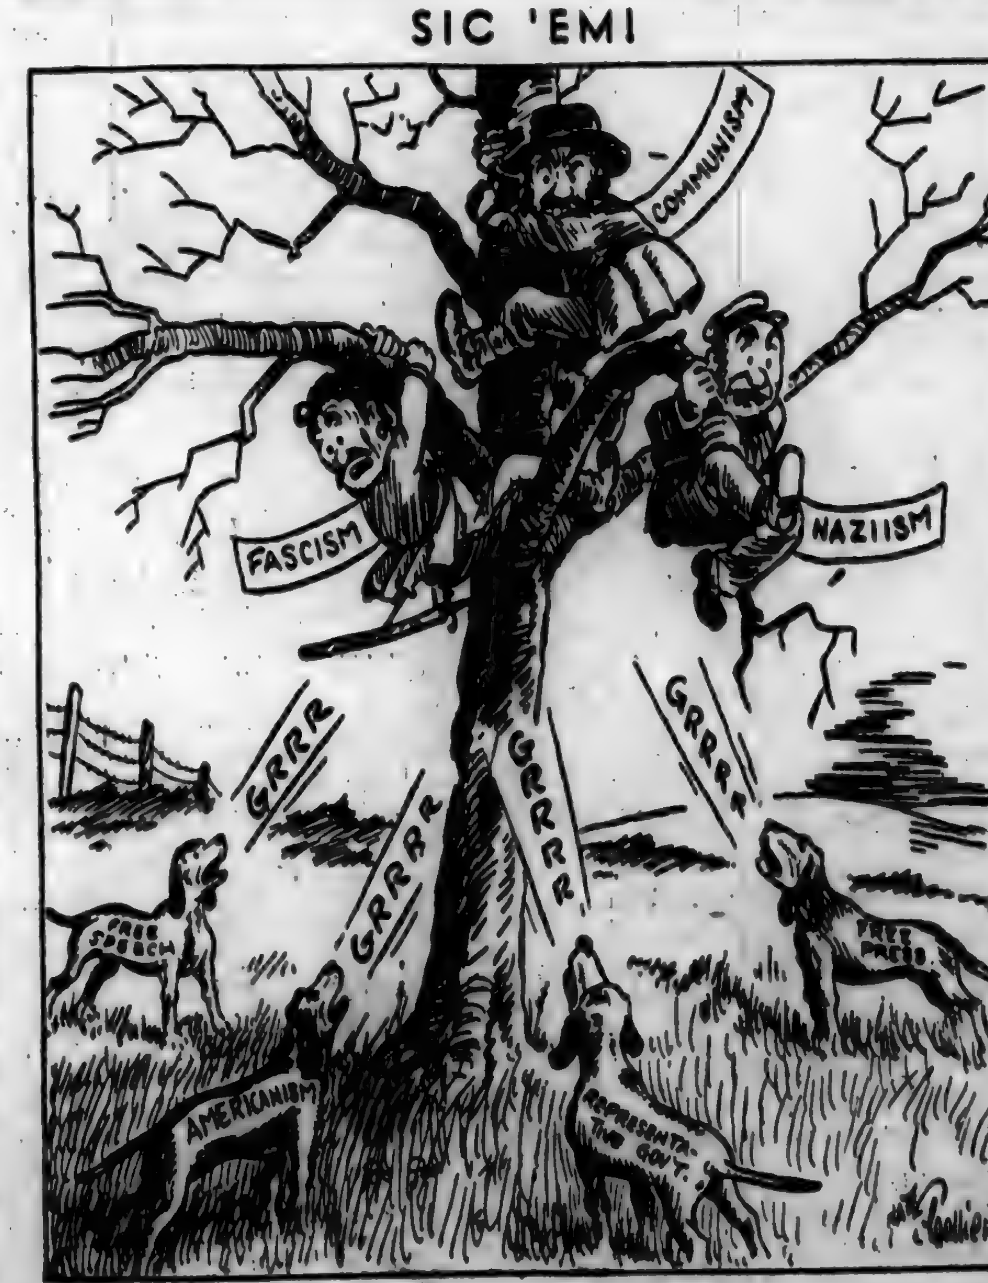
TOO CLEAN

Most every family has a woman in it who makes her life miserable and the family uncomfortable, by her constant use of cleaning. You would swear some women folks would prefer to be laid out with a mop or a broom rather than a lily, the way many of them spend their lives scrubbing and dusting. Consider the little 70-year-old lady who stood on her verandah with a broom while her house burned. Each fireman, before entering the house, got his feet brushed so he wouldn't track any dirt into the house. There are many men who feel they literally get their feet swept before they dare enter their homes. Cleanliness is next to godliness, but sometimes it is uncomfortable being so close.

NOT TOO MUCH

The various means of local St. Joe families is often a topic of conversation and comment. We often wonder how so and so can afford this and that. Did you know that the average American family spends from $1,200 to $1,500 a year? This would figure a suit about every four years for Father, seldom a telephone for the family, Mother spending $3 for a Winter and a Summer hat and the food would be lacking in delicacies. And America's living standard leads the world. This would indicate that we have much. When they speak of over-production it doesn't mean too many suits for Dad and hats for Mom, and geren vegetables and steam heat.

SIC 'EM!



FARM AND THE JEW

One of the chief criticisms of the Jew has been the impresison that he was not a producer, that he was interested in being the middle-man in a business transaction. It has been said he lives only in the cities, too keen in driving business bargains and in obtaining the largest share of business profits. These have been mentioned with the shake-up in Germany. Propaganda all about us will cause one to lose good judgement. There may be folks, with a less keen business mind forced into agricultural regions that the Jew has declined to consider. But before making any statements concerning the farm and the Jew in Germany, consider the report of the Jewish Agricultural socley in our country, which shows that there has been a steady expansion of the Jewish farming community. During last year, 1,222 persons have sought the aid of the society in obtaining jobs on the land. This is an item to count on.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Space in this column will not permit me to conduct a long quiz program, but I am going to ask one question here and wish that readers would try and answer it honestly before looking at the answer. Here is the question:

What is the common reason that some cars veer to one side when the brakes are applied?

(a) Something is wrong with the steering mechanism.

(b) Brakes are not equalized.

(c) Rear axles are loose.

What do you think is the answer? This is it:

If the brake lining grips more firmly on one wheel than on another, the car is apt to veer to one side when the brakes are applied. The car should be taken to a competent service man to have the brakes equalized.

Local Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie spent Tuesday evening with their daughter, Mrs. William Moore.

Charles Koch delivered a horse to the S-K Dairy Co., at Fort Wayne last week. This is the eighth horse sold this company for delivery purposes.

Bert Jackson is reporting that he severs his connection with the coal and lumber business after this week, and that the business has been sold. The News will give full detail of the change next week.

Rev. Charles M. Houser, of Fort Wayne, will address the Fathers and Sons, at the Lutheran Church banquet on Thursday night of next week. The committees are busy at work arranging for this annual event. An attendance of 75 is expected.

According to a report filed in the DeKalb Circuit Court H. S. Platner, administrator of the Wm. Curie estate, lot 4, block 2, part of lot 5, block 2, and part of lot 7, block 2, all in Leighty's addition to St. Joe, have been reappraised at $1,500 by Charles E. Miser and P. M. Provines.

Congress' official doctor, Dr. Calvert recently secured autographed pictures of the President and Vice-president of the U. S. Asking Vice-president Garner to autograph first, he wrote, "To Doc' Calver—Thanks for making me try to behave." After reading that inscription President Roosevelt wrote, "To Doc'—Keep on trying."—The Digest (Washington.)

The Gross Income tax provides that anyone receiving sufficient income in any quarter of a year to compute a tax of more than $10 must file a return for that quarter. Consequently, it is quite probable that many Federal workers will be required to file returns by April 15, the last day for filing returns covering income received during the first three months of 1939. Others whose tax does not exceed $10 may file quarterly if they so desire, thus making four quarterly payments instead of one large annual payment.

WIFE IS GRANTED A DIVORCE IN CIRCUIT COURT

Charging her husband with cursing and striking her, Grace Koch, of Auburn, secured a divorce from Joe Koch in the DeKalb Circuit Court late Saturday.

The custody of the child, James, 6, was given to his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Koch, but his mother is to have the boy for two weekends a month and for one month during the summer.

The couple married October 23, 1933, and parted last January 7. The defendant had filed a cross-complaint, charging infidelity and desertion, but he did not resist his wife's petition for a divorce. BOYS' STATE BUILDS LOYALTY ON UNDERSTANDING

The Hoosier Boys' State has the approval and endorsement of such outstanding citizens as: Hon. M. Clifford Townsend, Governor of Indiana; Hon. Henry F. Shirker, Lieut. Governor of Indiana; Dr. J. W. Putnam, President of Butler University; Hon. Walter E. Treanor, Judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and Hon A. Dale Eby, Judge of the Gibson Circuit Court.

By having 600 boys, themselves, run the governments of their own cities, townships, counties, and their own Boys' State, teaches them citizenship.

The Boy has a chance to be a MAN and learn for himself how his government becomes just what he makes it. Amidst all this talk of the alledged faults of the American form of government, he has a chance to LEARN FOR HIMSELF what his responsibilities will be when he becomes a man, and how he, himself, is the one who makes the government conform to his needs, that he, himself, IS the government.

He'll take part in a stimulated partisan ("Federalist" and "Nationalist" parties created for Boys' State) political campaigns, party caucuses, elections, and then he will handle for himself the affairs of the City, County, State, learning as on other can provide, just how to operate the government as a "machine to make it provide for him the most of life, liberty and happiness.

This entire program is non-partisan. Problems considered will be free from propaganda relating to any existing political party, its sole purpose is to enable the boy to grasp hold of the government tasks his elders have to handle. It is strictly non-military.

Boys of 16 to 18 years, inclusive, may be sponsored by a parent or guardian or by any Legion Post, Auxiliary Unit, service club, or other business or civic group; any unit may sponsor as many boys as it wishes until the total of 600 is reached. Entries close when 600 boys are enrolled.

ALL for $12.00, and transportation to and from Indianapolis, Indiana. The boy will see the State House where the laws of Indiana are made and adjudged. He will meet the governor and those others who make and carry out our laws. And, under most carefully selected American Legion monitors, aided by state and national men of experience. The Indiana Bar Association and noted judges, he will have a week of actual government experience and responsibility, mixed with sports and athletics designed only to emphasize sportsmanship and appreciation of the "other fellow," all camp expenses paid for TWELVE DOLLARS.

Place and Time, Indiana State Fair Grounds, at Indianapolis, Indiana, June 17 to 24. Sponsors must transport boys to and from Boys' State.

The boys are divided into "cities," "counties," and all participate in state government with experienced adult monitors, on the ground 24 hours a day.

Activities of the boys include forensics, athletics, games, sports, music, all emphasizing sportsmanship and citizenship. "Voters" registration and the election of all officers of city, township, county and state. Party caucuses for candidates and policies. Taking the oath of office and its meaning, meetings of city councils, town and county boards, and state legislature for consideration and enactment of laws. Execuition of laws. Permits, building and zoning, health measures, police and courts handling complaints and requests of "citizens." Intensive instruction in "camparative government," courts, and modern police methods will be featured this year.

"Government Practice Schedule"

Saturday: Register in; medical inspection; grouping as to parties, (Federalist and Nationalist;) precincts, wards, townships, cities, counties, and the state; selection of precinct committeemen and temporary "party" chairmen.

Sunday: Religious services; recreation; party conventions; nominating of candidates; key note speeches and political speeches by Boy Party orators; inspirational addresses.

Monday: General election; law school; police school; administration of oath of office to Supreme and Appellate Court Judges by Indiana Supreme Court Justice, and Inauguration of Governor of "Boys' State." State officials receive oath of office.

Friday: "Comparative governments" "Representative' 'and "Totalitarian" governments contrasted; conclusion of business by government departments; filing of all public documents; bar examinations; police examinations; highest rated governmnt units will administer government in Indianapolis, Marion County, and State of Indiana. Stunt night—Friday night.

Who Can Go?

Boys 16, 17, and 18 years of age, who are of good moral character, and can pass the physical examination.

How Do You Get In?

Any unit, parent or guardian sponsoring one or more boys will fill out an application blank for each and mail it with $12.00 per boy to the address on the blank.

What To Take To Camp

One handbag, with 2 suits of underwear; 1 pair pajamas; 6 handkerchiefs; 3 face towels and 3 bath towels, with name marked on them; 2 blankets; sheet if you wish; usual shaving and toilet articles; sufficient shirts (usually 3; 1 light sweater or "lumber jacket;" track or sports uniforms and shoes, any light sports equipment at hand; bedroom slippers; note book and pencils; musical instruments and camera if you wish. No facilities for golf. Bring materials for stunt night. A Boy's State Band will be organized. Bring instruments if you wish to participate in this activity.

CHARLES A. BAIRD

Indiana News from Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Announcement of Paul McNutt's presidential aspirations in a letter from Frank McHale, his campaign manager, to Democartic members of the House and Senate, met with a cool reception on Capitol Hill . . . Principal reason is that sentiment is rapidly growing for John Nance Garner . . . Supporters of the Vice-President don't want competition . . . Senator Minton is really the only genuine McNutt booster in Congress . . . Senator Van Nuys' interest seems to be lukewarm . . . Postmaster General Farley makes faces whenever McNutt's name is mentioned . . . He'd as soon see Hopkins in the White House as the tall, tan and terrific Philippine Commissioner.

GENIAL JIM: When members of the Indiana Congressional delegation met in the office of James A. Farley to request the issuance of a special postage stamp in honor of James Whitcomb Riley, the Postmaster General said:

"I'm for you, boys."

The occasion marked the first meeting between Genial Jim and Rep. George W. Gillie, who defeated his namesake, Former Congressman James I. Farley, in the last election.

WABASH BLUES: Senator Sherman Minton was scheduled to give a 15-minute talk over a Washington radio station last week. When the appointed hour arrived Shay was nowhere to be found. The distressed announcer explained that the Junior Senator from Indiana was unfortunately delayed. He began playing phonograph records to kill time. A few minutes later he broke in to announce that Mr. Minton still hadn't arrived at the station. Listeners were amused. The announcer was nervous. In a sad voice he announced that the next recording would be—"Wabash Blues."

HOOSIER PRIDE: When aspersions were cast on the quality of Indiana dairy products on the floor of the House a short time ago, Rep. Charlie Halleck came quickly to the defense of the Hoosier cow—and other Indiana representatives backed him up. Rep. Gerald Landis, however, went Halleck one better this week. After giving Washington's famed Japanese cherry blossoms the once over, his Hoosier pride asserted itself. "Humph!" he said to reporters, "These cherry blossoms don't hold a candle to Indiana apple and peach blossoms for real beauty."

Washington recalled that it was a Hoosier—Former Congressman Virginia Jenckes—who once suggested that the cherry trees be removed as a protest to Japanese aggressions.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Rep. George W. Gillie played host this week to several groups of high school students, here for a glimpse of Washington in cherry blossom time . . . More than fifty came from Fort Wayne . . . The Fourth District Congressman maintains a guest book, keeps the welcome sign on his office door at all times . . . Folks from home are provided with special passes to the House and Senate, and courtesy cards to the White House, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and other buildings . . . Representatives Gillie is still new enough in Washington that he enjoys showing friends the sights . . . He and Mrs. Gillie make regular Sunday trips to places of interest in and about the Capital.

WONDERING: Hoosier Republicans are wondering what Jim Watson has up his sleeve. The lovable former Senator, who took a licking in the last GOP state convention, has invited some thirty prominent Indiana Republicans to be his guests at a dinner Friday night—a fancy affair with tails, top hats and all the riggings. Is it just a friendly get-together? Or does the old fox have a secret political ambition he wants to promote? Your guess is as good as mine.

ABSENT MINDED: A Midwest Congressman leaned back in his chair in a House committee room recently, smiled affably at his grinning colleagues, lighted a cigar and absentmindedly snapped his galluses. "Well, I'll be darned!" he exclaimed in surprise. He had forgotten his coat.

For going through the entire year of 1938 without a single traffic fatality, 157 cities with populations between 5,000 and 10,000 were placed on the Honor Roll of the National Traffic Safety Contest. The honor roll cities in Indiana are Sullivan, Kendallville, Columbus, Lebanon, Plymouth, Auburn, Hartford City and Valparaiso.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shroyer attended the funeral of thelatter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Chas. Wolcott, at Degraff, Ohio, on Friday. Eighteen estates were closed by action of the DeKalb Circuit Court, during the February term, which ended Saturday. Also approved were the partial report in one estate, the final reports in two guardianships and the current reports in two guardianships. Ten divorces were granted, 7 in favor of wives and 3 for husbands. 31 cases are pending and 4 separate maintenance suits are pending.

Conservation Clubs of the county were delivered quail Tuesday morning for distribution. Each club received three boxes of three pairs each, to be released in their respective territories. The clubs received their portion at the court house square at 7:45, and representatives drove in from over the county. This new method of release has proven a very satisfactory way in getting an even distribution.

They say that when business is good you ought to "ADVERTISE SOME TO GET MORE" and that when business is bad you ought to "ADVERTISE MORE TO GET SOME." Which is mighty logical advise. When business is poor that is the very time you ought to increase your advertising so that you can get some of the business that is to be had. When business is limited there is every reason why you should work harder for a bigger share of it. Few fellows realize this, but those who do usually emerge from the period of dull business with a lot more profits than the fellow who just throws up his hands and quits. Go after business if you want it—and the modern way to go after business is to advertise.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

FIRED FIRST SHOT

A German launch, with a cutter in tow, was speeding across the harbor of Guam on the fateful morning of April 6, 1917, the day that America entered the World War. Out on the bay lay the interned warship Cormoran, its Teutonic crew unaware that President Wilson had just signed the war resolution.

Suddenly a shot whistled across the bow of the launch, followed by two others. The first shot was fired by Corporal Michael Chockie, one of a party of fifteen U. S. Marines, commanded by Lieutenant W. A. Hall, of the Navy. Every seafaring man understands this manifest command to "heave to." The enemy launch immediately surrendered.

Meanwhile the Governor of Guam had sent his aide in a barge to the interned Cormoran, demanding her surrender. He was complying with orders received from the Navy Department at Washington, when word of our entry into the war had been flashed to the faraway naval station in the Pacific.

Soon the aide boarded the warship and informed her captain of the surrender order. But the Germans had anticipated his errand, and the Americans scarcely had time to leave the vessel before it was blown up by its own crew. For the next half-hour small boats in the harbor were picking up survivors.

More than six months later, on October 23, the men of Battery C., Sixth Field Artillery, First Division, hauled a gun up on the firing line near Bathlemont, and sent a shell screaming in the general direction of the German lines. It was America's first hostile shot in France.

But the bullet that Corporal Chockie, of the U. S. Marines, fired across the bow of the German launch at the isolated naval station in the Pacific on April 6, was America's first shot in the World War.

St. Joe Celebrates Easter

In the three churches of St. Joe, there were three hundred and nineteen in Sunday School attendance on Easter Sunday. This is more people attending a religious service, at any one time, than has been known for some years back. It seems that the citisenry of St. Joe are becoming more church conscious now than in the past, which, by no means, is to be taken as a bad omen, for this city. Only one deduction can be made of this unusual interest in the affairs of the church—the people of this city are weighing the church in its right light.—Religious observer.

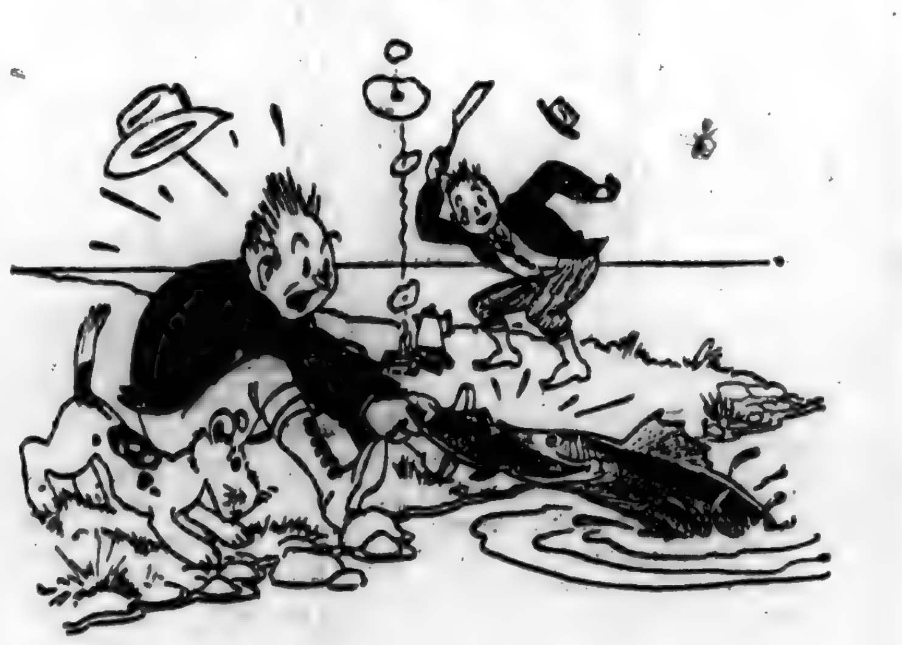
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

ACCORDING to a press release from the Canadian National Railways, Messrs. William Bergman and Alfred Crawley of Fort Frances, Ontario, were on a timber cruising trip north of Mine Center, when they decided to camp for the night on the shores of Nora Lake. Crawley declared that a lake trout would taste mighty good for supper. He started to fish and before very long caught a five-pounder. Immediately he began cleaning the fish. Before Crawley realized what had happened, a big great northern pike shot out of the weeds and grabbed the half-cleaned trout away from him. Good-by supper!

NEW OFFICERS TO BE ADDED TO THE COUNTY FEDERATION OF CLUBS

Two new vice presidents will be added to the officers of the DeKalb County Federation of Clubs, when the revised constitution has been adopted. The County Constitution has been adopted. The County Convention, which will be held in St. Joe Lutheran Church April 21, will vote on the new order at that time.

The present county organization consists of a County President, who is Mrs. John Leighty, St. Joe; Mrs. Herman Brown, Auburn, vice president, and Mrs. Frank Curie, secretary and treasurer, St. Joe.

Under the proposed plan, all officers will be elected for a two year term. "The First Vice President shall be Dean of Departments. The Second Vice President, Dean of Extension. The third Vice President, who shall be chosen from a Junior Club, or a Junior department of a Senior Club, shall be Dean of Junior Departmnt." This plan follows the District organization.

The First Constitution as the basis of the County organization was put to active use in 1924. Mrs. George Beugnot, of Auburn, was first County President, and this year, she, as parliamentarian, will pilot the new plan to successful adoption.

The revision work of the Constitution will be in charge of Mrs. C. H. Garver, Mrs. W. T. Morgan, and Mrs. M. E. Klinger, all from the three Federated Clubs in Garrett.

A BILL FOR IT

Small business men are described by Senator Mead, of New York, as having assets of less than 5 million dollars each. Some of these New Yorkers shoot high. Mead says these "small" fellows are "desperate for lack of credit facilities." He has a bill for it—one that would fix 'em up with long-term-loans guaranteed by the Government—something that the banks don't provide—a sort of Santa Clause arrangement.

"SAFETY" AS DISCUSSED BY MR. JAMES ADAMS, OF COLUMBIA CITY, AT SPENCERVILLE

Wednesday evening, under the sponsorship of the American Legion, Mr. James Adams, former chairman of the Indiana State Highway Commission, delivered an address on "Safety' to school children and parents at the regular P. T. A. meeting. In his discussion he brought out the following highlights:

"Indiana has more roads per square mile than any country in the world and more roads per square mile than any other state in the United States with the exception of two states. Three fourths of Indiana roads are improved highways. There are enough improved roads in Indiana to stretch from New York City to San Francisco three times.

"There are more than 30,000,000 motor cars. The expansion in the motor industry in the last 15 years has meant increased employment for thousands of workers in the motor industry in allied industries, garages, on highways, etc. Thirty-five to forty per cent of all steel is used in the motor car industry.

"In 56 B. C. Julius Caesar took his Legions to England and built a system of roads, very narrow so that vehicles could pass only at intervals. In 1837 Robert Lee, a young graduate engineer was sent to St. Louis to study emergency flood controling the very same means of travel as Julius Caesar had to use, chiefly horseback. In the last 33 years means have chaitged to revolutionise our whole life. We have tried to use our roads for modern means of travel.

"America has had five major wars with a total amount of Americans killed being 300,000. In the last fifteen years over 500,000 deaths and over fifteen million injuries occurred on highways by motor vehicles. In years to come historians will look upon this period of history with amasement. According to Standard Oil Co. statistics, over $462,000,000 is paid in automobile insurance against accidents, over half as much as was spent for construction and maintenance of highways in the United States. Statistics show there were 18,000 people killed and 450,000 injured in Indiana alone in the last fifteen years. In the next twenty years, one out of every five people now living in Indiana will be killed or injured in traffic accidents according to past records.

"Cars today are made to travel as fast as 120 miles per hour. A car going 60 miles per hour goes 88 feet per second. In studying highway casualties one finds that when motor cars hit today they hit to kill. The hitting velocity of a car going twenty miles per hour is equal to the impact of a fall off a one story building; at 60 miles per hour it equals the fall off a 12 story building.

"Statistics must be fair. Mail order companies are able to weigh incoming mail each day and tell the total sales for the day figuring from averages they have established. In 1933, seventeen minutes elapsed between deaths on the highways; in 1937, only thirteen minutes elapsed. If the people killed in Indiana in the last fifteen years were placed in rough boxes and laid side by side they would cover a 52 acre farm. Each person thinks—'but it won't be me.' What can I do about it? 'Advocate safety on the highway!'

"There are 11,000 bridges only sixteen feet wide in the state of Indiana built by our forefathers but not adequate for our traffic today. The most fatal age in traffic accidents is sixteen to twenty-four. They provide the greatest amount of cannon fodder. Our problem is to build highways adequate for today's need. The safest highway for the future is the divided highway. Five years ago Adolph Hitler started an entire system of divided highways with overpasses at every crossroads and roads leading to every principal city. This was done for war purposes. On those already constructed in Indiana statistics show them safer and this system is rapidly being adopted. In 1934 property loss and time lost in earning value through accidents had a value of five or six times as much as the value of all the gold mined in the world in 1933. We have a big problem but there is a ray of hope. If each person exercises a little more self-restraint we can still cut down motor car accidents."

What is the proper thing to do when the rear wheels of your car start to skid?

(a) Turn front wheels in same direction rear wheels are sliding.

(b) Turn wheels in opposite direction from skid.

(c) Throw out clutch and apply brakes.

What is the correct thing to do, and what is the safe thing to do?

Point your wheels in the direction the car is skidding; this will help you to get out of the skid.

Receipt For A Happy Day

Take a little dash of water cold
And a little leaven of prayer,
A little bit of sunshine gold
Dissolved in the morning air.
Add to your meal some merriment
And a thought for kith and kin,
And then as your prime ingredient
A plenty of work thrown in.
But spice it with the essence of love
And a little whif of play.
Let a wise old look and a glance above
Complete the well made day.

Redbud (left) blooms first, follow ed by the white and pink dogwood.

Weekend trips into southern Indiana have an increasing attraction for Hoosier motorists at this season when the hillsides are dotted with redbud, dogwood and other flowering native trees in a Spring show that rivals the better-known autumn coloring.

Blooming of the redbud and dogwood marks the northward advance of Spring, with approximately a week's difference in time between Evansville and Indianapolis, and another week lapsing between the appearance of the blooms in the central and northern parts of the state. Both the redbud and dogwood are found extensively thorughout Indiana, some of the finest specimens being located in Dunes state park along the southern tip of Lake Michigan.

The wooded hillsides of Clifty Falls, Spring Mill and Brown County state parks and the more level landscape at McCormick's Creek are thickly spotted with redbud, dogwood and other flowering trees. Many of these trees are found at the Morgan-Monroe state forest and at other parks and forests throughout the southern part of the state.

Highways through wooded areas take on a new beauty with the flowering of the redbud and dogwood each Spring with the result that an increasing number of motorists are planning weekend trips to see and enjoy these colorful blossoms. In the eastern part of the state, redbud and dogwood are found in profusion along the Whitewater River valley; Road 135, south and Roads 67 and 57 southwest also lead the motorist in sections where these trees are found in large numbers.

Both the dogwood and redbud are encouraged and protected at the state parks, forests and game preserves with thousands of these attractive flowering trees planted annually. Both the redbud and dogwood are regarded as valuable sources of natural food for birds and other wildlife.

Hoosier archers celebrate the redbud and dogwood blooming seasons with an annual Redbud Archery Meet at Brown County state park, the 1939 event to be held on April 16.

The woman who eagerly awaits the first robin, doesn't do any cheering when the first fly shows up.

We often develop faults within ourselves that cause our acquaintances to dislike us. It is then we remark, "How people change."

A lot may be expected of us, but there is one thing certain, we only have to live each day at a time.

THE GARNER BOOM

Political polls show that Vice-President Garner is in high favor for the Democratic nomination in 1940. The public seems to have an idea that Garner is opposed to the New Deal and that he is a stumbling block in the way of President Roosevelt. Some people want to reward him.

If this is correctly interpreted as the existing general impression, Garner's chances are likely to fade, inasmuch as there is nothing to indicate that he is laying straws in the way of the President. In fact, the white-haired Texan has worked out most of the compromises between the liberals and conservatives. His success may be due to the fact that his own inclinations are about half-way between the opposite ends in the Democratic party.

Garner "h a s good hard-headed sense," and is a thorough Democrat with a peace mission of his own, to prevent serious splits in his party.

He will be a little too old to become a successful candidate in 1940, and getting excited about the Texan's prospects seems to be altogether premature.

NEW DEAL APPEASERS ARE SORRY, NOW

Undoubtedly Secretary of Commerce Hopkins thought that the President would rush to his support in clinching his "appeasement" plans to bring business and the Administration together. The President not only said he didn't like the word "appeasement," but apparently he didn't like the idea either. So, poor Mr. Hopkins will have to roll some new kind of marbles if he expects to play successfully the game that he introduced when he became Secretary of Commerce.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is also reported to have met with reproof resulting from his plans to "help recovery."

The New Dealers "appeasement" and "help recovery" plans fell apart when the President insisted that there was nothing to call for appeasement. He would brook no compromises along such lines.

NIGHT WALKING

One of our states has introduced a piece of legislation requiring pedestrians to carry red reflectors when walking on the highways at night. There will be a problem in enforcing such a law but it is a step in controlling night traffic fatalities. There is usually an increased speed at night in zones carefully marked. It is difficult to see someone on the road dressed in dark clothes. Black pavements and bad weather conditions tend to give the pedestrian less of a chance during the dark hours. There are more drunken drivers at night and this is an important factor in traffic accidents as all News readers know. There are rules governing those riding bicycles at night and a pedestrian is harder to see than a cyclist.

OUR HEROES

Oh to be as popular as the wooden dummy named McCarthy! It is the famed Charlie who recently mowed them down when he arrived by train in New York, with his mouth-piece Edgar Bergen. A headliner, the nation's favorite radio artist, the love of young and old, this toast of the town has won all hearts. When you realize that Walt Disney has had some of his drawings hung in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, that a cartoon named Mickey Mouse shares honors with Charlie McCarthy and that a contented Ferdinand the Bull is coming into his own, you know that Americans are pleased with the simple and wholesome things. We rather like bowing to a mouse and a wooden dummy than to a soldier. We would rather smell the flowers with Ferdinand than watch the marching feet.

FREE SPEECH

Americans pride themselves upon their Bill of Rights which gives them the privilege of free speech. And there are but few Americans who do not exercise the privilege and many who abuse it. There was a recent meeting in New York and several other large cities, where pro-Nazi Germans gathered to instigate and excite class hatred. The meeting was held without objection of the public officials and there was slight interference by outside forces. There are many public-minded Americans who object to such a gathering. Of course, we must remember that another Americanism is the right of assembly and to prevent it would be to play into alien hands. One cannot be surprised if citizens do make a demonstration against a group, with such a purpose. America has been very lenient in allowing utterances against their government, but they will not take too much. They realise that each man has the right to state his opinions regarding national conditions, but will these Americans remain passive when a meeting tries to destroy a government where free speech is made possible? What to do in the matter of permitting such gatherings is a real problem for public officials to solve.

WITH JUSTICE

We are apt to overlook real-life drama while we read of tales of adventure. The true story of a chief of a police force who had served eleven months in a penitentiary for embezzlement fifteen years before he served as a police officer, makes good reading. This man, after serving his prison sentence in one state, went to another to live. Here he won the respect of the citizens and eventually became chief of the police department. As such things go, one day the people were made aware of the previous record of their chief. In many communities this would have been the end of the story. But this city forgot the past record and remembered the present record of service, honesty and integrity of their chief. He was voted to continue in office. There are many cases of men beginning over again, of living a new life. They often need our help.

There is one fishing practice that has been common in the past that will be illegal from now on. That is the setting of several poles along the river and running them like you would a trap line. Strictly speaking, this may have been illegal in the past but the new laws and interpretations are welcomed by us who like to fish the old fashioned way.

Kenneth Butler had four cows killed Friday night at the Wabash crossing, just west of the Saylor farm home, by a passenger train going south at 5:30. He was bringing them from the pasture west of tracks, and did not hear the train until too late to stop the cattle from crossing. The animals were killed outright. They were appraised at $60 each.

The U. S. Senate election committee selected to investigate the election immorality of Indiana as requested by Raymond E. Willis, has refused to make any probe into conditions, and with 9 New Dealers and 2 Republicans on the committee, we could not expect any other decision. Mr. Willis says there is a court of final resort, and that is the bar of public opinion before which, in due time, these matters will be brought.

Trees produced in the state forest nurseries are being shipped to approximately twelve hundred Hoosier landowners for Spring plantings. This is a record number of shipments from the state nurseries, about 955 orders having been filled in 1938. The nurseries at Clark County and Jackson County state forests are furnishing six million trees for Spring plantings, with about four million of the trees to be planted on land other than areas operated by the Department of Conservation.

Indiana News from Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Leading Indiana Republicans in the Capital gathered last week-end at the swank Mayflower Hotel to break bread with Former Senator Jim Watson, who was once described by Frank Kent, Washington columnist, as a "lovable old humbug."

Senator Jim, who has reached the three-quarter of a century mark, was in fine fettle. He was in his element. He bubbled and blustered joyously and took full advantage of the opportunity to slap backs, swap earthy jokes and reminisce about old times.

WATSON opened the dinner by denying that the gathering had any political significance. "It's just a friendly get-together of loyal Hoosiers," he announced. "Regardless of what the newspapers may say, I am not a candidate for public office. And I am not promoting any candidate's ambitions. I only asked you folks here to tell you how proud I am of the Republican Party and how much I love you all for your part in the Indiana victory last Fall."

ONLY DEMOCRAT at the dinner was Mark Thistlethwaite, Washington corresopndent for the Indianapolis News and one-time secretary to Former Vice-President Tom Marshall. Only member of the Indiana Congressional delegation not present was Rep. Gerald Landies, who was out of the city.

DINNER GUESTS included Representatives George Gillie, Bob Grant, Charlie Halleck, Noble Johnson, Raymond Springer, and Forrest Harness; Dick Elliott, Acting Comptroller General; Fred S. Purnell, former Congressman; Burrell Wright, of the Indiana GOP Central Committee; Bob Lyons, chain store executive; Tom Littlepage, Washington attorney; Everett Watkins, Indianapolis Star correspondent, and the writer. The ladies were there, too, including Mrs. Jim Watson, who has just returned from Florida.

WRIGHT came down from Indianapolis with his step-son, Pete Aiman. During their visit here Watson took them over to the Capital to meet Vice-President John Garner. They flew back to Indiana with Mr. and Mrs. Lyons in the Lyons' private plane.

DURING the dinner, which lasted late into the night, impromptu talks were given by Halleck, Watkins, Thistlethwaite, Lyons, Wright, and Littlepage.

SEVERAL of the speakers eulogized the former Senator, a power in Indiana politics for nearly forty years, and one of them remarkd that Watson still had a place in the hearts of thousands of friends in Hoosierland. Old Jim wryly replied that he might have hosts of friends in Indiana but that he could count on very few votes.

NO MENTION was made of Watson's unsuccessful bid for the GOP Senate nomination last year. And there was little talk of the possible line-up of candidates in the next Senate race. There were too many potential Senators present. Halleck, Springer, and Harness have all been prominently mentioned for the nomination.

PREDICTIONS, of course, were freely made of a sweeping Republican victory in Indiana next year. Needless to say, a jolly good time was had by all.

Why not mention how many are in the other two classes also? Better make a recount, as we still contend our statement is true. If necessary, we can furnish names. Furthermore—we said in Newville, not Newville Township.

Conflagrations are not as uncommon as you may assume. Since 1900, in America, 100 have spread wide devastation.

So...it can't happen here?

The danger of conflagrations, with their great loss of life and property, would be even greater than it is . . . were it not for the vigilant efforts of 200 capital stock* fire insurance companies. Hundreds of communities enjoy greater safety from fire because the local authorities use the free assistance of the public-safety service rendered voluntarily by these capital stock insurance companies . . . through Regional Boards in smaller towns and in larger communities through The National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Surveys are made by Fire Prevention Engineers to detect conflagration hazards . . . water supplies and fire-fighting facilities are checked and tested . . . better fire laws are sponsored . . . safety standards for building construction are formulated . . . in a hundred different ways, these capital stock fire insurance companies are constantly working to prevent fire, to save life and property.

They also apply the safety principle to their own financial responsibilities . . . by maintaining adequate cash surpluses in addition to their capital and premium reserves, to back up their policies . . . thus protecting your interests before and after fire occurs.

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, car and other property the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

TURKEY PRODUCTION ON THE INCREASE

Turkey production in Indiana, as in other mid-western states, has passed through some remarkable developments during the last 10 years. There has been a decided trend away from numerous small flocks of turkeys, which were given free range on the farm, and in their place the commercial and semi-commercial turkey flocks have developed to the point where they supply a large share of our annual turkey production.

With this shift has come an increase in the size of turkey breeding flocks. These breeding flocks are now fed grain and mash rations and confined to a limited area and may even be provided with artificial lights—they are handled much the same as breeding flocks of chickens are handled. During this period there has been a decided swing towards artificial incubation of turkey eggs and, of course, to the use of artificial brooding methods and equipment.

Turkey growers have been quick to grasp the importance of feeding high protein starting mashes to their poults and the more progressive growers have ceased to depend on grasshoppers and sunshine for the turkey's Summer menu. In practically every case, it has been found advisable to keep the chickens and turkeys separated thru out the growing period and there has been considerable interest aroused as to what home grown forage crops will supply best range for the young turkeys. Alfalfa and clover are commonly used as perennials, while rape and soybeans are probably the most popular of the annual forage crops used for turkey range.

Many of the changes which have taken place have actually resulted in a lower production cost. If this tendency continues producers may logically expect the continued expansion of turkey outlets and marketes and the time may come when turkeys will be looked upon as a staple item of food instead of a special item for holiday menus.

SAYS WIFE ABANDONED HIM

A charge of abandonment is made by Stanley Hallabaugh, of Spencer Township, in suing Emily Hallabaugh in the DeKalb Circuit Court, for a divorce.

Both had been married before their marriage took place February 24, 1933. The plaintiff says he gave his wife a comfortable home, but that she complained about the finances and was unwilling to adjust herself to farm life. She left July 25, 1935, for Washington, D. C., and was back for only one day afterward. He thinks she is now living in Los Angeles, California.

C. E. McClintock is the plaintiff's attorney.

FATHERS AND SONS BANQUET ATTENDED BY OVER FIFTY

The annual Father and Son banquet, sponsored by the Brotherhood of St. Mark's Lutheran Church was held on Thursday evening, April 13th.

Over fifty men and boys gathered in the church sanctuary and after Ralph Sechler, general chairman, had contacted the ladies who were preparing the supper and reported that all was ready the Fathers and Sons lost no time in marching to the basement, where the ladies of the Friendly Circle Class, with the help of some of the girls from the Young People's Class served the supper.

After supper they all returned to the sanctuary and listened to the following program arranged by Leslie Wilbern and Fred Leighty.

Invocation by the pastor, Rev. Frank Stevenson.

Accordion Trio, Dorothy Roberts, and Verna Thomas.

Saxophone Duet, Leslie Wilbern and DuWayne Kinsey.

Remarks about the work of the Brotherhood, D. B. Ridgway.

The speaker of the evening, Dr. C. M. Houser, Pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church of Fort Wayne, was introduced by Fred Leighty. Dr. Houser spoke for nearly one hour and pointed out what should be the real duty of the Father toward the Son and the Son toward the Father.

Dr. Houser's address was enjoyed by all present and every man and boy received much food for thught.

Cornet Solo ...Mary Louise Woodcox.

Piano Solo .... Earl Kinsey.

RULES AND CLASSES FORMULATED FOR THE NORTH-EASTERN INDIANA JERSEY PARISH AND REGIONAL GUERNSEY SHOW

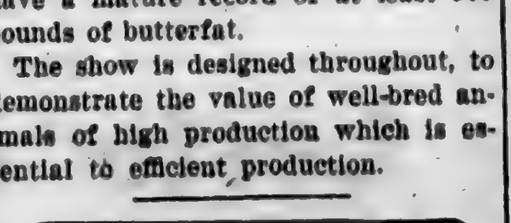
The classes and rules governing the Northeastern Indiana Jersey Parish and Regional Guernsey Show were formulated at a meeting on Wednesday of the Directors of the Northeastern Indiana Jersey and Guernsey Breeders. Professor E. T. Wallace, Purdue University Extension Specialist and Mr. H. E. Dennison, Field Man for the American Jersey Cattle Club also attended this meeting and helped formulate plans.

This District Dairy Show is to be held in connection with the DeKalb County Free Fall Fair on October 3 to 7 inclusive. This show is distinctly an educational display of the best in dairying. No cash premiums will be paid, the exhibitors will receive some cash to partially defray trucking expense. The money will be pro-rated to the exhibitor, regardless of the placing in the show-ring, upon the basis of so much per mile the animal was trucked.

An outstanding class to be shown is the Life-time production class which will include all cows having produced 2000 pounds of butterfat or more. These cows are to be exhibited to the public, depicting what their production means in equipment and other goods purchased.

In the Bull classes only those bulls are eligible to be shown whose dams have a mature record of at least 500 pounds of butterfat.

The show is designed throughout, to demonstrate the value of well-bred animals of high production which is essential to efficient production.



Frequently automobiles coming out of a private road or driveway feel that they have undisputed right to enter the main thoroughfare. Recently, this question was sent to me:

"Does a driver of a car entering a street or road from a private road or driveway have the right of way over all vehicles approaching on the street or road?"

No—decidedly not.

The driver should stop to see that the street or road is reasonably clear. The driver of a vehicle on the street or road may not know there is a private road or driveway there.

You are not in the line of traffic when you come on to a road from a private driveway, so until you are sure you can get into the line of traffic without an accident, wait—be alert—be careful.

IT'S SMART TO DRIVE CAREFULLY.

IT ISN'T often that you can go fishing and boat a bear, but that is what happened to Dr. I. H. Alexander, president of the Izaak Walton league of Pittsburgh, while fishing in Lake Timagami. The motor quit just in front of a swimming bear which proceeded to climb in the bow as the Doctor's two pals dived over the stern. The Doctor, who couldn't swim well enough to reach shore, retreated to the stern, paddle in hand, and awaited developments. The bear settled down, the Doctor quietly paddled to shore and Mr. Bruin departed without paying for the ride!

FIND SHEEP KILLED

Two fine sheep were found dead Sunday at the Glen Cole farm home and with front legs cut off. Nearby was a block and hatchet used by the vandals. They went on to the woods where they found a number of trees had been cut down, some cut into and others with great holes bored into them. The sheriff is investigating the clues found.

FARM HOME ENTERED LAST THURSDAY NIGHT

When Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Monroe and family returned home from St. Joe Thursday night, they found their home completely up-side down, as thieves had entered and ransacked every drawer in the house, and even the clothing hanging in the closets.

While they realized only three cents from Mrs. Monroe's purse, they sure did their best to locate money in the home.

WASHINGTON COMMENT

The passing of Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, was marked by sorrow and regret, among those who differed with him politically, as well as among those of his own political faith. He had a ready wit, an affable personality ,and many other characteristics which commended him as an associate and as a companion for life's rainy days. His sources of appeal for popular favor were no less marked. He had a war record, was an orator of the polished, old-time school, and possessed the outward badges that are accepted at sight as indicating distinction. The things that contributed to the popularity of Senator Lewis should not be permitted to obscure his real worth. Entering the Senate in 1913, he had in that body a long and useful career, his wide knowledge of foreign affairs being recognized and acknowledged. His work was terminated at the age of 73. He was a power until the end, and is not likely to be soon forgotten.

Easter in Washington passed much as it does in any city of the size of the capital, aside from the fact that the agreeable Spring climate of the place furnished a pleasant change from the blustering rigors of more northerly latitudes. The leaves were starting, at a time when some of the rivers of the land were not yet clear of ice. Two hundred thousand visitors were on hand, but they were assimilated without inconvenience or discomfort. Candor compels the statement that Washington is no Summer resort, but anyone wishing to see the seat of gevornment at the height of its activity, and under the most favorable conditions, will make no mistake in filling the gas tank and heading for Washington in the Spring of the year.

Most of the important work done by the Senate lately has been accomplised in committee. Entitled, perhaps, to a place at the head of the list, is the hearing before the Foreign Relations Committee on legislation having to do with neutrality. The motion picture business is being investigatted, with Mr. Robert Montgomery as a witness. Interstate Commerce, the Florida Ship Canal, Banking and Currency, and matters relating to Labor and Education have occupied committee attention.

The House has furnished lively debate on Relief and it appears that the much talked about slash of a hundred and fifty million may not be insisted upon. The House Committees have busied themselves with Social Security, Neutrality, stabilising the dollar and Crop Insurance.

The Department of Justice reports an effort on the part of Nazi organisations to inoculate the young folk with Hitler doctrines, and other activities along the same general line are mentioned, but the Department finds no definite evidence of propaganda of an essentially military character. As to national defense, the Navy Department is inclined to take Time by the forelock. That branch of the government has asked for bids on war vessels, the necessary appropriation by Congress being left to take care of itself later.

Naval officers are quoted as saying that Communist agitators are busy among the sea-going forces of the United States. Such charges are not new but heretofore it has been stated that no damage has been done. Now it is alleged that the navy is having actual trouble. Prompt and drastic action should be taken. It will not do to say that "It can't happen here" and let it go at that. In the old days, it seemed that Communism was something that could not "happen" in Russia. The fact that Communism has no excuse for existence in the United States is of no consequence so far as the necessity for active anti-communistic effort is concerned. Communists are not interested in the background against which they work. If there is no real reason for a revolution in the social order, they are ready to trump up a fictitious reason, and there are many persons who, unfortunately, are unable to discern whether the claims of Communism are sound or false.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

CAPTURED JOHN BROWN

Faded into the shadowy past is the memory of John Brown, whose famous raid at Harper's Ferry came as a prelude to the Civil War, and was believed by many to have materially hastened the outbreak of that great conflict.

Nearly eighty years have rolled around since October 16, 1859, when Brown and his small group of followers captured the U. S. Arsenal, seised as hostages several citizens, and bade defiance to the armed forces who hastened to their rescue. His plan to seise the arsenal and start a negro uprising ended quickly in disaster.

Militiamen and citizens had resisted the raiders for several hours and there had been losses on both sides before a group of U. S. Marines, commanded by Lieutenant Israel Green, arrived from Washington.

Using a stout ladder as a battering-ram, the marines broke through the door of the engine house where Brown and his prisoners were sheltered, seiz the ringleader, and ended the fantastic plan of the abolitionist.

Colonel Robert E. Lee, later Commander-in-Chief of the Confederate forces, who had been hastily summoned to Harper's Ferry to take charge of affairs, was present at the capture. Brown and his followers were subdued in a final struggle lasting only three minutes.

Time was when the name of John Brown was on everyone's lips, and he was either praised as a saint or condemned as a sinner, according to the conflicting viewpoints of the period. Following his raid, he was promptly tried, convicted and hanged.

His final resting place is North Elba, N. Y., where, reminiscent of an old-time song dedicated to his memory, "John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave."

So why not co-operate with us in giving this communnity the most news possible by sending, mailing or phoning in your news. We'll appreciate it—and so will our other readers. Do it now!

Conflagrations are not as uncommon as you may assume. Since 1900, in America, 100 have spread wide devastation.

So...it can't happen here?

The danger of conflagrations, with their great loss of life and property, would be even greater than it is ... were it not for the vigilant efforts of 200 capital stock* fire insurance companies. Hundreds of communities enjoy greater safety from fire because the local authorities use the free assistance of the public-safety service rendered voluntarily by these capital stock insurance companies ... through Regional Boards in smaller towns and in larger communities through The National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Surveys are made by Fire Prevention Engineers to detect conflagration hazards ... water supplies and fire-fighting facilities are checked and tested ... better fire laws are sponsored ... safety standards for building construction are formulated ... in a hundred different ways, these capital stock fire insurance companies are constantly working to prevent fire, to save life and property.

They also apply the safety principle to their own financial responsibilities ... by maintaining adequate cash surpluses in addition to their capital and premium reserves, to back up their policies ... thus protecting your interests before and after fire occurs.

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, car and other property the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

*CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. Dual-Lane Highway Mileage to be extended in Indiana this year

Indiana's mileage of modern, dual-lane highways will be materially increased as a result of construction work now in progress or sheduled for the 1939 construction season, T. A. Dicus, Chairman of the State Highway Commission, reported today.

This type of construction, providing the greatest degree of motoring safety devised by highway engineers, is limited by the cost of roads carrying heavy volumes of traffic and has been inaugurated in Indiana on three highways—Road 30 and Road 40, which are two of the four transcontinental highways crossing the state, and on Road 24 which is another of the heavily traveled roads crossing Indiana.

Construction of dual-lane highways was started on Road 30 in Lake County as a means of solving some of the traffic problems in the Calumet and Chicago area. The road was relocated for the greater part of the distance. Work is now in progress, extending the dual-lane section east with additional relocation to carry the new highway around Valparaiso.

The second dual-lane project was on Road 40, extending east from Putnamville and replacing a badly worn pavement where curves and grades had become a traffic hazard. This original dual-lane section has since been extended east through Stilesville. Work is now in progress on extending the dual-lane type of construction west from Brazil to the Clay-Vigo County Line where it will connect with four-lane pavement leading into Terre Haute. Another dual-lane project on Road 40 is between Knightstown and Dunreith where the highway has been relocated to eliminate a hazardous grade crossing. Grading for this section has been completed.

Dual-lane construction on Road 24, west of Fort Wayne has been started to relieve traffic congestion and improve safety conditions on this important highway.

In addition to the type of dual-lane construction pictured, with a parkway between the lanes, eleven miles of modified dual-lane—where the traffic lanes are separated by a low curbing—have been built on Road 40 between Indianapolis and Cumberland.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, APRIL 27, 1939 NUMBER 17

R. EARL PETERS TO SEEK DEMOCRATIC GOVERNORSHIP

Considerable speculation was aroused by the Dmocrats of Indiana Thursday when it was learned that R. Earl Peters, head of the Federal Housing Administration in Indiana and former state chairman, would be a candidate for Governor next year.

Peters' name has been mentioned on numerous occasions but definite information was not given out until Thursday of last week.

It has been known for some time that the powers that be in the state of Indiana, backed by Frank McHale, campaign manager for High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, who is a candidate for the Presidency next year and Governor M. Clifford Townsend, were looking for some one to oppose Lieutenant Governor Schricker, who has been casting his eye toward the governorship nomination. It is generally believed that the forces behind the Peters movement are actuated by the close friendship of Peters with National Chairman James A. Farley, who is luke-warm toward the candidacy of McNutt.

Since the ousting of Peters six years ago as state chairman and the naming of Omer Stokes Jackson to replace him, many workers in the ranks have felt that Peters was entitled to the Governorship nomination.

During the lean years of the Democrats in the state of Indiana while the Republicans were in control, Peters fought their battles and succeeded in paving the way for a victory when Paul V. McNutt was nominated and elected Governor.

Immediately afterwards he gained the disfavor of the McNutt forces and was defeated in the state convention when a candidate for United States Senator by Sherman Minton. It was the manipulations of the McNutt forces coupled with the shrewd and clever handling of the delegates by Pleas Greenlee that caused Peters to lose the nomination.

Peters took his defeat calmly and said little, however the McNutt forces had gained the disfavor of the backers of Roosevelt at the Chicago convention, and Peters became the favorite of Mr. Farley. When he was named Federal Housing Administration opposition was attempted but Farley said NO, and Peters was given the coveted position.

RACCOON STORK BUSY AT STATE GAME FARM

The stork that brings baby raccoon was given a workout at the Wells County state game farm last week when 141 litters of grey and black raccoon arrived on the same day. There were over 400 raccoon babies on hand in less than 24 hours.

Propagation of raccoon is taking place on an increasing scale at the Wells County state game preserve as a means of increasing the number of these popular fur-bearing animals in the state, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today. Pens erected at the Jasper-Pulaski game farm are being removed to the Wells County area where experiments have shown conditions more favorable.

HOME BUREAU

The Concord Township Home Bureau met Friday, April 21st wtih Maud Jenkins. The president, Gertrude Borthwick called the meeting to order. Song, "When You and I Were Young Maggie." The creed was read in unison; Mrs. Borthwick gave a very interesting report of the presidents' meeting. The county picnic will be held June 14th with Wilmington Township as hostess; roll call response "April Fool jokes," with twenty-three members present; minutes of last meeting read and accepted; Iva Yeiser and Katie Storer gave the project lesson on "House dresses and aprons."

The ladies are asked to bring plants or bulbs to exchange at the next meeting. The entertainment committee, Myrtle Pugsley, Carrie Wade and Beulah Coburn, gave several April Fool contests which were much enjoyed. Minnie Ulm, Millie Shull and the hostess served lovely refreshments of sandwiches, cottage cheese, doughnuts and coffee.

MARKETING ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE FOR MELON GROWERS

Arrangements have been made for marketing cantaloupes produced in the St. Joe Valley and adjacent territory according to County Agent C. E. Baker. The committee making these arrangements are J. R. Leighty, of St. Joe; F. B. Leighty, St. Joe; A. F. Stephens, Agricultural Agent for the B. & O. Railroad, Chicago, and County Agent Baker, of Auburn.

S. A. Gerrard & Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are to distribute the melons. This company is one of the largest distributors of quality melons and has an excellent outlet.

The variety to be used is the Honey Rock. This variety is of excellent quality. By picking them vine-ripened, graded and packed according to U. S. Grades under Federal supervision, precooled immediately and shipped under refrigeration they should reach the market in good condition and bring top prices.

The plan is for the growers to state at this time the acreage they intend to plant and the acreage which they intend to market through this organization. Blanks for this purpose may be secured from any of the above named committee. It is important that the committee know the acreage which will be marketed in this manner so that necessary arrangements may be made to carry out the grading and packing operations.

Farmers in the St. Joe Valley are interested in this marketing movement since it will provide an added outlet for their melons and will be an added income for them. Interested growers should contact the committee and get full details.

It is hoped by the committee that this organization will be able to handle these melons at a profit to the growers and that, as time goes on other special crops, such as berry fruits, strawberries, potatoes, etc., will also be handled.

DeKalb County cantaloupe growers, most of whom are St. Joe Valley residents, several years ago had between 700 ond 800 acres in cantaloupes, but owing to poor marketing conditions the acreage last year fell as low as 250 acres. By the new plan growers will bring their melons to a packing and grading station at St. Joe, and they will be shipped to eastern markets.

Under the marketing agreement, it is hoped that the cantaloupe acreage of DeKalb County will be raised again to 800 acres and even surpass that figure. County Agent Baker stated that St. Joe Valley growers produce a honey rock melon, which is particularly adapted to the soil in that section, and is a melon which can compete very successfully in eastern markets, he believes.

It might be of interest to others contemplating raising melons to know, that while plans are completed for the marketing, that they can yet signify their intentions of selling their melons under this management by calling at News office and listing their name. The acreage is still growing.

VIRGINIA CLAIRE FRYE WEDS DALE L. ROBINSON

An informal wedding ceremony was held at 11:30 A. M. Wednesday in the home of Rev. C. A. Brown, of Chesterton, uniting in marriage Virginia Claire Frye, daughter of Mrs. Olive Frye, 529 Lake Street, and Dale L. Robinson, 612 Water Street, Hobart, Indiana. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Stratton, Mrs. Frye and Mrs. Robinson.

The bride wore a navy blue dress with matching accessories. Her corsage consisted of sweetpeas. Mrs. Stratton was attired in a light blue dress with navy blue accessories. She also wore a corsage of sweetpeas.

A six o'clock dinner was served to the immediate members of the family in the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Chandler. Many relatives and friends attended the reception held during the evening in the Chandler home.

The young couple will reside temporarily with the bride's mother before leaving for Binghamton, New York, where Mr. Robinson will be employed.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson both attended Hobart High School, the latter graduating last Spring.—Hobart News.

The bride will be remembered as the granddaughter of Mrs. Belle Ridgway, and daughter of Olive Ridgway-Frye, formerly of St. Joe. Virginia has many young friends and relatives here, who join in extending best wishes.

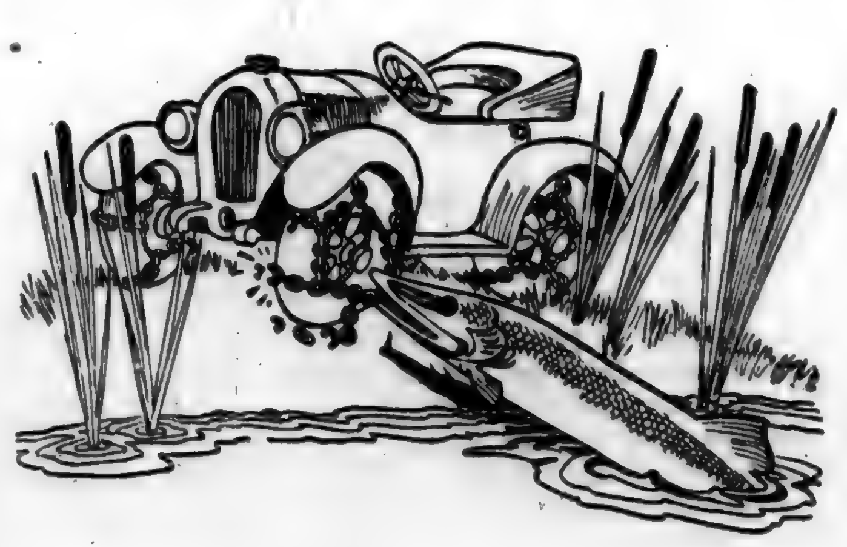
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

WE ARE told by E. W. Power that his brother George of St. Paul, Minn., caught a 16-pound great northern pike in Green lake. Power cut open the fish, just to see what it had been feeding on. He found three different sets of cross-links from tire chains. Each set was of a different size, so they must have come from separate cars. He found a 1½-inch eye-bolt, too.

Perhaps, if the pike had weighed around thirty pounds, Power might have found a fender or possibly a cylinder or two. Don't park your cars near the water, boys!

PROMINENT FARMER NEAR HICKSVILLE DIES

William E. Hirzel, operator of a large farm near Hicksville, and Defiance County commissioner since 1932, died Sunday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Datzman in Otterbein, Indiana, where he went about two months ago, due to his illness caused by paralysis since January, 1937.

Long regarded as one of the outstanding public-spirited citizens of Hicksville, Mr. Hirzel purchased the former J. M. Ainsworth farm of 600 acres two miles south of Hicksville on State Route 49 more than 30 years ago. Mr. Hirzel was born in Oxford, in 1880.

A number of years ago in addition to his farming, Mr. Hirzel established a creamery on his farm and built up a good business with "Hirzel's Butter." He disposed of this business a few years ago and in its stead established a canning factory, specializing in tomatoes.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 9 A. M. in Oxford, Indiana, near Otterbein, where burial was made. Mass was conducted at the same hour in St. Michael's Catholic Church in Hicksville.

FIRST PHEASANTS TO HATCH MAY TWELFTH

With first settings of pheasant eggs placed in the electric incubators at the Jasper-Pulaski and the Wells County state game preserves a week ago, the first pheasants are due to hatch on Friday, May 12, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Quail at the game farms have started to lay and the hatching of bobwhite eggs will be started within a few weeks. Some chukar partridge eggs also are being collected now and the first setting will be made as soon as sufficient eggs are ready.

Laying stock held at the two game preserves is expected to produce nearly a half-million eggs this year.

HOBBY AND ANTIQUE SHOW ON THIS WEEK

"Hidden treasures from your attic and trunk are worth money." That is the keynote of every antique show, and it will apply to Fort Wayne's first Antique Exposition and Hobby Show, which opens in the Shrine Theatre Tuesday night, April 25. It is an exposition not for Fort Wayne alone, but for people of this community who are invited to examine their attics and trunks to see what they have in the nature of an antique. It may be a bit of furniture, and it may be only a book; but it may be worth a lot of money.

Teh same applies to hobbies. Many a hobby that has been carried on for a pastime has been developed into a fortune.

The same applies to hobbies. Many a tion is not just a place to pass through and view the various articles, but if you are interested in any article that fits in with your hobby or your antique collection, you will be able to buy and likewise you will find the dealers exhibiting their wares, likewise ready to buy from you.

The Fort Wayne Exposition will be featured by the famous Samuel Insull collection of jewels, and likewise by famous paintings of Abraham Lincoln from the Lincoln Life Museum. It would be impossible to enumerate the various things that come under the head of antique, but on display will be seen furniture, glassware, and prints many of them well beyond the 100-year mark.

The exposition opens on Tuesday night at 7:30 and after that it is open from 1:30 to 10:30 until and including the following Sunday.

LOCAL CLUB ENTERTAINS COUNTY FEDERATED CLUBS

The Ladies Literary Club was hostess to the Federated Clubs of the County in their fifteenth annual convention held in St. Mark's Lutheran Church last Friday. The convention opened with registration at 9 o'clock and at 10 the program started with Mrs. J. R. Leighty, county president, presiding. Song, "America the Beautiful," with Mrs. John Brown leading and Mrs. R. L. Holben, at the piano.

Club Collect led by Mrs. F. B. Leighty. The flags were then presented by Joan Leighty and Virginia Wilbern with Mrs. Wilbern at the piano. Greetings by Mrs. Glen Cole, president of hostess club, with Mrs. Orpha Opdyke, of Waterloo, responding. The forenoon was given to business and reports of County Chairmen and club presidents. Mrs. W. C. Allen then told of her duties as State Treasurer. Mrs. R. Earl Peters, of Fort Wayne, talked on her work as district chairman of motion pictures.

Mrs. O. B. Rose, of Garrett, District President, then outlined the work and what was being done in the district.

Mrs. Longfellow and Mrs. Blaney, of Fort Wayne, were also presented. At this time convention was adjourned for luncheon served by the Ladies Aid in the basement.

The luncheon, consisting of baked chicken, scalloped potatoes, string beans with shredded carrots, jellied beets, assorted pickles, hot rolls, pie and coffee, was very good and greatly appreciated. The tables were nicely decorated in keeping with Spring. During the luncheon Joan Leighty and Virginia Wilbern entertained with songs, accompanied by Gladys Keene on the accordion.

At the opening of the afternoon session, Mrs. C. H. Garver, of Garrett presented the constitution which had been revised. Was moved and carried that it be adopted as read.

Mrs. Emily White Hull, of Hicksville then entertained with songs and readings, accompanied by Mrs. Grier. Mrs Hull's program was very good and greatly enjoyed by the convention.

One of the highlights of the convention was a book review, "My Son, My Son," by Mrs. W. C. Allen, of Fort Wayne. The setting of the story was in England in the same town where Mrs. Allen was born, the story of the life of a poor boy, his struggles to rise in the world and how he overcame them. She has lived in the United States since 1920.

The resolutions were presented by Mrs. Ezra Loller, of Waterloo.

Officers elected for the coming year were:

BARN DANCE SHOW TO BE GIVEN AT SPENCERVILLE NEXT WEEK

The Parent Teachers Association, of Spencerville, will sponsor a radio barn dance show in the Spencerville Community Building—Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, May 4, 5, and 6, at 8:15 P. M.

There will be a change of program each night. This will be an exact reproduction of the barn dances heard on the air each Saturday night. There will be impersonations of Uncle Ezra, Lula Belle, Aunt Idy, Little Clifford, and all other barn dance and radio stars. A special hayloft will be erected in the building to give the proper atmosphere to the occasion.

The program will be a community affair and talent from the various nearby towns and communities will take part.

Tryouts will be held this Thursday and Friday nights in the Spencerville Community Hall for all those desiring to take part. Singers, dancers, old time fiddlers, harmonica, guitar players, tap dancers and talent of all kinds and ages are wanted. Cash awards will be given the best on program.

The show is clean and entertaining throughout and is not to be confused with a public dance.

Leading newspapers, educators and clergymen everywhere have endorsed this type of entertainment because of its wholesome quality.

Floyd L. Miller, of Cincinnati, will direct the performance, and will give professional training to all those taking part.

Proceeds will be used to purchase new chairs for the Community Building to replace those lost in the fire last Winter. Tickets are now on sale by P. T. A. members and may be purchased in advance at a savings.

The show promises to be of unusual merit and one of the biggest events to be given in this community. If you enjoy the barn dances on the air, then by all means plan to attend the Spencerville show.

Remember the tryouts this Thursday and Friday nights, April 27 and 28, and everybody come and show what you can do.

YOUNG MAN WILL SOON BE ABLE TO WALK

About fifteen years ago, Wayne Cook, son of Charles O. Cook, residing on the Widney Homestead, had a siege of Spinal Meningitis. This siege did not last very long but it took him two weeks to learn to walk again with the aid of a kiddy-car. It was at least six months before they noticed his feet were weak. The arch in his left foot kept becoming higher until his spine was curved in two places.

Arrangements were made for his care in James Whitcomb Riley Hospital in the Autumn of 1937. He has been wearing a turnbuckle cast since July, 1937, in such a way that his back has become gradually straightened.

In December his back was pronounced in perfect shape and they planned to put the bones solid so this could never happen again. In the middle of December the surgeons performed their first spinal fusion. They took out a splinter of bone from his shin bone and grafted that into the center of the spine. At the same time they lengthened the heel of his crooked foot and encased it in a plaster cast.

About three weeks later they performed the second spinal fusion, grafting tiny pieces of bone from the right leg at the shin into the spine at both ends of the former fusion. After permitting him to come home for two months they took off the casts and put on lighter weight, straight casts and now allow him to walk and get back his strength.

One more operation is necessary to finish straightening that foot and then wear a plaster cast on it for six weeks or so, then he will wear a celluloid cast, which is cool, and removable, a year on his body. This is nearly done and he feels he can meet the world like a man.

But it makes no difference how a worm turns, after all he is just a worm.

There are some fellows who go to the postoffice to buy stamps, and other ones who go just to get a new pen-point.

There is one thing in favor of a man quitting school in the sixth grade. You never are bored with a long conversation regarding the fellow's ability on a football field.

As much as I dislike to hear a man talk about himself, I'd rather he would do it for himself than have his neighbors do it for him.

There is one thing certain, you never saw a town erect a monument to a man who always had an alibi.

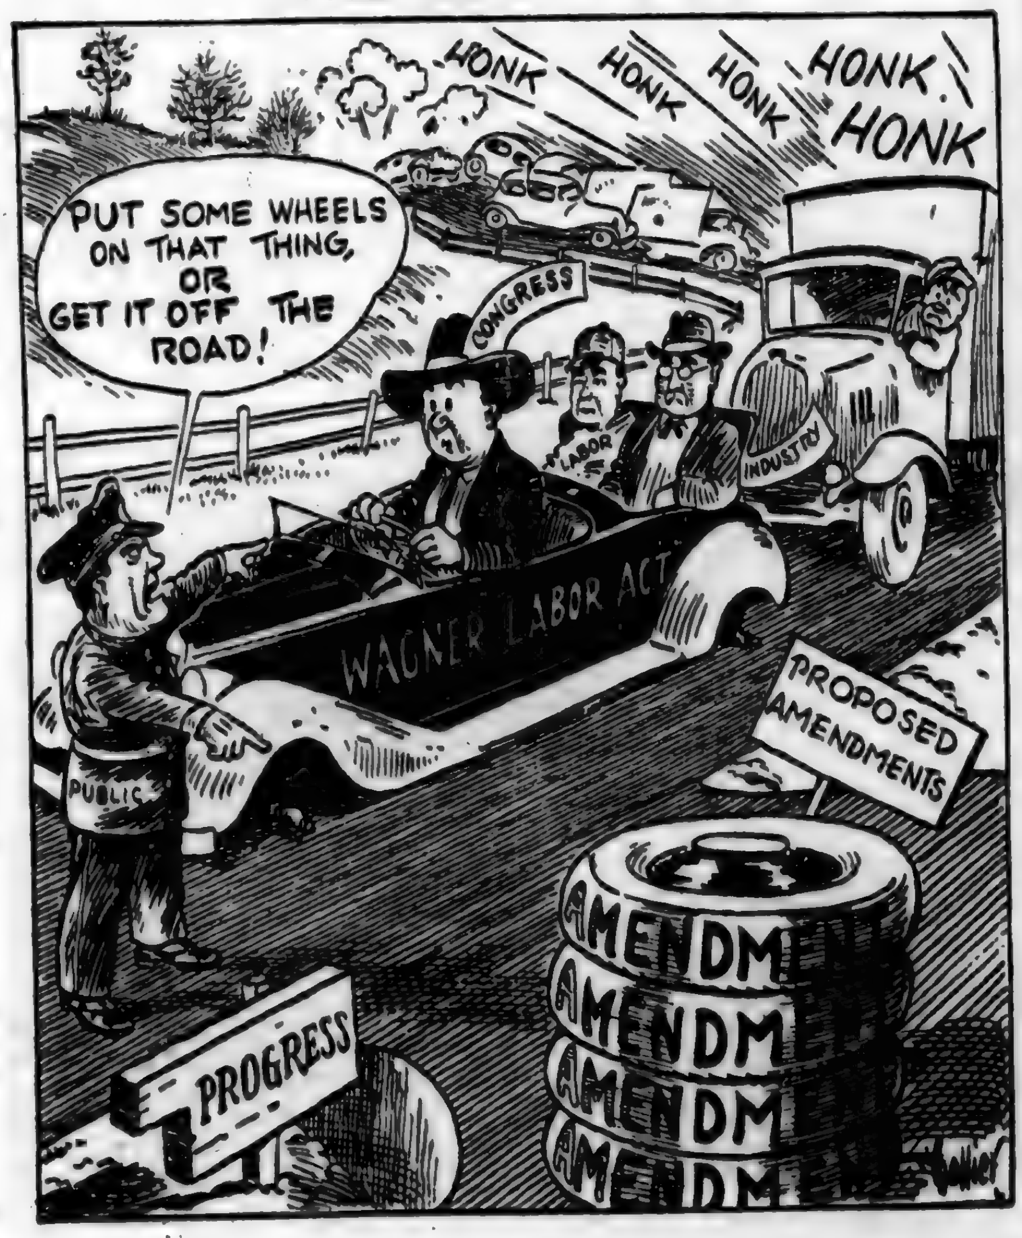
The fellow who does the most fighting about religion, is a chap who usually could stand a whole lot of it in his system.

We have reached the stage where a man is judged socially by whether he calls it "perspiration," or just refers to it as "sweat."

The saleslady who should be demoted to the basement store: "it is the very latest thing," and "everybody is wearing one."

Don't forget that the flies that you fail to swat in April, will live to have millions of descendants by the end of summer.

THE ROAD HOG



The real farm problem is how to put the farm surplus into the farm pocket-book.

Have you ever noticed how much more of a fool a fellow can make of himself when he is before an audience?

The rising generation may not do much worrying now, but it will make up for it when the next generation appears on the scene.

Loyalty is a fine thing and we admire every man who sticks to it, but better be sure you are picking out the right thing to stick to!

Some men figure that the perfect wife is the one who knows how to make a change of tires.

Perhaps some New Dealers are not so enthusiastic about the Constitution because it guarantees every state "a Republican form of government."

After six years of recovery, is seems pretty hard to understand unemployment figures remaining at record peaks, and relief expenditures at all-time highs.

The alphabetical agencies of the New Deal may confuse the people, but the average business man still knows the meaning of I. O. U.

Modern version of an old adage: Money makes the mayor go to Washington.

If you would improve your lot in life, don't wait for the government to build a house on it.

The presidential candidacy of James J. Farley grows in volume—which may all be accounted for by the fact that he has distributed nearly all the political jobs that are being held under the present Administartion. Political plumbsters are showing their gratitude by booming Farley.

Two years ago a wage and working hours were agreed upon for employment in the coal fields. Only reduced employment remained an issue. The most recent trouble came out of the union demands for a closed shop, and resistance by the union to the plan under which miners were assessed by the company from $1 to $2 a day when they strike in violation of contract. The public is led to believe that that was all there was at stake in the way of renewal of the dispute between the mine operators and the employers.

The House of Representatives has opened the pocket book to the extent of putting through a bill setting aside approximately 45 million dollars for the good and benefit of the Navy, one of the projects in view being the construction of a base on the Pacific coast. The bill providing for the taxing of government salaries went through, and has the President's signature upon it. In committee, Rivers and Harbors, investigation of the Works Progress Administration, the training of aviators, and Wages and Hours, have received attention.

The Senate has passed a bill which, if it becomes a law, will put a stop to certain universally-deplored practices in connection with elections, especially the coercion of voters. It is proposed that persons commiting a crime punishable with death, shall not be permitted to take advantage of the fact that too long a time passed before the charge was brought against them. The Senate puts its O. K. on a House oppropriation of 80 million dollars per year to be expended in aiding the states in unemployment compensation. Senate committees did not concern themselves with weighty affairs. Their labors may be tossed off with the note that hearings went forward along several lines not essentially new or especially interesting.

A speaker before the Daugthers of the American Revolution, assembled in Washington, urges that organization to exert itself in the promotion of close and lasting bonds between the nations of North and South America. No more sound counsel could have been given. It must have occurred to everyone that the nations of the American Continent have but little in common with Europe, viewed from any standpoint. The American countries have shown no desire to eat one another up. Effort put forth to promote such friendly relations is effort well spent. The same cannot be said of the sacrifice of American lives and the outlay of American funds in an attempt to maintain order in Europe, where flying at a fellow nation's throat is a continuing outdoor sport.

THEY SUGGEST!

Bless science, we will get it yet! They inform us that the world is yearning for a genius to discover a process of extracting honey and sugar from flowers instead of leaving it to the bees. We are in need of a process to extract milk and butterfat from feeds as are given to cows. They suggest we can use an auto that will skim over snow drifts and ride waves. The need of collecting and storing electricity from lightning and a power axe for chopping down trees, are a couple of "must haves" for us moderns. The idea of a fabricated seat for farm machines, instead of the metal ones which are not so pleasant on cold and wet days, isn't such a bad idea. What next—

THROW IT AWAY

You have heard of the Chicago dentist who attached dollar bills to weights and dropped them from his office window into the street. You see he was working on the principle that prosperity could be coaxed back into being if folks would throw money away. It was sucker bait. Now most of us can't afford to cast ten dollar bills from office windows, and if we could there would be some kind soul in St. Joe who would see that we were put in the proper institution. Most folks have been reared with the saving for a rainy day, in mind, and the idea of courting prosperity by spending widely, hasn't proved its worth to us.

NO BACKGROUND?

Whenever you hear someone boast of their pet's pedigree and its fancy forebears, you sort of feel sorry for the mutt that just grew up, for no reason. But consider the English non-pedigree cow who has beaten the world's milk yield for twenty-nine days short of a year. The amount was 38,648 pounds of milk. And no pedigree!

This cow, a little red one named "Cherry," is between eight and nine yars old. She has had five calves and the owner of Cherry hopes one of the new babies will live to break a record. And then someone will pop up with a song of pedigree and Cherry will feel called upon to produce ancestors from the Mayflower, and spoil the whole thing.

THE DOGWOOD LEGEND

The states that advertise to the tourist their added scenic beauty during the month of blossoming dogwood, may be unaware of the lovely legend of the dogwood. A tree expert unearthed this story and we like to recall it.

The dogwood has been known for centuries and the history of it reaches back to Christ's time. Due to the hardness of its wood it was chosen for use in the cross at the crucifixion, the story goes. The dogwood was saddened to be used for such a purpose and the Savior, seeing its distress promised: "Never again shall the dogwood grow large enough to be used for a cross. It shall be slender and bent and twisted, and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross with two long and two short petals. In the center of the outer edge of each petal there shall be small prints, brown with rust and stained with blood. The center of the flower will be a crown of thorns. All those who see it will remember it was on the dogwood that I was crucified and this three shall not be mutilated or destroyed, but cherished and protected as a reminder of my agony and death upon the cross."

It is just a legend and history does not back it perhaps, but it is a beautiful way of explaining the markings of the flower and our St. Joe News readers will like it.

MILK COWS WERE ELECTROCUTED IN STANCHIONS

Eugene Farlow, prominent young farmer southeast of Berne, suffered a severe loss Saturday night in an unusual accident which cost the lives of five of his milk cows. The cattle were electrocuted while standing in their stalls, tied in metal stanchions.

It was thought that the cows were poisoned and a veterinarian was called and he proceeded to administer poison serum to three cows, when one he was treating happened to touch metal and she died instantly. The doctor happened to put one hand on the cow and the other on a bar and he felt a keen shock. A local electrician was called and it was some time before he could locate the trouble.

A cable near an electric motor, which is used to operate a milking machine, had the insulation bursted and the wire contacted with some metal which led directly to the stanchions. It is thought that the wiring may have been damaged by lightning.

Loss to Mr. Farlow was put at $400 and without insurance.

Reduced Electric Rates

WHENEVER the subject of Electric Rates comes up, the homemakers in this community enthuse about the Progressive Rate Reduction which ultimately, on December 31, 1939, cuts the cost of the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours to 5 cents a kilowatt-hour.

One of the advantages of this progressive reduction is that all through the year the householder can gradually build up his stock of electric equipment so as to take full advantage of these low rates. Electrical appliances were never so low in price, and long terms to suit all pocketbooks can be arranged.

Complete Electric Service in the home means a truly modern home and taking advantage of bargain, or wholesale, rates is true economy.

Check over your appliance needs today and begin installing more time and labor-saving equipment today. It's easy to rapidly build up The Home Modern! Make a Hit—and a Home Run!

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.,—What does Senator Arthur Vandenberg, himself a White House possibility, think of the curernt crop of Republican Presidential hopefuls and their chances of winning the nomination? We have it on the best of authority that he has summed up the situation about as follows:

Thomas E. Dewey—Personally I don't take Dewey seriously—but I take his movement very seriously. He's a smart fellow and an excellent prosecutor, but he doesn't know the first thing about simple fundamentals of Government. He's getting a good education, however, and he's the man to watch at this stage of the game.

Senator Robert Taft—Taft is a nice enough chap, with a good Republican name, but he's still a babe in the woods, politically speaking. A Taft followed a Roosevelt in 1908. Will history repeat? His speech before the Gridiron Club last week flopped badly.

Governor John W. Bricker—Bricker 's a very capable man and probably would make a fine candidate, but he hasn't had enough ballyhoo to become a serious contender. He may get it, however, and if he does—look out Dewey and Taft!

Herbert Hoover—While Hoover would have a hard time winning the nomination for himself, he may control enough convention delegates to pick the candidate he wants or rule any candidate he dislikes. Is he courting Dewey?

Senator Vandenberg—He's not even in the running. He's been a potential candidate for too long. You can overlook him.

NEW WPA STORY: A WPA worker in the South Bend District has a low regard for lawmakers in general and Congressmen in particular. "From my experience," he said in a recent letter to a popular legislator, "I have found that the average WPA worker knows more about finance than the average Congressman." Maybe the WPA should conduct an investigation of Congress, rather than vice versa as Indiana representatives have suggested.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: A good friend of Charlie Halleck's, advising him against running for the Senate in 1940, put the question: "Who would you rather be—Speaker Bankhead or Senator Bankhead?" He was intimating, of course, that Halleck would go far if he remained in the House of Representatives. . . . Governor Townsend will be guest of honor at on Indiana Society reception in Washington May 16. . . . Indiana Congressional wives gave a tea last week for the Hoosier delegation to the D. A. R. convention. . . . Rumors have reached the Capital that there will be a mad scramble for the Indiana Governorship next year. . . . On the Republican side, Glenn Hillis, of Kokomo, appears to have the advantage at this writing . . . . It may be Willis-for-Senator and Hillis-for-Governor. . . . Willis supporters are worrid by the rumor that Fort Wayne Republicans may back Mayor Harry W. Baals for Governor. . . . They say both can't run from the same ditsrict. . . . Party leaders in Fort Wayne, however, insist that they will fight for Willis to the last ditch.

EDITOR'S MEET: The nation's editors, including several from Indiana, sized up both Taft and Dewey at their annual convention in Washington last week. They gave off-the-record talks at the closing banquet. Dewey made by far the most favorable impression. One Hoosier table was made up of Arthur K. Remmel and William J. Gross, of the Fort Wayne News Sentinel; Frank Litschert, Washington columnist and one-time secretary to former Governor Jim Goodrich; Rep. George W. Gillie, your correspondent, and their wives. William Allen White presided.

LUNCHEON GUEST: Widely-published rumors of a coolness between Senator Minton and President Roosevelt were spiked the other day when the junior senator from Indiana had lunch with the President at the White House. Minton, who had just been named Democratic whip of the Senate, said that the visit was "purely social" and that there was no discussion of a boom started for appointment of Val Nolan, U. S. District Attorney fo. Southern Indiana, to a vacancy on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

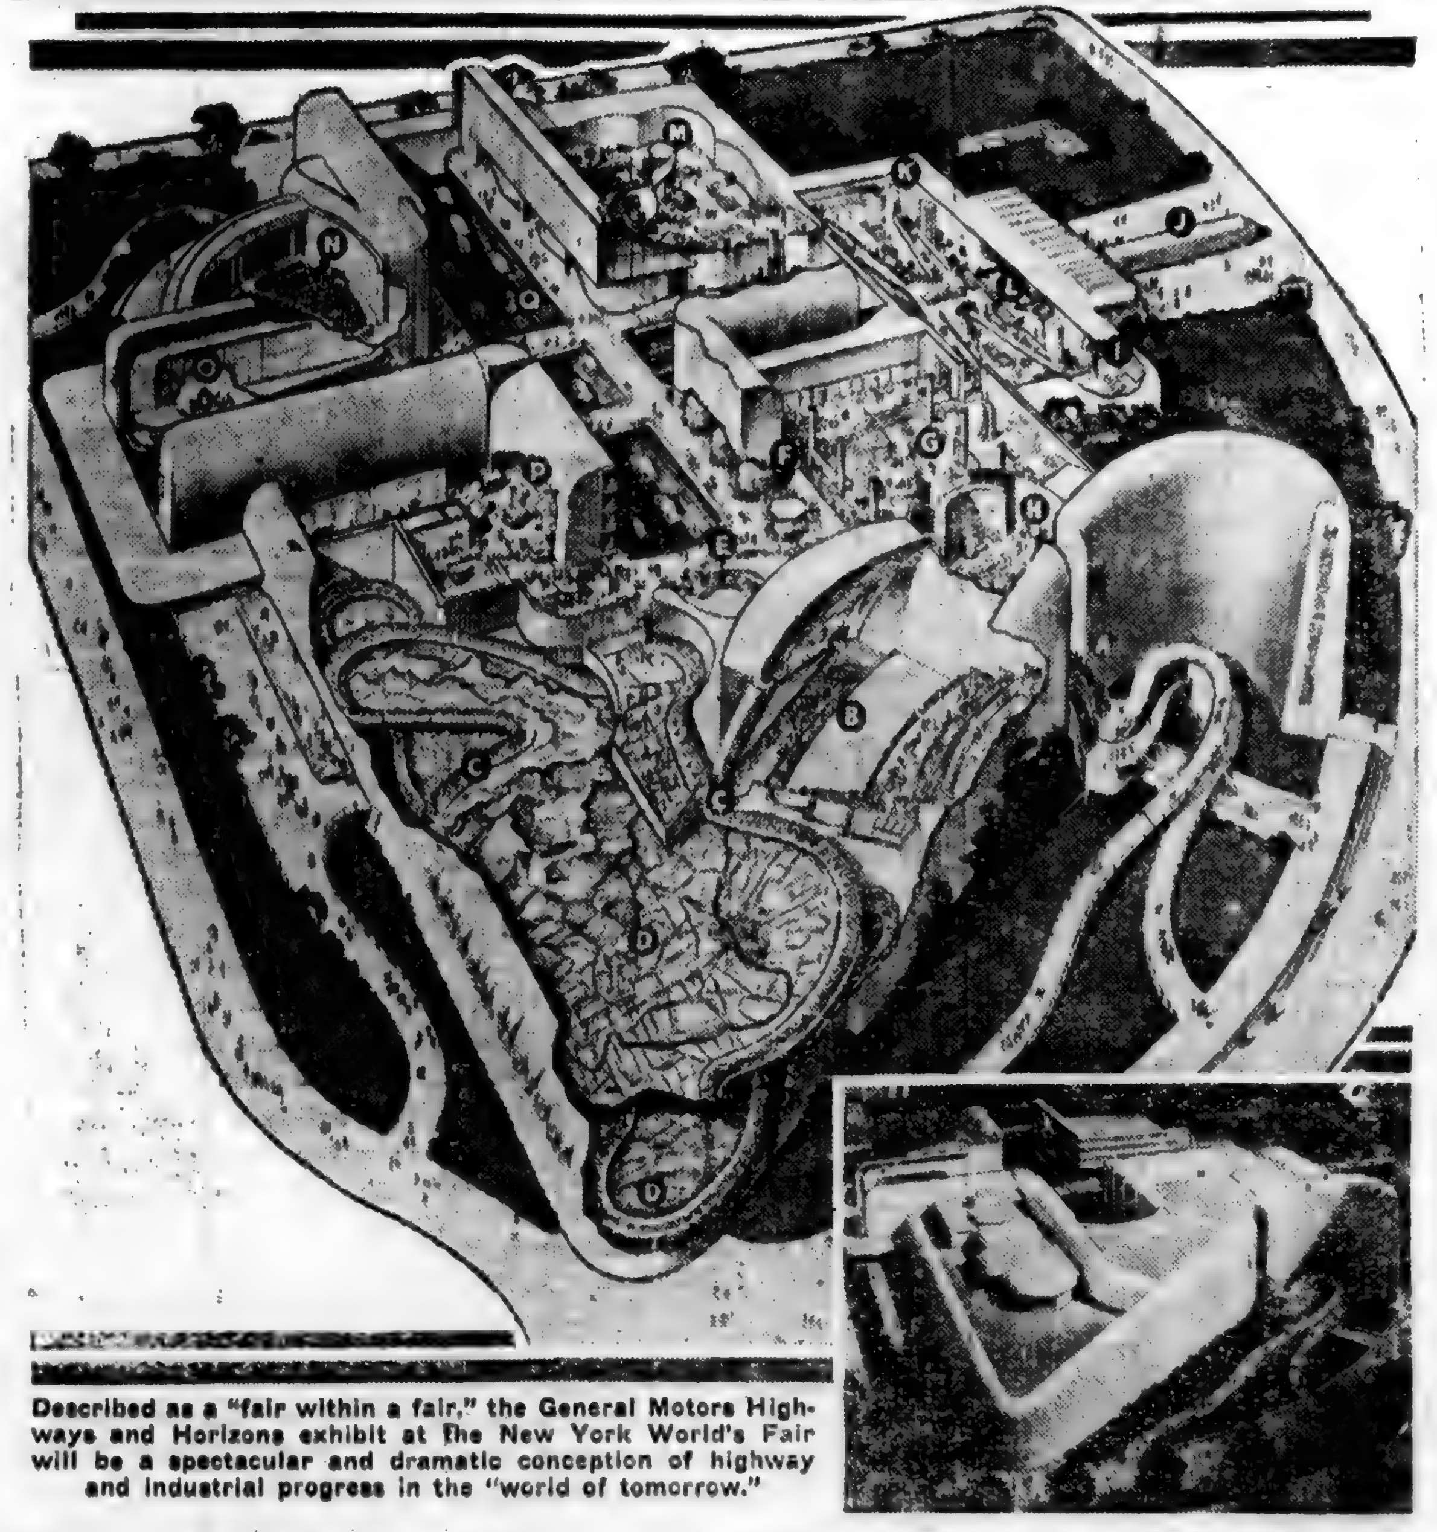
Here's A Through-the-Roof Preview Of Seven-Acre "Fair Within A Fair"



Described as a "fair within a fair," the General Motors Highways and Horizons exhibit at the New York World's Fair will be a spectacular and dramatic conception of highway and industrial progress in the "world of tomorrow."

GENERAL MOTORS Highways and Horizons exhibit at the New York World's Fair, designed by Norman Bel Geddes, covers an area of seven acres at the head of the Fair's Central Mall in the Transportation Zone. At its tallest point the exhibit building rises 110 feet into the air, a striking example of futuristic beauty. Broad terraces circle its base and the landscaping is a contrasting pattern of deep green. Once inside the building, which is the largest of any single exhibitor at the Fair, visitors will find an almost endless variety of thrilling displays and attractions.

Shown in the above drawing are various highlights of the exhibit. These are: (A) — main entrance; (B)—a dramatic open-air effect lobby in which visitors will see and hear a graphic story of the present and possible future national highway system. From his lobby spectators will be seated in comfortable moving sound chairs (C);—to begin an extensive tour of a vast animated "futurama" (D); — representing a cross-section of America as it may conceivably appear in 19[illegible] or thereabouts. The "futurama" the largest scale-model panorama ever constructed, extends for a third of a mile on several [illegible] and covers an area of [illegible] square feet.

Adjacent is the display of General Motors Research Laboratories (H), which will contain a myriad of scientific and research exhibits, most of which can be operated by spectators. Designated also are: (I)—a special display of Inland Manufacturing Division; (J)—a 4,000 horsepower, streamlined Diesel locomotive; (L)—stairways which lead to the exhibits of Diesel Engine Division and Fisher Body; (K)—a Traffic and Safety Information Center; (M)—the motor display salon; (N)—the Casino of Science in which "Previews of Progress," an absorbing stage production of science and research will be presented; (O)—General Motors employed headquarters; (P) displays and exhibits of parts and accessory divisions; (Q)—a spectacular traffic flow exhibit of 60 General Motors cars, trucks, buses and cabs, which will add realism to the metropolitan street intersection of the future.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

FLEW FLAG AT TRIPOLI

Old Glory has been the symbol of the United States for more than 160 years, but there are few episodes in its career as little known or more noteworthy than its display over a Tripolitan stronghold on April 27, 1805.

It was the first time the Stars and Stripes had ever been flown over a fortress of the Old World, and it represented a signal victory of the infant American Navy over a cruel and barbarous foe.

America had decided that it would no longer pay tribute to the Barbary pirates as the price of our freedom on the seas. William Eaton, naval agent to the Barbary States, planned to depose the Governor of Derne and to place in power a ruler more friendly to the United States. His military leader was Lieutenant Presley N. O'Bannon, of the Marine Corps.

With the limited American forces at their disposal, they knew this could not be accomplished. At Alexandria, they organized an expidition composed of Greeks, Turks, Arabians and the polyglot dwellers of northern Africa, headed by a few U. S. Marines, and they set out for the Tripolitan stronghold.

On their march of nearly 600 miles across the desert the Americans met with revolt, dissension and open mutiny among their followers, while the lack of both food and water added to their woes. Only the firm attitude of Eaton, supported by O'Bannon and his marines, brought the expedition to a successful climax.

At Derne, the overland party was reinforced by the crews of three American gunboats. The surrender of the town was demanded. It was refused. The Americans and their allies swept forward, captured the fortress and turned its guns upon the enemy, while Lieutenant O'Bannon and Midshipman Mann, of the Navy, tore down the Tripolitan standard and flung Old Glory to the breeze.

WALTER WHITEHURST POST No. 283
Meeting Night: Second & Fourth Tuesday of the Month. - - - -

The Legion Post joined with the Auxiliary in a special Child Welfare program last Tuesday evening. We had as our speakers Dr. Blue, of Ligonier, Child Welfare Chairman of 4th District, and Dr. Reynolds, of Garrett, Chairman of Child Welfare of "40 and 8" society.

Children of the Legnonnaires furnished the entertainment: Nellie Harter played a saxophone solo, accompanied at the piano by Frances Reidenbach; Evelyn and Virgina George and Sylvia Washler sang a song.

Out of town visitors were Mrs. Dean Buchtel, of Garrett, Mrs. W. Carl Graham, of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Morningstar, of Fort Wayne and Mrs. Reynolds of Garrett. Commander of Post 283, Lehr Wilder, gave a short talk. We also had as guests, Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser and her troop of Girl Scouts. Berniece Wilder, president of our Auxiliary, presided over the meeting.

After the program refreshments were served. Kathleen Scholes is chairman of the Auxiliary Child Welfare committee and Mack Hatch is chairman of Child Welfare of Post 283.

POPPIES FOR DEMOCRACY'S FALLEN DEFENDERS

We Americans are thinking more about democracy and valuing it more highly these days because its destruction in other countries has made us consider what life here would be like without it. We are determined that its institutions of freedom shall be kept secure for America, no matter what the cost.

In 1917 and 1918, likewise, Americans did not count the cost of defending democracy. The cost for some was their lives. They gave their all in answer to the nation's appeal for protection from autocratic force, then embodied in the might of the Kaiser.

On Poppy Day, Saturday, May 27, we will have opportunity to pay special tribute to the men who died for the cause of democracy. We will be asked to wear their flower, the poppy from the fields where they fell, to show that we still remember and honor their sacrifice.

We will have opportunity, too, to help those who sacrificed health and strength in the conflict, their families and the families of those who have died. Our contributions for our poppies will help lighten the burden for those still paying the cost of democracy's victory in suffering and privation.

A poppy on our coat on Poppy Day will mean that we honor the dead who fell for democracy and that we are aiding the living whom gave health and strength in patriotic service to America.

DIES FOLLOWING STROKE OF FEW-HOURS

W. L. Hamilton, 62, died Tuesday evening at his home east of St. Joe, following a stroke of paralysis at about three o'clock in the afternoon.

He had gone to the Merritt Sechler farm for barley to sow and Merritt had gone to his farm on Road One. When Will arrived Merritt noticed that he drove past the drive way and that he experienced some difficulty in backing the car. Finally he was able to drive in but could not stop the car until he bumped into the Sechler car. Seeing that Mr. Hamilton had lost control of his right side, Merritt proceeded to take him home. He remained conscious for a while but became deathly sick. Near evening he became worse and within a few hours, had passed away.

Since the holidays Mr. Hamilton had not been well, although he was about and was entering into the Spring farm work with his usual vigor.

In talking to the family it is thought that the funeral will not be held until Saturday afternoon, due to his brother being away from home and were not able to contact him until Wednesday afternoon.

TOP NOTCH ATTRACTIONS AT PARAMOUNT

Clyde "Sugar Blues" McCoy, the young maestro who skyrocketed to fame through his interpretation of the famous "Sugar Blues" — his theme song—comes to the Paramount Theatre, Fort Wayne, for six days starting next Friday. McCoy has been a favorite with dance fans here for several years, and his engagement at the Paramount marks his stage debut in the city.

A keen appreciation of variety is one of many reasons McCoy has reached the top in show business. He will have an all-star revue with him, in addition to the Bennett Sisters, melodic trio, and Wayne Gregg, handsome vocalist with the orchestra.

Wayne King, the "waltz king" of radio fame, closes a record engagement at the swank Drake hotel in Chicago to bring his famed orchestra to the Paramount for a six-day engagement starting Friday, May 12. King's smoothly-styled radio programs have been favorites with millions for several years. He has been chosen as the No. 1 maestro of music in the sweeter vein for several consecutive years by fans and critics alike.

King will have an array of top-flight entertainers with him for his Fort Wayne engagement—and will feature many of the song numbers he has made famous, including "Josephine" and "Emaline."

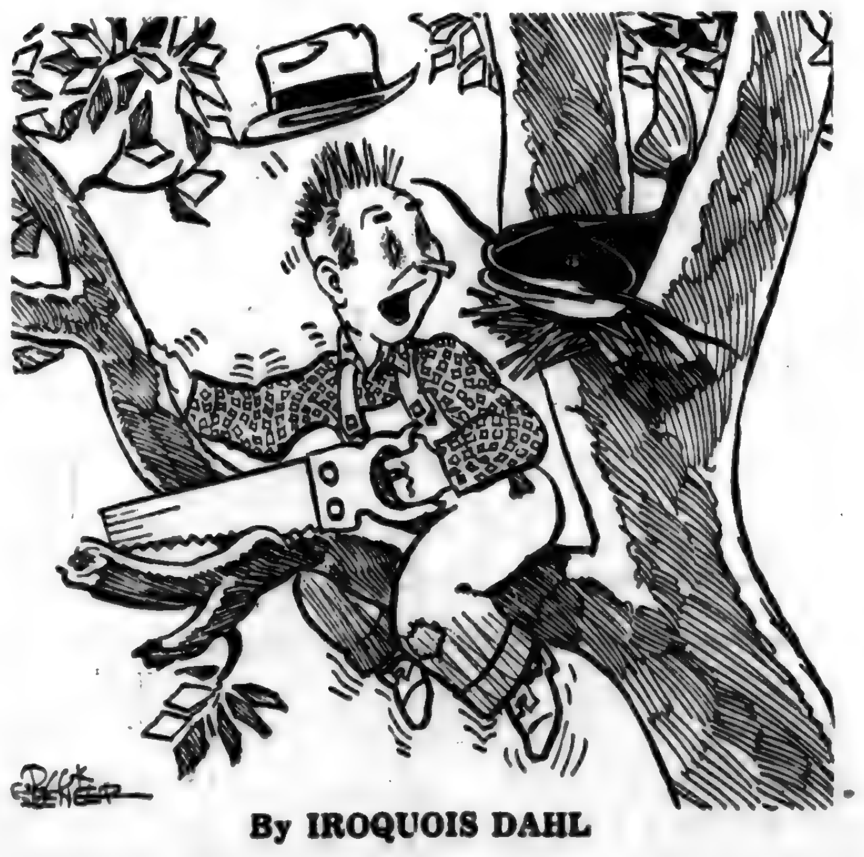
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

AN ASSOCIATED Press dispatch from New Philadelphia, Ohio, tells a story which is sponsored by W. E. Geiger, superintendent of Tuscarawas park. Geiger says that sawyers working on a rotted tree in the park found a seven-inch catfish in a watery crevice of the tree, 40 feet above ground. The fish was thrown into the lake and swam away.

Since a catfish doesn't belong to the flying-fish family, it is reasonable to suppose, as Geiger says, that the catfish must have been carried into the tree by a kingfisher or some other bird.

Safetygrams

Many drivers feel that, because the weather is clear and the road surface dry, they can take chances going around curves, passing vehicles on hills, and so on.

Do you really know on what kind of road surface most accidents on our highways happen?

Wet surface?
Dry surface?
Icy surface?

You will be surprised to know the fact that because you are driving on a dry surface does not mean you can become careless. Only a comparatively small percentage of accidents happen on a wet or icy surface.

Even though the surface of the road is very dry—the weather clear—and all other conditions favorable—"It's Still Smart to Drive Carefully."

GINNIVAN TO SHOW HERE ALL NEXT WEEK

For the first time in nearly 20 years, the Frank Ginnivan Dramatic Co., will again play in St. Joe for one whole week. Many of the residents of St. Joe no doubt remember this company. The Frank Ginnivan Co. is the oldest repertoire company in America, now being in its 69th year. John "Dad" Ginnivan, the founder of the show and now 87 years old, still travels with the company, which is owned and managed by his son, Frank.

Frank Ginnivan has assembled one of the best troupes ever to play under canvas. In addition he has secured an exceptionally fine group of plays for the week's entertainment. The plays include such classics as "Huckleberry Finn," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Jesse James," "The Only Road," and "Puddin' Head Jones." The opening play, "The Lure," on Monday night is a play full of comedy, heart interest and life like situations. It is a play that everyone should see. It will make you laugh one minute and bring tears of sympathy the next. It is one of those plays which makes you live with the actor.

Four acts of high class vaudeville consisting of singing, dancing, music, comedy and novelties are presented each night. For these acts Mr. Ginnivan has secured Skeet Cross, Pat Hewitt and Richard Maguiness direct from Radio Station KMA Shenendoah Iowa, Pete Wight, the dancing star of the company, is considered the "fastest hoofer" ever appearing with a tent show.

The low prices of 10c for children and 15c for adults makes it possible for all to attend. The show starts at 8:30 D. S. T. A 15 minute orchestra presentation precedes each performance.

The people of St. Joe are glad to have the Ginnivans return. So let us show them a real welcome next week and GO TO THE GINNIVAN SHOW, on the rear of the John Koch lot, just west of Road 1 in the west end of St. Joe.

FREE TALKING PICTURES START SATURDAY NIGHT

Free open air talking pictures will start Saturday night of this week at St. Joe, under the management of St. Joe Merchants.

As an added feature, a two reel serial story will be added to the weekly showing, entitled, "Queen of the Jungle."

In offering QUEEN OF THE JUNGLE the Merchants believe they are offering about the cleanest, nicest and safest serial ever filmed. By safest, they mean one they can offer with no fear of adverse criticism or unfavorable reaction, and increase the good will of our large crowd of picture fans.

"Queen of The Jungle"

Darkest Africa, with its black natives steeped in superstition, its wild animals roaming the veldt in search of food, its white explorers seeking legendary elephant cemeteries and secret radium deposits, forms the dramatic background of the wonder screen serial.

Dances that are weird in the extreme express the emotions of the Africans and many of these dances are shown, as well as tribal ceremonies, in the magnificent wild animal serial, QUEEN OF THE JUNGLE.

In this remarkable chapter play, consisting of twelve thrilling episodes, Mary Kornman, as a child is lifted into the skies in a balloon, and, when the huge inflated bag is shot down by a flaming arrow, the white girl is not sacrificed to the tribal god, as per custom, but is made the supreme ruler of the savage natives.

Over a thousand negroes were used as "extras" during the filming of QUEEN OF THE JUNGLE.

This is the most magnificent wild animal spectacle ever filmed. Mystery, Adventure, Exciting Romance, Weird Ceremonies are abundant.

WITH LOVE AND KISSES

(7 reels)

Running Time: 70 Minutes.
Original Story by: Al Martin and Sherman Love.
Director: Les Goodwins.
Cast: Pinky Tomlin, Toby Wing, Kane Richmond, Russell Hopton, The Peters Sisters, Arthur Houseman, Fussy Knight, Jerry Bergan, Billy Gray and others.

The story deals with a young farm hand who submits one of his compositions to a radio star for trial. The song is sung on the radio but the singer conveys to the radio world the impression that he was the originator of the song.

Complications come thick and fast, specially when Tomlin is determined to go to New York for a showdown with the singer and demand his rights. Romance with a pretty cafe entertainer is Tomlin's first situation and thru Toby Wing (who is the entertainer), he comes into his own with the singer and finally signs a long contract to publish many of his other songs.

All of this is interwoven with some of the catchiest song numbers he has had the occasion of singing as well as originiating. Five of the seven numbers are written by him entirely and the other two, with some very close friends of his.

An entirely clean musical comedy with plenty of entertainment for everybody.

The story is that Pinky was a farmer boy who sang and composed songs while milking and caring for Minnie the cow. They had to import the cow and keep her in an expensive New York hotel while he composed songs after becoming famous. No Minnie, no composing. Minnie is very much in evidence.

The mercahnts are to be congratulated upon the entertainment given the public and the committee feels that they have selected a variety of films that will please everyone.

All persons making weekly contributions to the financial support of the shows will be given the opportunity to use slides to advertise their business this year as a new attachment has been purchased and this part of the showing has been turned over to M. E. Storer, who will have complete charge.

Remembeer first showing of talkies will be Saturday night. Come to St. Joe.

NOTICE DOG OWNERS!

Dog Owners may pay their dog tax any time up to June 1st, by leaving same at either Lyon or Schondelmayer Store in St. Joe.

It is really wiser to choose a wife who is handy in the kitchen rather than around the automobile, for you have more appetite than you do tire trouble.

Many a husband who has no music sense, plays a good second fiddle in his own home.

You never saw a fellow place a want ad in The News for "'trouble." That is one thing for which you don't have to advertise.

The country may be going to the dogs, but with all these cities making laws about leashes, it looks as though a lot of dogs ought to go to the country.

Have you ever noticed there is no sign on Easy Street which reads "oneway traffic?"

PEOPLE LIKE WEATHER

We are usually running into a fellow, now and then, who reminds us of a human iceberg. He is cold and leaves us in an indifferent way that suggests a blast of cool air. We leave no impression upon his frigid manner. We simply don't matter to him, one way or another. He has himself wrapped in a robe of cucumber coolness and cares not a straw for our warm handclasp or sunny smile. He passes quickly but leaves a chilly impression. It causes us to wonder what part this man plays in the set-up of a town like St. Joe. In our scheme of things, do we need a type like this to keep us from being too enthused, too gay? The iceberg passed, but it made us grateful for warm sunshine and a complete thaw.

Fourth "500" Win Aim Of "Flying Dutchman"

Louis Meyer
1939
3 TIME WINNER

Louis Meyer, probably the greatest American race driver—certainly on the record—is again a threat in the annual 500-mile automobile competition here on May 30.

Meyer will be piloting what practically amounts to a new car. It is the same Bowes Special which he built up for last year's race but which he hardly had time to prepare for the event. With a year's more work under the hood it should arrive at the track as one of the most formidable challengers for a slice of the $100,000 in prize money.

Meyer, one of the most consistent drivers of all times, is also an expert mechanic and prepares his own car for the race—an added advantage.

ADDED TRAFFIC

With the arrival of pleasant days and the added loveliness of flowering plants and shrubs, the highways are becoming more crowded with pleasure cars. Folks are out to throw away Winter's cloak and aim to get a share of the beauty of Spring's handiwork. All motorists must look to safety as traffic increases. The country is succeeding in cutting down accidents each month, but we are still in the red. This is the time of year to make your resolutions regarding traffic during resorter and tourist season. Let us respect the rights of all, and see how we come out at the end of Summer.

MORE MULES

The mule is coming back. At least he isn't a vanishing factor as so many city folks are apt to think. There are over four million mules in the country and the number of mules foaled last year was the largest in ten years. The largest number of mules are located in the southern districts. There are oven ten million horses in the country, but there were foaled this last year the smallest number in six years!

The mule is given the highest rating in the value of all farm animals, with $118. The horse is valued at $84 and $56 for the cow. The hog has an average of $11, sheep at $5 and the chicken of 70 cents. You can be as stubborn as a mule and feel superior in monetary worth. Long live the mule.

WASHINGTON COMMENT

Mr. Hitler's answer to President Roosevelt supplied a liberal amount of whitewash for German international misdeeds, and contained small assurance of better conduct in the future. Demands for a broad track across the Polish Corridor, and for a German Danzig were repeated. It is likely that Germany will continue to arm, that heavy pressure will be put on Poland, and that English efforts to encircle Germany with allied nations will continue to be fought tooth and nail. Mr. Hitler's remarks did not create the excitement in the United States that was expected. Although there has not been opportunity for a thorough reaction, perhaps the American comment may be summed up as: "Let him rave, and let us do our best to keep clear of the mess."

After a period during which Congress may be said to have been resting on its oars, with a pull now and then to take care of routine business, the serious matter of tax reform seems likely to be something that will cause the lawmakers to buckle down to genuinely hard work before long.

The object of the proposed tax legislation, generally stated, will be to secure an adequate flow of investment money into private enterprise. With that end in view, minor corporations may be accorded an income tax exemption of three thousand dollars, a more equitable arrangement as to capital gains and losses and depreciation may be worked out, and there may be an easing off on the excess profits levy.

Under the new order, perhaps old age annuities can be taken care of on some sort of a current basis, rather than by accumulating a large fund. The surtaxes in the higher income brackets stand a good chance of being reduced. State and federal salaries may be made more completely available for taxation, and tax-exempt securities may be abolished.

Although the proposed alterations in the tax laws undoubtedly are directed toward the general good, they seem to be lacking in changes that will effect a let-up on the small man, and very likely hereafter, as heretofore, he will be given ample opportunity to contribute.

With a view to getting rid of duplication in the doing of the work of the federal government, the President has outlined to Congress a system whereby all agencies relating to government lending, social security, and public works, are to be combined under three heads. That a considerable amount of overlapping exists, cannot be denied. Whether or not that can be avoided without loss of efficiency is a matter of conjecture. Mr. Roosevelt believes that conditions can be improved in that respect.

"It is a comprehensive plan which challenges careful study. If it spells economy and simplification in Government it will be warmly embraced by Congress."

It is to be doubted whether the careful study, suggested by Senator McNary, will be accorded. If there is study, it will have to be of the rapid and intensive sort. Due to the operation of parliamentary rules, consolidation may come up for a vote before its friends have cooling-time, and before its enemies have opportunity to pull themselves together into an effective opposition.

If you would improve your lot in life, don't wait for the government to build a house on it.

COUNTY AGENT SPEAKS ABOUT POTATO PLANTING

Every year just about one week before late potato planting time arrives too many potato growers with a small acreage ask themselves whether or not they spend a little more money for good certified seed or follow the usual custom and plant what they can get on a minute's notice. The cost of good seed is very little above that of ordinary potatoes, generally 25 to 50 cents more per hundred pound sack, but the difference in yield is considerable and in favor of the good seed.

For the past 18 to 20 years, records have been kept on these smaller acreages, or farm potato patches, all over the state. Seventy to one hundred twenty bushels more per acre have resulted from good seed when other conditions were the same and this increase was obtained at a very slight additional cost. The increase from certified seed has been due to the elimination in the field of those virus diseases that have taken a heavy toll when just plain potatoes were planted. Certified seed undergoes a rigid inspection by trained specialists, with several field and bin inspections, before it is passed. This seed is then certified, given a number, a tag and a seal, and comes to the buyer in a clean sealed, tagged, and stamped bag. No sack should be opened unless by the final purchaser. The tag tells the grower's name, his number, the variety, and by whom certified (such as the State Department of Agriculture or the State College Certification Committee.)

Such terms as "Seed Potatoes," "Selected Seed," "Northern Grown Cobblers," etc. mean potatoes that may be diseased or couldn't pass inspection and are disguised as good seed and sold at a higher price than ordinary table potatoes. Growers should not rely upon the word of the salesman that here is something just as good, or upon the misleading tags, or the outward appearance of the potato for what is on the inside is what counts.

Hoosier potato growers are very fortunate in that there are a number of state agencies that supply good seed to every county. Many of the chain stores and local dealers will have a supply on hand for those that come early and know what they want. The Cobbler, Katahdin, and Chippewa are the better varieties for planting in Indiana with the Rurals, Triumph, and Early Ohio following in order.

"The main difference" as one grower expressed his opinion, "with ordinary seed was I got back just as many potatoes as I planted but they were smaller while from good seed I had 40 bushels more than we could use." Good seed and good practices go with good business and better farming.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY AT AKINS TEA ROOM

Besides her husband, she was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miser, of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy, of Garrett, and Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt Miser and children, of Albion. They were all pleased to return to St. Joe and see many of their old friends.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If the Indiana electorate retires Senator Sherman Minton in 1940 for a man like Ray Willis or Charlie Halleck, there will be very little mourning among Minton colleagues in the Senate. For the Junior Senator from Indiana has managed to establish, in the short space of five years, something of an all-time record as an enemy-maker.

Best illustration of his remarkable talents in the art of irritating and alienating was his bitter and extremely-biased anti-press campaign of a year or so ago. Since then Minton has been going along making enemies in a less sensational fashion, but making them nevertheless.

NEW PEOPLE, therefore, wept bitter tears or cancelled their newspaper subscription when they read the following in a recent nationally-syndicated column by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner:

"Minton is actively disliked by most of his colleagues. The dislike might be taken as personal, for while he is tho sort of big, hearty politician the Senate will usually accept if not love, he does tend to be a bit cocky in debate, and has said one or two things on the Senate floor which have not been forgiven."

Alsop and Kintner described Minton as a "tried and true, 200 per cent, guaranteen non-shrinkable New Dealer. . . who. . . looks like what he used to be—an American Legion politico."

HOOSIER Democratic leaders, sensing the growing tide of sentiment against the New Deal and Senator Shay, are frankly worried about 1940. Privately they are asking: "What are we going to do about Minton?"

Teh sad fact of the matter is that they must do one of two things—either renominate him or kick him upstairs into a judgeship or some other political appointment. They can't afford to repudiate him for by so doing they would repudiate the New Deal and everything it has stood for.

It's a case of sink or swim with Minton and the New Deal. Worried Democrats are preparing to mann the lifeboats and pray for their lives.

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Rep. Louis Ludow, of war referendum fame, types his speeches and a large share of his correspondence on a battered typewriter of pre-war vintage—a relic of his newspaper days. . . Back before the last election, when the GOP in Indiana was at its lowest ebb and Charlie Halleck was the only Hoosier Republican in Congress, the Rensselaer representative used to mournfully say: "I guess I'll call a conference of the Indiana Republican delegation and go in a huddle with myself in a telephone booth." Them days have gone forever." . . Rumors have reached Washington that Arch Bobbitt will resign soon to become a candidate for Governor, thus setting off another inter-party fight for the Republican state chairmanship. . . Frank McHale will open McNutt-for-President headquarters in Washington before long. . . Sentiment for Tom Dewey is said to be increasing in Hoosierland. . . In the words of that once-popular song, Senator Minton, "Where Did You Get Those Eyes?"

HOOSIER FIRST LADY: Sparkling-eyed Hazel Whitaker Vandenberg, former Fort Wayne school teacher and wife of the Michigan Senator, had a White House preview in the role of first lady recently. Her sorority, Delta Gamma, held a convention here and was received for tea in the executive mansion. . . In the absence of Mrs. Roosevelt, the Hoosier Schoolmistress unobtrusively filled in the little gaps that the White House staff couldn't quite supply.

FREE SERVICE: Rep. George W. Gillie, first veterinarian ever elected to the House of Representatives, has offered free service to his colleagues in Congress—Republicans and Democrats alike. "If you ever get to feeling sick as a horse," he tells them, "just call on me."

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1939 NUMBER 19

MORTUARY

TRAXLER

Elmer Ellsworth Traxler, the eldest of four sons, was born to Jacob and Susanne Hill Traxler, in Defiance County, Ohio, April 3, 1865, and departed this life at his home near Newville, with his immediate family near his bedside April 26, 1939, at the age of 74 years and 23 days.

Mr. Traxler was left an orphan at the age of 10, when his mother died, his father having passed away one year prior to this. The boys were all given homes with their relatives as follows: The deceased with his grandmother at Delaware Bend, Ernest with his uncle, Eli Hill, at Antwerp, Ohio, Samuel with an uncle David Traxler at at Bement, Illinois, and Perry with his uncle, William Fleck at Antwerp, Ohio.

Mr. Traxler left Defiance County, Ohio and came to DeKalb County, Indiana in 1889, at the age of 23. On February 1, 1889 he was married to Ida M. Cotrill and to this union were born three children, Hugh C., Terry and Maxine, who departed this life October 12, 1912, at the age of 5 years.

Mr. Traxler was a good husband, an indulgent father, an obliging neighbor and a true friend, ever ready to lend a helping hand in sickness, trouble or misfortune. Although not a professing Christian he was a firm believer in the Divine Plan and practiced the true spirit of Christian charity.

He was a hard working man, efficient as a locomotive engineer and was master mechanic for various locomotive construction companies.

He leaves to mourn his going, the devoted companion, two sons, five grandchildren, one great grandchild and many friends and neighbors.

As we delve into the character of our lamented friend we are impressed with Whittier's description of an old friend—

"Formed on the good old plan
A true and brave and downright honest man.
He blew no trumpet in the market place
Nor in the church with hypocritical face
Supplied with cant the lack of Christian Grace.
Loathing pretence, he did with cheerful will
What others talked of, while their hands were still."

Funeral services were held at the home April 29, by Rev. P. A. Hubbartt, pastor of the U. B. Church. Burial in Evergreen Cemetery. Richard Rupp of Archbold, Ohio, mortician.

HAMILTON

William Luther Hamilton, son of Catherine and Benjamin Hamilton, was born November 13, 1876, in Allen County, Indiana, and departed this life May 2, 1939.

The family moved to the farm one mile east of St. Joe when William was four years of age. Here he has resided the larger portion of his life.

September 19, 1901, he was united in marriage with Pluma E. Northrup who survives. The first eight years of their wedded life were spent on a farm near the old home. He continued to assist his father with the farm work until the Fall of 1909 when his parents moved to St. Joe. He then occupied the farm where his family has since resided. He purchased this place in 1921.

His education was acquired in the public schools of his home district and at St. Joe. He united with the Lutheran Church at St. Joe in early manhood. This affiliation continued until his death.

Two children adopted into the family survive—Mrs. Cecil Wisler, St. Joe, and James, at home. There is one grandson, Neil Wisler.

One brother and three sisters also survive—Frank of Lincoln, Nebraska, Mrs. O. K. Shull of St. Joe, Mrs. Lee O. Tustison of Defiance, Ohio, and Mrs. Delphia Provines, of Oklahoma City.

Mr. Hamilton was a good husband, father and neighbor, firm in his convictions, generous with all who were privileged his friendship. Among these friends his memory will remain.

The funeral services were held from the home on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Frank Stevenson officiating, assisted by Rev. J. N. Scholes. Interment was made in Riverside Cemetery.

Those who attended the funeral from a distanct were: Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Hamilton, of Lincoln, Nebraska, Clark Hamilton, Harrisburg, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Joe Stephens, Harvey, Ill., Mr. Lyale Hoyd, Holman, Michigan, Mrs. Ada Orr, Gobles, Mich., Mrs. Lloyd Hoyt, Mr. Ralph Hoyt, Mr. and Mrs. Armond Northrup, all of Pearl, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Miller, Hudson, Mich., Mr. Gerald Brown, Fort Wayne, Ind., Mr. and Mrs. Lee O. Tustison and son, Keith, of Defiance, O., Mrs. Lela Northrup, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Northrup, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wyatt and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Goldsmith, all of Fort Wayne.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks to our neighbors and friends for their sympathy and expressions of friendship in our sad bereavement, for the comforting words of the minister and for those who helped in the kitchen.

DAYLIGHT SAVING or WAR?

The funniest talk I've heard this year—
Does daylight saving save, my dear?

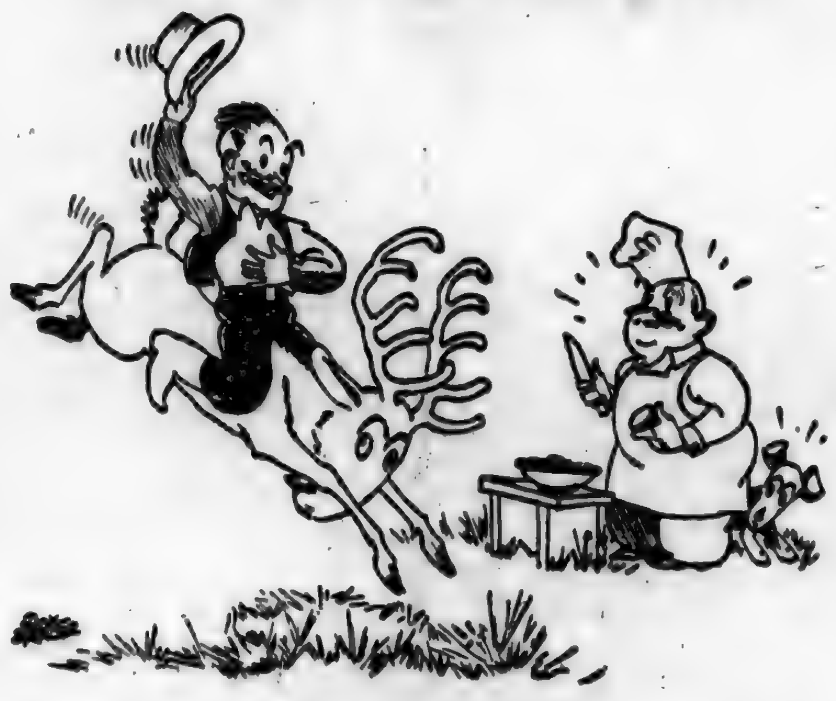
Of all the evils under the sun,
Daylight saving surely is one,
It wastes your time and makes you late,
Or an hour too early as sure as fate.
It's easy to set the clock ahead,
To get up early, or stay in bed—
You can call five, six, with nary a groan,
It won't stiffen a lazy spinal bone.

Some "guys" can rise at the hour of six,
If the hands of the clock is pulling the tricks,
But Boy! It would mow 'em down alive
If they had to get up, when the clock said five!
Shoving the hands of the clock around,
Don't give more time as the wise have found,
You can change the hands of the colck you know,
But a good strong back-bone has to grow.

So turn up your clock to daylight time,
It gives a poet a chance to rhyme,
It starts discussion, and lets off steam,
And doesn't disturb the rich man's dream.
So turn up your clock, and rush pell-mell,
While war lords of Europe talk war and hell,
Our chief concern, as they rant and rave—
Is, "what does daylight saving save?"

GERTRUDE BORTHWICK.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

ACCORDING to an item in the Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Telegraph, Lester Enterline of Wisconisco went hunting in the Upper Small Valley near Lykens, and shot a buck. No sooner was the animal down, however, than it leaped to its feet and charged the hunter. Enterline was so taken by surprise that he tackled the deer bare-handed, finally succeeding in getting on its back. The deer ran down a timber road toward camp, where another member of the party, Clay Hoffman, was peeling potatoes. Hoffman dashed out and put an end to the deer with his potato knife.

Why walk back to camp if you don't have to?

OBJECTING TO FINAL REPORT IN CURIE ESTATE

Claiming that they were not served with a legal summons on the sale of a store building in St. Joe to Arnold E. Kinley, Delora Curie and Elgin Curie of St. Joe, widow and son of William Curie, deceased, are demanding that the sale be set aside. The demand is included in written exceptions to the final report of S. H. Platner, administrator of the estate, filed in the DeKalb Circuit Court Saturday.

The Curies are protesting the sale because, it is stated in the exceptions, they had arranged to secure the funds necessary to close the estate without the sale of real estate to any person other than Delora Curie, who had a potential claim against the estate of $4,905.74. The mother and son claim that they had arranged to get the money to close the estate, and Mr. Platner set a day to meet them at the DeKalb County court house. But, according to the Curies, Mr. Platner did not appear at the specified time, and they were unable to find him.

They also took exception to the payment of $550 to Mabel Baker, claiming that the amount is excessive. According to the plaintiffs she owes the estate a book account, which amount with accrued interest deducted from the balance of the principal and the interest due on a note owed by the estate, leaves a balance considerably less than $550.

HONOR THY MOTHER

An Englishman was rather astounded by the observance of so many "special days" and asked why we set aside these occasions if not purely for mercenary reasons. Our reply was that it seemed to be the American way. We admit being a sentimental people and are rather proud of it, even though it may be bad taste to make a public demonstration of private feelings. But we cannot be censored when the idea is purely of respectful salutation. It is true that the event has been commercialized, and we regret it, but there are those of us who will not permit this to spoil the deeper meaning.

The Ten Commandments have been broken by most of us. They have been thought old-fashioned and overtaken by a more stream-lined civilization. But one of these will never be denied by man, "Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother." The worst of us, who will heedlessly break and scorn the other commandments, cling to this family creed above all else. Despite all the modern methods of living and the forces working against it, the life of the family survives. The family that exists in a helter-skelter world, involved and distracted, goes on and counts itself fortunate to have lost everything else perhaps, but not its family life. It is to the mothers of our country, families to whom we pay our honor, to her we make our bows of respect. The heart overflows but the ink grows dry on the pen. The tongue desires speech but the words die on the lips. The gift is a small offering, but to a valiant soul. The inspiration of poets and song-writers, the subject for painter and photographer, may not want so much sentiment. But we continue to honor mother and the institution of our family life. We cling to our sentiments, which make us conscious of the happiness and the misery of others, the sentiment which has its seat in the heart. Let us lose every modern and supercharged habit, if we must, but never let us lose the respect and love we have for the family. This is indeed, the American way.

$25.00 reward will be given for information leading to arrest and conviction of party who took electric motor from pickle station in St. Joe.

RADIO BARN DANCE PROGRAM WAS SUCCESSFUL

The "Radio Barn Dance" held last week in the community hall at Spencerville under the sponsorship of the P. T. A., was a huge success. The program was complete with character impersonations of all the famous barn dance characters heard over the WLS and WLW radio stations mingled with musical numbers, readings, and dances by local talent as well as out of town talent.

Hazel Stiman Schrader played "Aunt Idy" with Joseph Newhouser, of Leo, going through all the pranks of "Little Clifford" could think of playing. Together they put on quite a seasoned performance in spite of being amateurs. Miss Louise Shockley playing Lula Belle and Clyde Hart as good, old Uncle Ezra, who in spite of his new fangled bicycle finally reached the show in time to joke and dance, kept the audience well entertained. Five little quintuplets played by local "not scrawny" women and guarded by Walter Baker and Ida Reed as Dr. Dafoe and the French nurse, aided Little Clifford as well as the hayloft characters in having a very good time.

To counteract the foregoing actors, were a large number of singers, square dancers, serenaders, harmonizers, etc. Merle Coburn gave each night an exhibition of his trick fiddling. The Ritter family of Angola were marked favorites as the Alpine Yodeler and Patsy Montana. Two little darkies, Pat Fluke and Blain Kimes, dressed appropriately entertained with a song and dance. Miss Vivienne Ziegler as Lucille Long sang "Deep Purple" as well as bringing her gang of "Bunion Busters" and putting on a square dance. Ten local primary tots put on a perfect performance of a midget square dance and received an appreciative hand from the audience. One of their number, Pat Angel, also sang "Little Skipper."

Four accomplished players from Ft. Wayne were the "Spanish Serenaders." They were all attractive members of the same family. The Chaney sisters and the Kline children furnished instrumental music each evening on accordians and saxophones. "Two Little Maids" were two local girls, Faralee Walter and Lois Rutherford and the "Backyard Harmonizers" were a group of local boys who had their first experience singing together. "Winnie, Lou, and Sally," as well as famous "Popeye," were taken by members of the Jay Hart family.

A great deal of merriment was furnished by the Midget Band under the direction of Wayne Rosselot. Their instruments resembled everything but instruments. "Girls of the Golden West" were really Sylvia Washler of Newville and Mary Jean Bradley of Angola. Evelyn Shook and Betty Shockley as the "Happy Harmonizers" made their first appearance together singing "Funny Old Hills." Dressed in the garb of a bride and groom of the 1890's, Joyce Dean and Rachel Chapman were the "Paw and Maw" who sang "When Paw Was Courtin' Ma." On Thursday evening Marcia Guilford of St. Joe played a harmonica solo. Little Miss Mary Moore of St. Joe sang "Home On the Range."

Donna Mae Washler mimiced several members of the cast and the audience with her reading of the last day of school. "The Doll Dance" was played by Eloise Saylor, Josephine Chapman was "Judy Dell. Probably the smallest performer was little Marna Joe Newhouser who behaved much better than her daddy, Little Clifford, and sang quite capably, "Little Sir Echo" and "Josephine." It wouldn't be fair to just say that we had a capable dancer on our program in the person of April Bowser for in her acrobatic dance she left little doubt in the minds of her audience as to her capability. She performed as a true artist each night. Richard Souder, of Leo, playing Lula Belle's Scotty proved very popular, also a trio of Harlan girls sang exceedingly well.

In every program there must be a background to accompany the performers who generally get the credit. In the Barn Dance it was provided by the pianists Janice Boweser and Laverne Angel and Paul Dean as Red Foley and Bill Allen who accompanied all of the musical numbers with the guitar and base viol. Joe Wallace and Marion Saylor as well as the Hart boys also helped on several numbers. There were huge quantities of local color in the black face comedians and adult square dancers as well as in the hayloft decorations.

The entire cast and the director, Mr. Miller, are to be congratulated on the performance they rendered after only two nights of practice.

Because a number of people have been given a wrong impression of the character of the directors and for that reason were skeptical of the financial outcome of the performance, the P. T. A. committee are happy to announce that they found all dealings with the men admirable and satisfactory and that on Monday the local secretary deposited in the P. T. A. account, $97.84 as their net share of the proceeds with a possibility of a little more coming in.

Poppy Day will be observed throughout the United States on Saturday, May 27, with the wearing of memorial poppies in honor of the World War dead.

The observance will be led by the Auxiliary women who will distribute poppies on the streets during the day.

More than eleven million of the little red memorial flowers have been made by disabled World War veterans working in government hospitals and poppy workrooms maintained by the Auxiliary. These flowers are crepe paper replicas of the poppies which grew on the World War battlefields and among which the dead and wounded fell. They are recognized throughout the English-speaking world as the memorial flower for those who fell in defense of democracy.

Volunteer workers from the unit will offer poppies on the streets all day and will receive contributions for the Legion and Auxiliary welfare and relief work among the disabled veterans and dependent families of veterans.

Poppies for distribution here have been ordered from the Veterans' Hospital at Marion where disabled veterans have been given employment through the Winter and Spring making the little flowers. They are expected to be worn more generally than ever before on Poppy Day this year.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

In spite of the contentions of sundry statesmen that we shall have plenty to do if we sweep before our own door, the papers have skidded Congress, the President and domestic concerns to the back page. They would not do so unless readers were interested primarily in something else. A fight, or a prospective fight, never fails to draw a crowd and attract attention. Thus it comes about at this particular time that the motorist will lay off repairing a flat tire on the way to get the doctor for a sick child, and discuss the doings in Europe. As to comment, nothing can be done save to bow before the trend of events, and the trend is distinctly in the direction of Danzig, once regarded as no more than an old town which the tourist might skip, and still keep his standing as a well-travelled man.

Adhering to round numbers, Danzig is a city having a population of four hundred thousand, and in that respect represented in the United States by Washihngton, D. C., Kansas City, Mo., Paterson, N. J. or Cincinnati, O. Its inhabitants are preponderently German. Upon that point there should be no misunderstanding. The German majority is eager for a return to the fold of the Fatherland. The Nazi movement is strongly intrenched. It is not, however, due to sentimntal affection for the Teutonic homeland, or to a desire to spread Nazi doctrines, that Danzig probably would welcome Mr. Hitler and shed no tears over the destruction of the free city government. What really sticks in the craw of German Danzig can be understood best when a little of the recent history of the place is recalled.

Situated on the shores of the Baltic Sea and intersected by the River Vistula, Danzig was made a free city by the Treaty of Versailles, and placed under the protection of the League of Nations. Although Poland handles foreign affairs, railways and certain other matters, and although the two states are bound together by a treaty giving recognition to Polish law regarding economic administration and the collection of customs, Poland has no sovereign power in the Free City.

Since the hold which Poland had upon Danzig was none too strong, and in view of the fact that, after the World War, Danzig refused to handle munitions consigned to Poland, that country, with the aid of French capital, constructed Gdynia, its own Baltic seaport. Now it happens that Danzig thrives, for the most part, upon the commerce that passes through it, and Gdynia constituted a by-pass which, to a large extent, put Danzig on a back street. Here is to be found the chief reason why the ancient city is not fired by an ardent desire to keep Mr. Hitler out, though the venerable connection with the Reich, and a sympathy with things German, also have much weight.

Poland may yield somewhat regarding Danzig. Turning over Gdynia is an entirely different affair. It is essentially a Polish creation, regarded worthy of a clash of arms and the shedding of blood. The Poles may back down as to Danzig. Beyond that, it is to be surmised that bounds have been set, which not even Mr. Hitler may pass. If he does, there will be pauses, caused by something other than that the band has to rest and catch its wind now and then. If it comes to downright combat, Poland will get the worst of it at the start, as did Belgium in the World War. The Poles have a reputation as hard and persistent fighters. Perhaps they too can hold back Germany until allied aid is available; but what will happen to Poland in the meantime is not pleasant to think about.

The bald-faced arrogance of top New Dealers in their high-minded and reckless spending of the taxpayers' money has never been more clearly shown than in the reply of Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA Administrator, to a recent request by Representative Geo. W. Gillie, Fourth District Republican, for names and salaries of administrative and supervisory employes in the Fort Wayne WPA District.

The heart of Colonel Harrington's callous reply lies in the following paragraph from his letter to Mr. Gillie:

"I am entirely willing to furnish information regarding our administrative personnel, giving number of persons and salaries which they are receiving, but hesitate to give lists of names as I believe that such information subjects the individuals concerned to embarrassment."

justified in expressing astonishment up-jutsified in expressing astonishment upon learning that it is the policy of a Federal bureau "to conceal the salaries which are paid to public officials." Anyone would be astonished to learn that information on such public salaries was being withheld because of possible embarrassment to someone getting such a salary.

The reaction of the general public to Harrington's strange reply is summed up very well in a letter to the WPA Administrator from Samuel C. Cleland, prominent Fort Wayne Democrat.

"If you desire to keep your department free of suspicion and unjust charges," Cleland wrote, "the only honorable course to follow is to lay it open to the duly elected representatives of the people who provide the funds with which to operate it."

Colonel Harrington's policy is quite in keeping with the philosophy of the New Deal. Always it has been a position which says, "Whose business is it what we do with government money?" Whose business, indeed—it's the public's business.

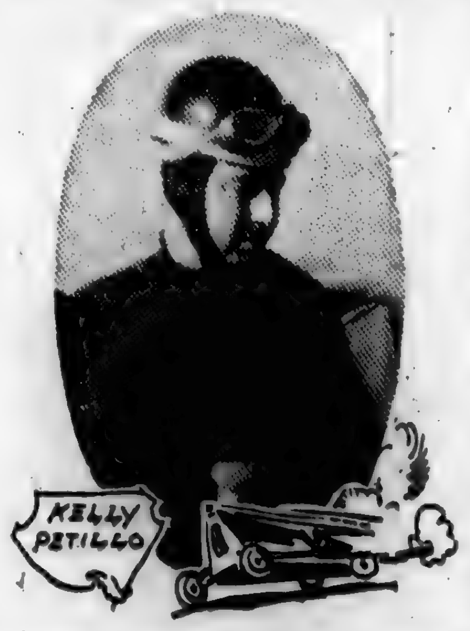
Petillo Rated Bright Hope in Classic Test



INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Kelly is hot this year!

That's the word that comes from the famous "ridge route" in sunny California that sets hearts in the Italian colony palpitating and means that Kelly Petillo, colorful little Italian who won the 1935 classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway is about ready to give a new motor a terrific beating in preparation for the annual 500-mile race on May 30.

"He drives his car at least 20 miles faster than it will run," the old timers say of Petillo who is the hardest, toughest driver to race at the famous Hoosier oval in many a day.

Asking no quarter and generally getting none, the cocky little Italian fills the stands when he is ready to qualify and is always considered "hot" and ready to win the big event.

He will arrive early with a new motor in his well-tried racing car.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Members of Congress from many states, particularly in the Middle West, are experiencing acute embarrassment because of an over-abundance of "favorite son" booms for the 1940 Presidential nomination.

Although the nominating conventions are far in the future, these booms, many of them growing out of the 1938 elections, are forcing early consideration of the preliminary task of lining up convention delegates. This is proving especially distressing to members of the House from states where two or more "favorite son" groups are in action.

It's extremely difficult for a Congressman hoping to return to Washington, to decide so far in advance which way to jump at a time when almost any guess may turn out next year to have been a politically dangerous one. But all want to get on the right bandwagon as soon as possible.

Indiana's Paul V. McNutt, whose failure to jump aboard the Roosevelt bandwagon before 1932 has caused him many a political headache, can sympathize with them heartily. McNutt's "misjudgment" of eight years ago hangs over him to this day and looms as one of the biggest obstacles to realization of his Presidential ambition.

FAVORITE SON candidates at this time number two or more in Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Iowa, New York, Missouri, and, potentially, Indiana, if one takes seriously the rumor that Homer Capehart may be supported by Indiana Republicans.

Hoosier Democrats in Congress, of course, already are lined up with McNutt, whether they like it or not, for none of them care to buck the State House Machine next year. Even Senator Van Nuys and Representative Ludlow are passing out McNutt pamphlets.

Since the election last Fall, one has ceased to hear Governor M. Clifford Townsend mentioned as a possible Vice-Presidential candidate.

FICTION: Gilt Off the Dome's nomination for the 1939 Pulitzer Award in the field of fiction goes to Beefy Frank McHale, Democratic National Committeeman from Indiana. Basis for the nomination is an entertaining campaign pamphlet which he is circulating over the country to promote McNutt for President.

Typical exerpt from the McHale fairy story:

"Indiana had breadlines, storming mobs on the steps of the State Capitol, bankruptcy of municipalities, and a breakdown of local relief agencies when Paul V. McNutt became Governor. But not for long. . . .

"The Hoosier State was a scene of happiness where men and women felt secure in their jobs and homes, and where contentment and good feeling reigned when he retired as Governor."

CAPITAL SIDELIGHTS: Rep. George W. Gillie returned to Fort Wayne last week-end for his first visit since taking office in January. . . . Reason for the trip was an American Legion mass meeting at which Rep. Martin Dies was the principal speaker. Gillie, in his speech of introduction, referred to Dies as "that long-legged, two-fisted, hard-riding, fast-shooting, rip-snorting, raring-tearing terror from Texas". . . He said a mouthful!. . . Who will the Democrats and Republicans nominate for President, Vice-President, Governor of Indiana and Senator from Indiana in 1940? The writer is polling the twelve Indiana Congressmen on these questions and many others. . . . Watch future columns for the results. . . . If Gallup can do it, why can't we?

TOP HATS: Indiana Congressmen who were invited to the opening of the New York World's Fair would like Grover Whalen a lot better if he hadn't added at the bottom of the invitations: "Top hat and morning clothes."

"Imagine me at high noon in a top hat and morning clothes," mourned one Hoosier statesman. "Suppose a picture of me got back home to Indiana. It's bad enough that I'll be spending the Sabbath Day in revelry in the wicked city of New York but in those clothes the effect would be terrible."

"Besides, I haven't got a top hat. I'll have to rent one."

Church Committee for China Relief Hopes to Save Million Lives from Starvation and Death This Year

"The Greatest Massed Migration in History"

One million American friends to save the lives of at least one million Chinese civilian victims of war, famine, and flood, — at a cost of three cents a day, or only twelve dollars a year — is the present goal of the Church Committee for China Relief, with national headquarters at 105 East 22nd Street, New York City, and regional offices in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City, and Los Angeles. Local committees have been formed in many communities to aid this nationwide endeavor for the alleviation of human misery.

The Church Committee for China Relief has been designated as the agency of the churches of the United States, in appealing for funds for relief in China. The Committee was created by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, and China Famine Relief U. S. A. Inc. Its officers and directors are: Chairman, Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce; Vice-Chairman, Dr. John R. Mott; Treasurer, James M. Speers of New York; Director, Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield; Associate Director, Rev. Roswell P. Barnes; Director of Field Activities, Dr. Merle N. English.

Relief work in China will be non-sectarian and non-political, the Church Committee for China Relief states. Relief funds in China are distributed by the American Advisory Committee in Shanghai, an experienced and able group of American business men and missionary executives resident in Shanghai, serving without compensation, and making allocations to relief organizations and union committees in all parts of China where need exists and where relief can be administered dependably. These allocations are made in consultation with Dr. John Earl Baker, Relief Adviser, the preeminent authority on China famine, flood, disaster, relief and rehabilitation. Dr. Baker has recently completed an inspection tour of China to study the people's needs at first hand, to maintain contact with widely scattered local organizations, and to help the Church Committee for China Relief to more accurately determine the minimum amount of relief which is required merely to save China's millions of homeless, destitute civilians from starvation and death this year.

Contributions and pledges to help relieve this tremendous human need may be made through local committees, organized by leaders in churches and civic and benevolent groups in many communities, or may be sent directly to the Church Committee for China Relief, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.

IN THE AIR

The circus is on its way again delighting the hearts of young Americans. Comes the sound of the calliopes. The bare-back riders and clowns have emerged from Winter quarters and are careening under the big top. The chariot racers and trapeze artists awe the youth of the land. Sawdust gets in your shoes when you are young. But the munching of peanuts to the tune of brass bands and the ring-master's whistle, is relished by most oldsters too! We are glad that we live where it is a circus parade that plays an important measure in the lives of our young. We are grateful that the band, the sound of hoofs, the braid and plumes, the cheers, are for a circus. Thanks, America. And in St. Joe the Ginnivan Dramatic Co., will this week, take the place of the circus and it will be a week of pleasure for old and young alike. Everyone knows Ginnivan and the high class performances staged each night. We say, welcome to our town.

CITY PRIDE

We have been doing a lot of cleaning about the house. Every one likes to live in surroundings that are neat and clean, though there is a lot of work to keep it this way. It is good to have the clean windows and curtains, polished furniture and floors, sight of scrubbed and painted surfaces. What about the town you live in? The homes in St. Joe may shine in cleanliness but can we say the same for local yards and streets, vacant lots and alleyways? Civic pride calls for a Spring cleaning of all areas that are unsightly spots. Improve the appearance of this town. Auto drivers would appreciate improved streets, pedestrians would welcome improved sidewalks. There is always something to be done to make this a more attractive home town. Let us leave a pleasant remembrance in the minds of those folks who will be stopping here and driving through during the Summer months.

New Bait and Fly Casting Game May Rival "Skeet" in Popularity

WITH AN ESTIMATED total of 12,000,000 anglers in the country, "Fish-O", a new accuracy game just introduced for fly-fishermen and bait-casters is expected soon to rival "skeet" in popularity. Sponsored by the American Wildlife Institute and the Izaak Walton League of America, it may be played both indoors and out. An enthusiastic booster of the sport, because it simulates actual conditions and rules out special equipment, Tony Accetta (center), U. S. professional all-around bait- and fly-casting champion and star of "Let's Go Fishing", new 2-reel sound motion picture being distributed by the Fisher Body division of General Motors, explains the fundamentals of the fly-casting game to Dr. Charles A. Wilson, president of the American Camping Association, at the Michigan Sportsmen's and Boat Show in Detroit, while little Larry Baus Long awaits an opportunity of playing his first game of "Fish-O" as developed for bait-casters. The 4½-year-old boy, grandson of the hunting and fishing editor of the Indianapolis Star, shows exceptional ability with the rod and reel as evidenced by the fact that he appeared on the same program with the champion. Hollow metal rings, or bicycle tires, placed at unknown distances from the caster form the targets used in both games. They are scattered from 20 to 40 feet away for fly-casting, and from 40 to 80 feet for bait-casting

Why a Reserve?

The squirrel takes no chances. He knows there will come a day when the trees will be bare . . . and food scarce. So wisely he lays away an adequate reserve supply for the lean days ahead.

This same precaution is followed by capital stock* fire insurance companies in building up sufficient financial reserves for security to their policyholders in times of disaster. For, while it may be possible to predict approximately how many "ordinary" fires will occur each year and provide for them, no one knows when a conflagration or other major catastrophe will cause staggering losses.

At such times each policyholder is concerned with his individual claim. He looks to his insurance company to pay his loss, regardless of how many others must be taken care of. It is then that he appreciates the foresight of his insurance company in laying away sufficient funds, called surplus, for the protection of policyholders in just such emergencies.

Thus, through conflagrations, hurricanes, panics, business depressions and other trying times, capital stock company insurance has paid its losses, has consistently kept faith with the public.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY INSURANCE
Standard protection

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, automobile and other possessions the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

*CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

POPPY MONEY AID DISABLED

Every penny of the money contributed for memorial poppies on Poppy Day, Saturday, May 27, will go to aid disabled veterans and the families left in need by the death or disability of a veteran.

Distribution of flowers will be conducted by volunteer workers and all contributions will go in their entirety into the rehabilitation and welfare funds of the Legion and Auxiliary.

The dimes, quarters and dollars which are dropped into the boxes of the poppy workers on Poppy Day form the principal source of support for the relief and welfare work carried out by the Auxiliary throughout the year. There is a vast amount to be done for the disabled veterans, for their families and for the families of those who have died, and we believe that those in distress because of patriotic sacrifices are entitled to everything which can be done for them.

While the government has made provision for care and compensation of the war disabled, justice is never automatic and the aid of the Legion and Auxiliary is often needed to bring the veteran's case properly before the government. A great number of the disabled do not come within the provisions of the law and receive no compensation. Real hardship faces their families when they become unable to work or require hospitalization. Naturally, their comrades in the Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary are their first source of aid.

Through wearing a poppy on Poppy Day, every one can help us be ready to respond to the calls for help which will come to us during the year ahead. The poppy, which honors the dead, also aids those who did not die but who lost health and strength in the nation's service.

When Love Goes A-Roaming

"In the Spring, a young man's fancy, Lightly turns to thoughts of love."

Afar, thro' the star-gilded gloaming,
When vesper bells chime o'er the lea—
My sweetheart and I go a-roaming,
Our happy hearts joyous and free.
All life is a song—
Sweet vespers, prolong!
While my sweetheart and I go a-roaming.

The moon beams like molten gold gleaming,
Soft-tinting the woodland and mead—
Gild brightly our pathway, e'er beaming,
Where e'er our light footsteps may lead.
Yet, surpassingly fair,
Is the gold of her hair—
When my sweetheart and I go a-roaming.

The night-birds their rarest notes blending,
Trill greetings in melodies gay—
While sweetheart all graciously lending,
The thrill of her voice with their lay.
No notes, howe'er rare,
To her voice can compare—
When my sweetheart and I go a-roaming.

The whole night a-splendor is shining—
Yet, stars hung in azure-hued skies,
Seem ling'ring, all vainly repining
The light of my sweetheart's eyes.
Like a charm o'er the night,
Is their luminous light—
When my sweetheart and I go a-roaming.

The soft zephers whisper sweet wishes
Of devotion, that ne'er shall decline—
Of the rarest of all worldly riches,
Our pledges so pure and divine.
Like a heavenly gleam,
Shines future's fair dream—
When my sweetheart and I go a-roaming.

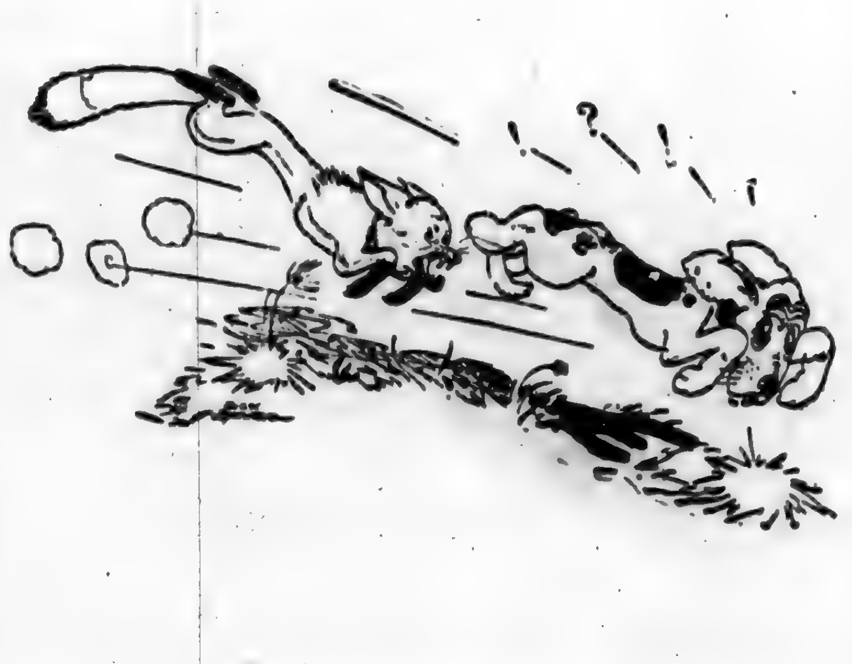
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

A FRIEND of ours from Missouri told us about a most unusual experience he had while fox hunting. A vixen turned on one of the young hounds. She chased him for all she was worth, biting him in the hind feet several times, and the poor distracted hound never stopped running until it was well past the hunters.

ESTATE HELD LIABLE FOR COSTS OF DRAIN

A ruling was handed down in the DeKalb Circuit Court Tuesday making the real estate of the late Philip Rigg, of Auburn, liable for the payment of a judgment against petitioners for the Cedar Creek drain.

Mr. Rigg headed a petition several years ago for the repair of Cedar Creek and lengthy litigation followed the filing of a remonstrance. The remonstrance eventually was sustained and a judgment of $11,566.52 was entered against the petitioners for court costs. Since that time some of the petitioners have paid their shares of the costs, which would have amounted to $250 each had all of them paid. However, some petitioners have died and others were not collectable and at this time a balance of $3,720 remains unpaid.

Pearl Keesler, daughter of Philip Rigg and administratrix of his estate, and wife of Henry Keesler, formerly of St. Joe, some time ago filed a petition for authority to sell the real estate in order to pay debts. Mike Lumm, a claimant against the estate in the sum of $704.96, filed an answer contending the estate was not liable for the judgment in the drain case for reason that Philip Rigg died before the judgment was entered. Counsel for some of the petitioners filed a demurrer to the answer and Judge Endicott sustained the demurrer.

The court Tuesday entered an order for the sale of the property, which is located in East Auburn and is described as lot 126 in Natural Gas addition. The estimated value of the property is $2,500 and the house is occupied by Mrs. Keesler. Sale is to be held at not less than the full appraised value. The court ordered that the judgment liens attach to the proceeds of the sale.

Judge Endicott held that the Rigg estate is liable for payment of the costs of the drain litigation. He said that the estate should pay its share of the judgment, but the effect of his ruling is to have all the proceeds of the sale applied to the judgment balance of $3,720 for court costs and another judgment of $90 held by H. E. Gardner. It is expected that Mrs. Keesler will then sue the other petitioners for the drain for contributions towards the fund to repay the estate.

The judgment for court costs is in favor of Edgar W. Atkinson and Oak Husselman, attorneys for the petitioners; Minnie Armstrong, widow of John C. Armstrong, who was sheriff at the time and served the papers; and DeKalb County for advanced costs.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Fetters called on Mrs. John Fetters Sunday evening.

Dr. Ed Showalter and wife, of Waterloo, were callers in the J. R. Shilling home, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Anderson, of Muskegon, Heights, Michigan, and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Eichmeyer, of Marion, were Sunday guests in the O. E. Ginther home.

SUNDAY MORNING ACCIDENT

An early Sunday morning collision with an electric pole at the Ralph Sechler Corers on State Road One, resulted in a badly damaged car and injuries to the occupants of the car, by way of bruises and cuts and teeth being knocked out. The man and woman in the car were from Bryan, and it seems that he went to sleep just for a moment. Dr. DeMuth was called to dress the wounds and a wrecker from Bryan took charge of the wreckage Happening at about 5 o'clock in the morning, but few knew anything about the accdent. The pole was moved at the base several inches and how they ever escaped wth their lives, is a miracle.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

One of the most important "E's" in the promotion of a good community safety program is "enforcement."

Most of the driving public believes in education and engineering as important steps in the promotion of a good community program and feels that enforcement is necessary, but that we ought to "go easy." Why go easy? If we have laws on our statute books which call for certain speed limits, and if any city council or village board establishes rules and regulations as law, why not enforce them? If we have a street with a speed limit of 25 miles an hour, then let's have the courage to enforce it at 25 and not 30 or 35. If we want to travel at 35, then let's step up the speed limit to 35, if it is safe enough to do so.

Enforcement requires backbone on the part of the enforcement officers and even more backbone on the part of the courts.

"Selecting a Becoming Dress" will be discussed at the next DeKalb County leaders training meeting. Miss Frieda C. Stoll, Clothing Specialist, of Purdue University, will be here on Tuesday, May 23, to meet with the representatives of the Clothing Project. Every woman desires to be becomingly dressed and for the slender and stout types great care must be taken in the selecting of the style of the garment. Whether the dress is ready made or whether it is to be made at home, the design must be selected from the large assortment. What designs are most becoming to me is the question of every woman. This will be answered by discussion and demonstration at 9:30 A. M. at the Court House Assembly Room in Auburn. This information will be of vital interest to every woman. If you are not receiving this work get in touch with County Agent C. E. Baker or Mrs. Alma Diehl, County Chairman. They will make it possible for you to be represented at this meeting.

TO OBVIUOS FOR COMMENT

We don't have to write this editorial. The conclusions are so obvious that it will write itself in your mind if you have the facts. Here they are:

Franklin D. Roosevelt, when Governor of New York, admonished the voters that those who continue to spend more than they earn end in the poorhouse.

The United States government is spending $15,000 every minute of every 24 hours.

It is taking in only $8,000 for every one of those minutes.

That is the long and the short of it. Need more be said?

If there's a remedy for trouble,
Just apply it;
If you fret, your trials double—
Then keep quiet,
There's no reason for repining;
Trouble is not helped by whining;
If there is a silver lining,
Haste to spy it!

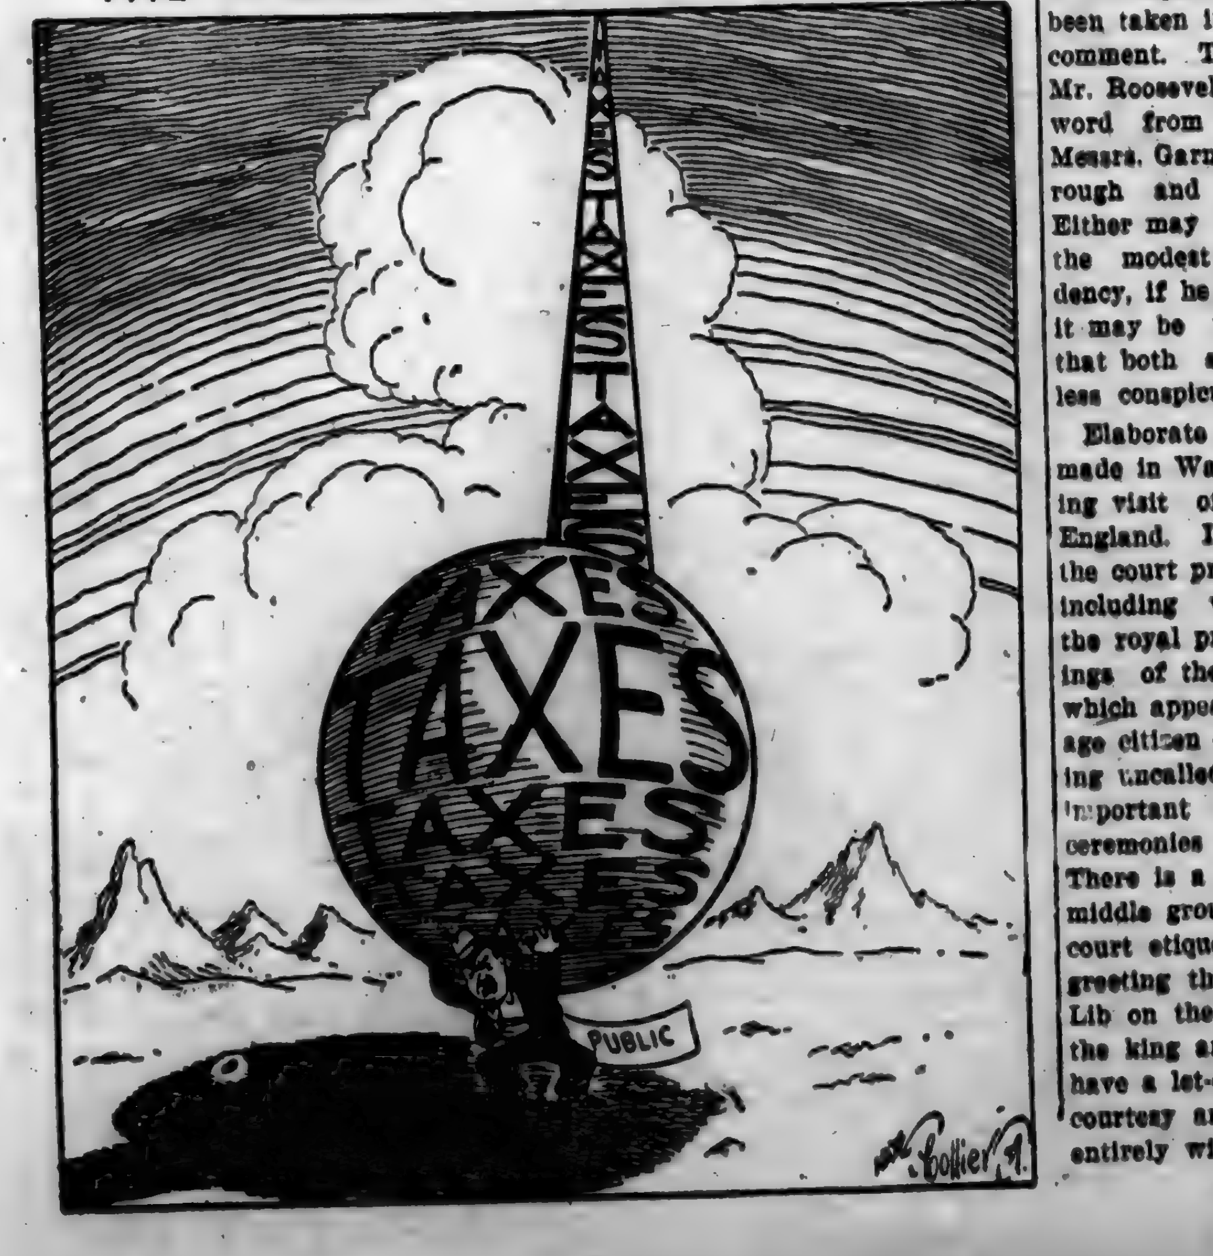
THE WORLD OF TOMORROW (?)



WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Recalling a sentence from Mark Twain, Time passes, as Time will do: and as the days slip by, the hour approaches when the Democrats will have to pick the man who, if their hopes and aspirations come true, will ride through cheering crowds, at the next inaugural, to the capitol, and thence back to the White House, with the uneasy head that wears the crown.

During the Hoover-Roosevelt campaign, a straw vote authority, whose predictions never had missed fire, picked Mr. Hoover to win. The vote count showed that there are occasions when it is not for us to know the times and the seasons in advance. Prophecy, however, has by no means gone into the general discard. The Hoover-Roosevelt prophet simply did not fortify himself with the right kind of material. The faith of the genereal public in the straw vote remains unshaken, and so it comes about that considerable weight is given to the popularity which that method of probing into the future has allotted to Mr. Garner.

By the same token, Mr. Farely is a man to be considered, the genial Postmaster-General following Texas Jack, as a hot-running second. Headed for the fair in San Francisco, Mr. Farley is giving his fellow-citizens a good opportunity to have a look at him, which in itself is a help. Fifteen speeches will be spread over a dozen states, and there will be postmasters' conventions to attend. Mr. Farley seldom shows himself to disadvantage, and the swing around the circle may put James in the forefront to a degree that will cause many another willing Barkis to sit up and take notice.

In connection with these and all other prognostications along the same line, it should be observed that there is an important factor that has not been taken into account at all in this comment. The sphinxlike silence of Mr. Roosevelt remains unbroken. A word from the White House, and Messrs. Garner and Farley may have a rough and rugged road to travel. Either may have to be content with the modest mantle of the Vice-Presidency, if he is willing to wear it, and it may be the will of the convention that both shall put on raiment still less conspicuous.

Elaborate preparations are being made in Washington for the approaching visit of the King and Queen of England. It has been suggested that the court practices should be followed, including walking backward out of the royal presence, complicated bendings of the body, and so on, all of which appears to the eye of the average citizen of the United States as being uncalled for, and so much bunk, important and proper though such ceremonies may be, on another soil. There is a dignified and respectful middle ground that lies between rigid court etiquette on the one hand, and greeting the tourists as George and Lib on the other. In all probability, the king and queen would be glad to have a let-down, within the bounds of courtesy and decency, and would be entirely willing to abide by the rule that admonishes travelleres, when in Rome, to do as the Romans do.

Among the amusing odds and ends swept up at the last minute are the case of the Massachusetts judge who fined eight motorists for overtime parking and left the court house to find a ticket on his car for the same offense; the fact that the name of Harry Tomorrow is in the New York directory; and the story of the negro who explained running through a red light on the ground that he thought green lights were go-signals for white drivers and red lights go-signals for colored.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Four out of five Indiana Democrats in Congress believe that Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner to the Philippines, will win the Presidential nomination at the Democratic National Convention next Summer, according to results of a poll conducted by Gilt Off the Dome.

Both Democratic and Republican Congressmen from Indiana were asked the followng question by your correspondent: "Who, in your opinion, will be the Democratic nominees for President and Vice-President in 1940?"

Three of the Democrats named McNutt for President, one "McNutt or Hull" and another Vice-President John N. Garner. Four predicted that Postmaster General James A. Farley would be nominated for Vice-President and the fifth selected Cordell Hull for the post.

SEVEN REPUBLICAN members of Congress from Indiana came forth with a wider variety of selections. Garner led with four votes for President, Secretary Hull was second with two and Senator Bennett Champ Clark was third with one.

Postmatser General Farley and Secretary Hull were named by two Republicans as the probable Vice-President nominee, and one vote each went to McNutt, John L. Lewis, head of the CIO, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, nominally considered a Republican.

ALL TWELVE Congressmen from Indiana voted "no" to the question: "Do you believe that President Roosevelt will be a candidate for a third term?"

HOOSIER DEMOCRATS, still shocked by the surprising showing of the Republicans last Fall, are pinning their hopes for success next year on the chance that McNutt will be the Democratic candidate for President.

The gloom which descended on Indiana Democracy when Republicans were elected to a majority of the seats in Congress and the lower chamber of the State Assembly, has only recently been dispersed by the beating of drums for the pulchritudinous Phillippine Commissioner.

Democrats in Congress who must face the electorate in 1940, are expressing deep concern over their chances for re-election. Friends of Senator Sherman Minton in particular, recalling Senator Van Nuys' slimmer-than-slim margin of victory over Ray Willis, are extremely pessimistic over Shay's 1940 possibilities. They reason that if the vastly more popular Van Nuys came so close to defeat, Minton will be lucky to carry his home precinct in New Albany.

SMALL WONDER, then, that Indiana Democrats are swarming in desperation aboard the McNutt bandwagon and praying that the Presidential lightning will strike the tall, tan and terrific formen governor. For McNutt is more than just the White Hope of the fast-falling Democratic machine in Indiana. He is the only hope.

"With Paul in the driver's seat," a Democratic official remarked recently, "we could really go places. His nomination would inspire the entire Indiana party organization. We'll ballyhoo the idea of sending a native son to the White House, McNutt would carry Indiana by a whopping majority and the rest of us would be swept into office on his coattails.

"Without McNutt, however, our cause is lost. Republicans probably will elect their entire state ticket, as well as a Senator and at least nine out of twelve Congressmen. It's 'McNutt or ruin' with us in 1940."

SIDELIGHTS: Several members of the Indiana Congressional delegation, including Representatives Gillie, Halleck, Harness, Grant, Johnson and others, are in New York City this week-end on a special World's Fair tour for Congressmen and their famllies. Their schedule includes visits to Radio City and U. S. battleships in New York Harbor, dinners and luncheons as guests of the Consul General of China, the mayor of New York, the Chamber of Commerce and Grover Whalen, Fair director, and an open house at the home of Rep. Bruce Barton. . . . Frank McHale sent three McNutt "feelers" to Jim Farley before Farley replied, simply by sending his photograph. . . . Rep. Louis Ludlow is having a speech he delivered in the House placed in schools all over the country to be memorized for oratorical contests. In his talk he praised Thomas Jefferson as "the greatest humanitarian since Jesus of Nazareth." Moved by the speech, Representative Cox, of Georgia said: "I trust a copy of this very wonderful address may be placed in the hands of every schoolboy and schoolgirl in America, that they may learn it and be able to repeat it for the remainder of their lives." This wish is to be fulfilled.

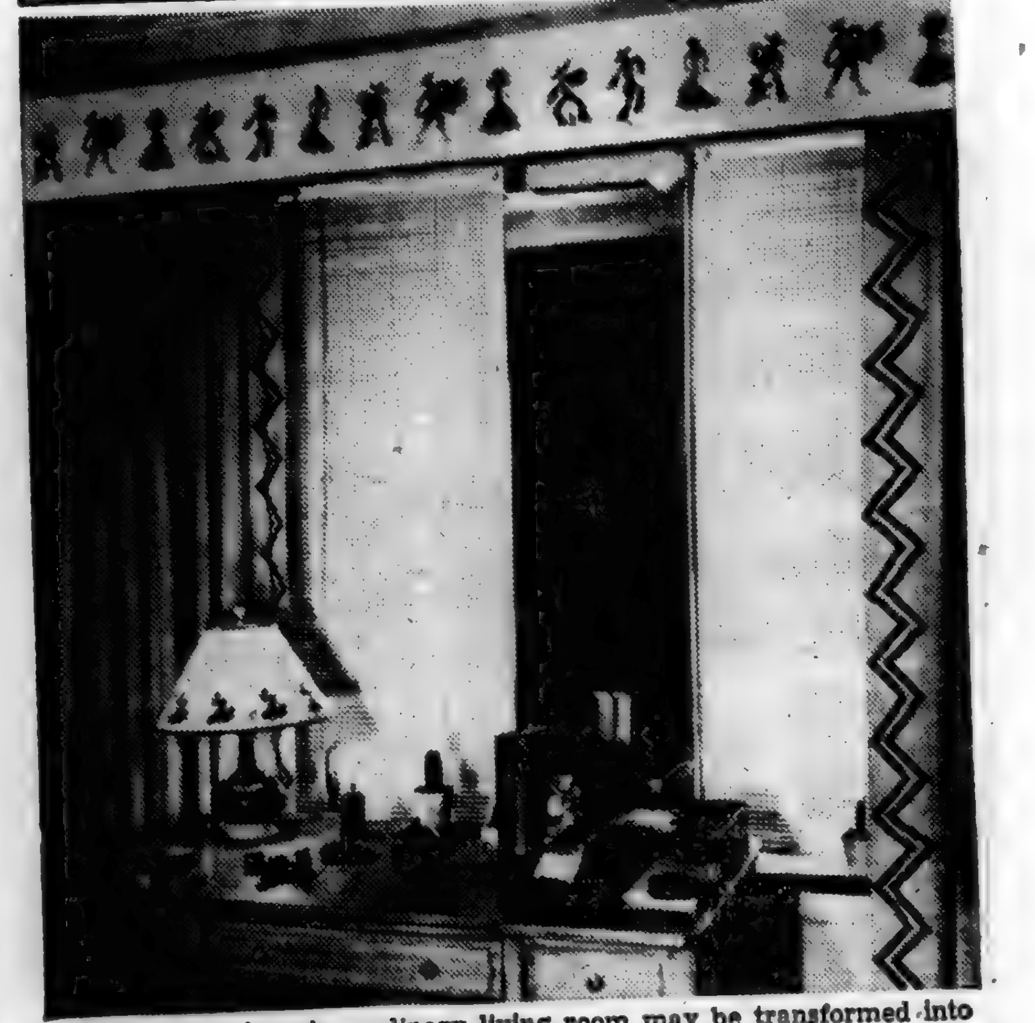
New Decal Art Depicts Old Mexico



How an otherwise ordinary living room may be transformed into a cheerily comfortable haven is illustrated by this original use of decalcomania. Using Old Mexico as the motif, colorfully attired senors and senoritas dance on the walls above artistically figured drapes. The homemaker added to the Mexican motif by having an old bottle wired for a lamp and she placed decal cactus designs on a lamp shade fashioned from parchment. Other items on the desk, the cactus and book-ends of senors at siesta, aided in the transformation, thus providing ample outlet for decorative talent.

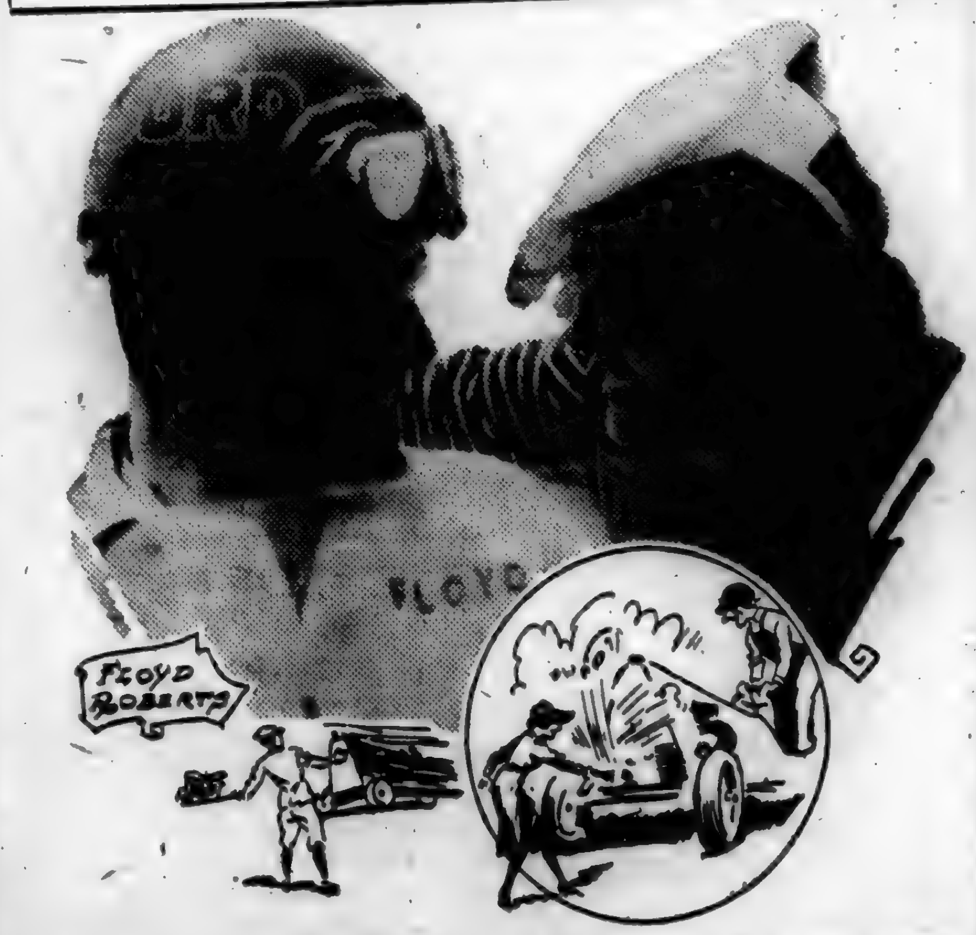
Anti-Feminine Tradition Given Trouncing by 500-Mile Champion



INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Floyd Roberts, the big nut and bolt man from Van Nuys California, dared the anti-feminine tradition of the track to win last year's 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

For years race drivers have shied away from women as far as their business operations were concerned. Women are barred from the garage section at Indianapolis and to drive a woman in a race car, so the drivers held, was certain hard luck of the "double-in-spades" kind.

But a cute little French movie actress, Olympe Bradna, on a personal appearance tour, stopped in Indianapolis early last April and visited the track the day Lou Moore and Roberts appeared with their Burd Special. Nothing would do but that Olympe should christen the new car. The starlet's press agent quickly produced a bottle of champagne to crack over the front axle. Olympe wired Roberts congratulations when he won the pole position with a speed of 125.681 miles per hour, and wired flowers when he won the competition. Roberts used to pound rivets in an airplane factory in California.

HEALTH HINTS for LIVESTOCK

PREPARED BY AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTH

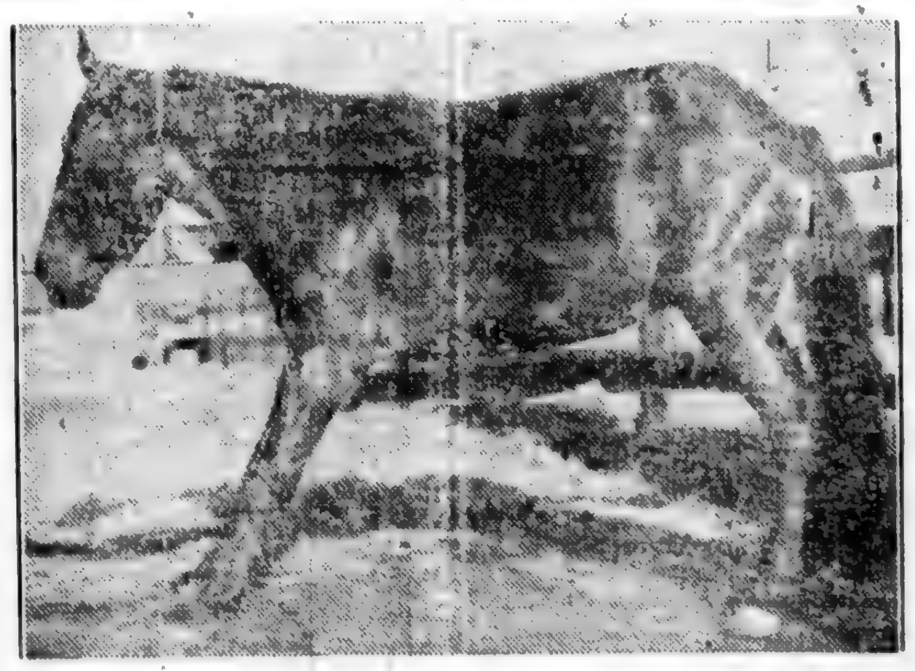
SLEEPING SICKNESS NOW MOST SERIOUS

THREAT TO HORSES

If history repeats itself, outbreaks of sleeping sickness among horses and mules will be very widespread this summer. The consequences are apt to be disastrous to horse owners unless they take advance precautionary steps to protect their animals.



A case of sleeping sickness. Note the eyes and mouth, the braced legs, and depressed appearance.

It is estimated that upwards of 170,000 cases occurred in this country last year. The disease is caused by a virus, which is believed to be carried by mosquitoes, flies, and other insects. Within the past few months it has been found that some cases of human sleeping sickness demonstrate the same virus which causes sleeping sickness in horses.

Principal hope for control of equine sleeping sickness lies in a new type of vaccine which was used with exceptionally good results last summer. In territories where horses were vaccinated with this new vaccine by veterinarians, a large percentage obtained immunity to the disease. The vaccine is now being released to veterinarians on a national scale for the 1939 season, and if owners have their horses immunized early enough, it should act as an effective curb on the disease in territories where it is used.

As an added precaution, owners should keep their horses protected against mosquitos, flies, and other insects in every way possible. Horses should be kept out of low pasture, should be kept in the barn at night, should be equipped with nets while working, and they should be sprayed with insect repellant.

Why a Reserve

The squirrel takes no chances. He knows there will come a day when the trees will be bare . . . and food scarce. So wisely he lays away an adequate reserve supply for the lean days ahead.

This same precaution is followed by capital stock* fire insurance companies in building up sufficient financial reserves for security to their policyholders in times of disaster. For, while it may be possible to predict approximately how many "ordinary" fires will occur each year and provide for them, no one knows when a conflagration or other major catastrophe will cause staggering losses.

At such times each policyholder is concerned with his individual claim. He looks to his insurance company to pay his loss, regardless of how many others must be taken care of. It is then that he appreciates the foresight of his insurance company in laying away sufficient funds, called surplus, for the protection of policyholders in just such emergencies.

Thus, through conflagrations, hurricanes, panics, business depressions and other trying times, capital stock company insurance has paid its losses, has consistently kept faith with the public.

Drama Revives Religious Spirit

Passion Play at Zion City, Ill., Enters Fourth Season.

ZION, ILL.—All down through the Christian dispensation men and women have thrilled to the wonderful story of the Life of Jesus Christ. This old, old story is beautifully portrayed in the Passion Play which is undoubtedly a most potent force in spreading the gospel.

The successful production year after year, for the past four years, of the Passion Play by members of the Christian Catholic Church at Zion, Illinois, has demonstrated that it is not necessary to travel to Oberammergau, Germany, to witness a worth-while reenactment of the events in the Life of Christ.

Jabez Taylor

Starting in a comparatively small way in the summer of 1935 it has each year grown in value as an annual religious festival, and each year has attracted a larger attendance from an ever widening circle.

The Zion Passion Play, the "Oberammergau of America," enters upon its fourth season on Sunday, May 14. Each Sunday afternoon, up to and including July 9, thousands from various parts of the country will witness the unfolding of the events of Christ's earthly ministry.

The outstanding success of Zion Passion Play is due in no small measure to the fact that Elder Jabez Taylor, its author and producer, spent several months in the Holy Land familiarizing himself with actual scenes of the Lord's ministry and making the sketches from which he has personally painted the scenery. The production is a three hour performance and has 26 scenes.

IF "POP" DID THE WASHING!

EVERY HOME WOULD HAVE AN Electric WASHER and MANGLE

BENDING over a tub or steaming and sweating—the only word for it—over a hot stove and a sad-iron that weights you down, too hot one minute, too cold the next, "Pop" would dream of modern laundry equipment, miraculously simple to use. Modern, improved washers thoroughly launder everything from the heaviest, hardest to handle linens and bedding to the sheerest, daintiest lingerie. Then think of dispatching an entire day's ironing in a few short hours while actually sitting down with a modern mangle!

This month your Electric Dealer is showing and demonstrating the latest in Electric Laundry Equipment.

MESSAGES TO MOTORISTS ARE PAINTED ON STATE HIGHWAYS

A message to motorists traveling the Indiana state highways is being painted on the pavement at hills, curves and railroad crossings as a part of the State Highway commission's safety program, T. A. Dicus, chairman, pointed out today.

Yellow lines, paralleling the center-stripe, are being renewed on highways where curves or grades limit the motorist's sight distance ahead to less than 750 feet. These lines designate no-passing zones and are an important part of the commission's effort to create safer motoring conditions.

White and black paint is being used in special markings on state highways as a warning to motorists that they are approaching a railroad crossing. This pavement marking supplements the standard reflector warning sign. Flashing signals have been installed at several hundred crossings as an additional warning to motorists.

Observance of these and other standard warning and caution signs along the ten thousand miles of state highways by the motorists will materially reduce the number of accidents and fatalities.

BOY SCOUT CAMPOREE HELD IN DILL'S GROVE

A Camporee for Boy Scouts in this District of the Fort Wayne Area, will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 27 and 28 at Dill's Grove.

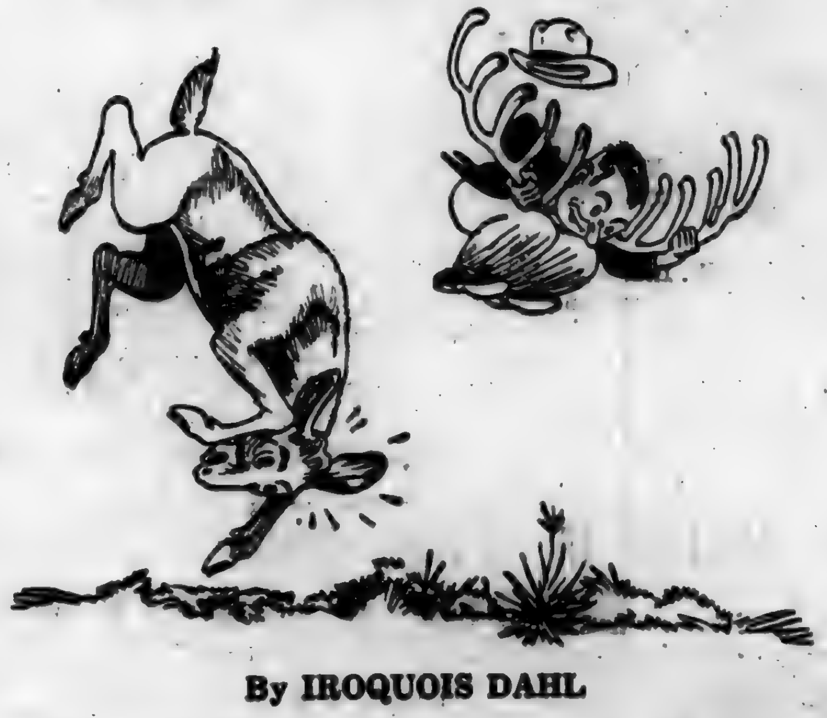
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

IT'S a mighty lucky thing that some cowboys go in for deer hunting. An Associated Press dispatch from Santa Rosa, Calif., tells of a unique experience enjoyed by one John H. Mays. He shot and wounded a buck, which later charged him. Mays, instead of running away, stood his ground, grabbed the deer by the antlers and swung himself on the animal's back. Deer and rider galloped away through the brush. Things were beginning to look rather uncomfortable for dare-devil Mays, when an antler broke. The gallant rider fell off and the deer was later found dead, a short distance away. Try it some time. It's great sport!

WALTER WHITEHURST POST No. 283
Meeting Night: Second & Fourth Tuesday of the Month. - - - -

Saturday is Poppy Day in St. Joe and throughout the United States. Millions of little red poppies will be worn in honor of the World War dead. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be contributed for the welfare of the war's living victims, the disabled veterans, their families, and the widows and orphans of the dead.

Members of Post 283 Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will be on the streets here early Saturday morning with baskets of poppies made by disabled veterans at Marion Hospital. They will ask everyone to put on a poppy as an individual act of tribute to those who gave their lives in America's defense, and to contribute something toward the Legion and Auxiliary work for the disabled veterans and dependent families.

The poppies will be crepe paper replicas of the wild poppies which grew in such profusion along the battle front in France. More than ten million of them have been made by disabled men working under the direction of the Auxiliary in government hospitals and special poppy workrooms. Hundreds of veterans unable to do other work have been given employment through the Winter and Spring shaping the little red flowers.

More than 100,000 women will be in Saturday's Poppy Day Army distributing flowers in memory of America's more than 100,000 World War dead. They will ask no price for the poppies but will give them for any contribution the wearer feels able to make. Every penny of the money contributed will go into the relief and welfare funds of the Legion and Auxiliary where it will work for the needy veterans and veterons' families during the coming year.

At the meeting of Post 283, it was announced by Commander Lehr Wilder that Jack Goodwin had been chosen by the scout master as the boy for the Legion Post to send to Boys' State at Indianapolis this year.

The Legionnaires of this Post are invited to visit the District Jamboree of the Boy Scouts to be held in the Dills Grove next Saturday and Sunday. Twenty Patrols from the district will be there and at dusk when the camp fires are burning, a court of honor will be held when merit badges will be awarded those who are qualified to wear them. Devotional services will be held on Sunday.

Legion picnic for the District will be held June 11 at Pokagon State Park. This will be an all day affair with plenty of entertainment. All Legionnaires and their familiees are invited.

Comrade Clark Scholes has announced a meeting of the committee on Veterans' Day at the DeKalb County Fair to be held in the surveyor's office in Auburn on Wednesday evening, May 31, at 8 P. M. This meeting is open to all Legionnaires.

There will be initiation ceremonies given at the next meeting of the Post on June 13th.

Don't forget Poppy Day next Saturday and the Decoration Services next Tuesday.

PROSPERITY AND PEACE WITH ALL PEOPLES SAYS WILLIS

Excerpts from Address Delivered by Raymond E. Willis, Republican Candidate for United States Senator in 1938, at the Irvington Club, in Indianapolis, Monday Evening, May 22

For six years this government has played the slot machine of destiny, five times stuffing in billions of dollars, each time fatuously hoping to get a jackpot, and turning up nothing but deuces or bob tail flushes. It still wants to play the game by filching money from the banks of babies and writing I. O. U's. Slot machines are scientifically set against a profitable return to the pluuger, and it is just as foolish to blindly ignore the economic laws which have been in force since civilization began and hope to win prosperity by gambling on the destiny of the future.

Today the American people are in revolt. It is a revolt of the dangers confronting them because of the unsound policies of the New Deal administration. Americanism is being reborn. We saw it in the last election when there was sent to Congress a large increase in the number of those opposed to the New Deal. That revolt started in the eastern states, spread over Pennsylvania and Ohio, and all but inundated the New Deal candidates in Indiana. Here the protest was registered by the election of a majority of the Republican candidates for Congress, and by the largest vote ever cast for the Republican candidate for United States Senator in the history of the party in Indiana.

There will be two dominating issues in the 1940 campaign—prosperity at home, and peace with all peoples, so far as this nation is concerned. The first issue will be between two philosophies of government. Shall we continue government by experiment, and go deeper and deeper into debt and despair, shall we committ economic suicide, or shall we lay hold on substantial principles of individual initiative, integrity, thrift, solvency and sanity to solve the nation's difficulties? There will be discussion as to what pieces of New Deal legislation we shall abolish, and what we shall amend to make workable, and how we shall care for the unemployed but the major issue will be whether we shall rebuild America on the sound, fundamental principles which made its citizens blessed with greater opportunities, more widely diffused education, and a more equal division of the wealth of the land than any other peoples have ever known.

Who built America anyway? Not a group of theorists who talked about planning other peoples lives or about being good neighbors and buying corn beef from Argentine while our own beef raisers had a surplus. America was not built by a group of bureaucrats from charts and grafts, questionnaires and surveys. America was built by men motivated by a vision of freedom and opportunity. It was built of the sinew and the nerve of the blood of the men willing to sacrifice for this dream. We must bring to the minds of the citizens of this day and to the youth who are longing for opportunity, a realization of the fact that there can be no hitch hiking on the way to success, and that although we provide for the less fortunate there is no economic security like the independence of earning one's own way in life.

The other great issue prominent in 1940 will be how to assure peace in this land and with our neighbors across the sea. If we may judge the people of America like I know the people of Indiana, we want no part in the European quarrels. We are not ready to say that it is inevitable that America must engage in the wars across the sea. The experience of two score years ago was too painful in the minds of the American people that they should want to repeat it. We have not yet restored the wealth of manhood, property and morals we lost in that effort. We are not interested in the propaganda of war mongers seeking to divert attention from the failures of the experiments in government. We want a rebirth and a restatement of the Amrican principle that we should keep out of European troubles.

For over one hundred years this nation did keep out of those troubles under the wise policy laid down by President Washington. We established the Monroe Doctrine and attended strictly to keeping this side of the world free from the aggressors of foreign nations. If we want that doctrine to be respected today, it is unethical and immoral for us to interfere with the affairs of peoples on the other side of the world. During that century of peace we were not concerned with aggression of Prussia; we saw Alsace Lorraine taken from France; we heard of the starving people in India and in Armenia; we heard the cries of those seeking liberty in Ireland, but we never though it was any of our affair except to lend Christian aid to the suffering. And that's all we need to do in this day—to lend our sympathy to the suffering and to build in this land an example of what can be done in a civilization of a free people.

In 1940 there will be a rebirth of Americanism and out of that rebirth we will find prosperity and peace.

G. O. P. EDITORS IN CONFERENCE WITH HOOVER

An informal conference with former President Herbert Hoover, was enjoyed by 175 Republican editors, Sunday afternoon at Hotel Hays at Warsaw, and were also guests of William Gross, editorial writer of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, who had made the meeting possible.

The hotel private dining room was used for the conference, and guests were admitted by tickets only. The open forum method was used, and a frank discussion resulted. The conference lasted for about three hours, with a lunch at the close.

F. B. Leighty, with other editors from this section, were among the group.

Interference by the Roosevelt administration is proving embarrassing to Great Britain and France in their efforts to avoid war in Europe, Hoover said. He advocated that western democracies "build defenses a mile high and then remain behind them."

HON. HERBERT HOOVER

War is not inevitable, he told the meeting, but he asserted that Europe will always be in trouble because of mixed populations. In the final analysis, he claimed, the question of American participation in any war would rest with the American people.

He said he is not seeking the 1940 Republican nomination and is not fostering the candidacy of any one man or group of men.

The welfare of the American people rests upon construction of a virile Republican party and a return to Republican principles of government, he stated.

He severely criticized the purchase of Argentine canned beef for use by the United States navy.

Present lack of confidence by businessmen, he told the conference, was due to fear of the outcome of the next presidential election, high taxes, labor conflicts and the danger of currency inflation.

Have you ever stopped to think that perhaps the reason some fellows talk in their sleep is because it is the only chance they get to express their opinion?

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Although the phrase "rubber stamp" is a trifle harsh and unjust to use in connection with the doings of Congress, the fact remains that the chief legislative body and the Executive have pulled pretty well together as a team. The instances in which Congress has let down the President are a few, and far between. Some measures, it is true, have encountered Congressional opposition at the start, but it has weakened and died away with the passage of time and the reapplication of pressure. A good example of what patience, persistence and prodding will do, is found in the Reorganization plan, looked at askance, laid aside, and ultimately taken up again and approved.

The Florida Canal bill, calling for an appropriation of two hundred million dollars, remains as exception to what seems to be the general rule, stated above. To use a fine mixed metaphor, the canal is having a stormy voyage. The Senate has set down its foot, and for the second time the completion of the project has been stopped, after five and a half million of relief funds have gone into it. The President as a diplomat as well as an executive, and diplomacy may dictate that nothing more be said at present about cutting off the tail of Florida and changing part of the peninsula into an island.

If the Florida Canal, after all, is a small thing to argue about, what is to be said regarding Argentine canned beef for the Navy? The Senate Appropriations Committee, by a vote of 9 to 7, has indicated that those American sailors who are in the fighting group, must eat American provender; or, stated differently, that American food will answer for the needs of all Americans. The President views the situation in a different light. The cause of good eats must move onward and upward, regardless of whether or not domestic canners like the process by which the advance is brought about. The canned meat affair raises a campaign issue. It may even constitute ground for a platform plank. The thoughtful Republican properly may question the patriotic devotion of a stomach filled with foreign cow. The sound Democrat, with equal propriety, may come to the relief of the party and support the principles that make for first rate corned beef and cabbage.

Col. Lindbergh, believed by some to have fixed his home temporarily on a foreign shore for the purpose of partial retirement, and perhaps with a slightly dampened ardor for his native land, has made it plain that he is far from being content with a shady seat on the porch, and that his desire to be of service has not waned. Following a critical survey, he tells a Congressional committee that Germany has faster airplanes that the United States, and can turn them out more rapidly in mass production, even to the extent of twenty thousand a year. He takes little stock in the idea that a heavy foreign bombing machine can cross the Atlantic and do damage here, but in a contest between plane and plane, we would be likely to come out at the small end of the horn in the long run. Efforts to foment discord between the United States and any foreign power are to be frowned upon, but Col. Lindbergh is not playing the part of a propagandist or trouble maker. If, as he states, each fighting plane of the United States can be chased and overtaken by several planes of any one opposing power, we are not in a position to claim supremacy in the air. It remains for wise heads to decide regarding the end for that supremacy.

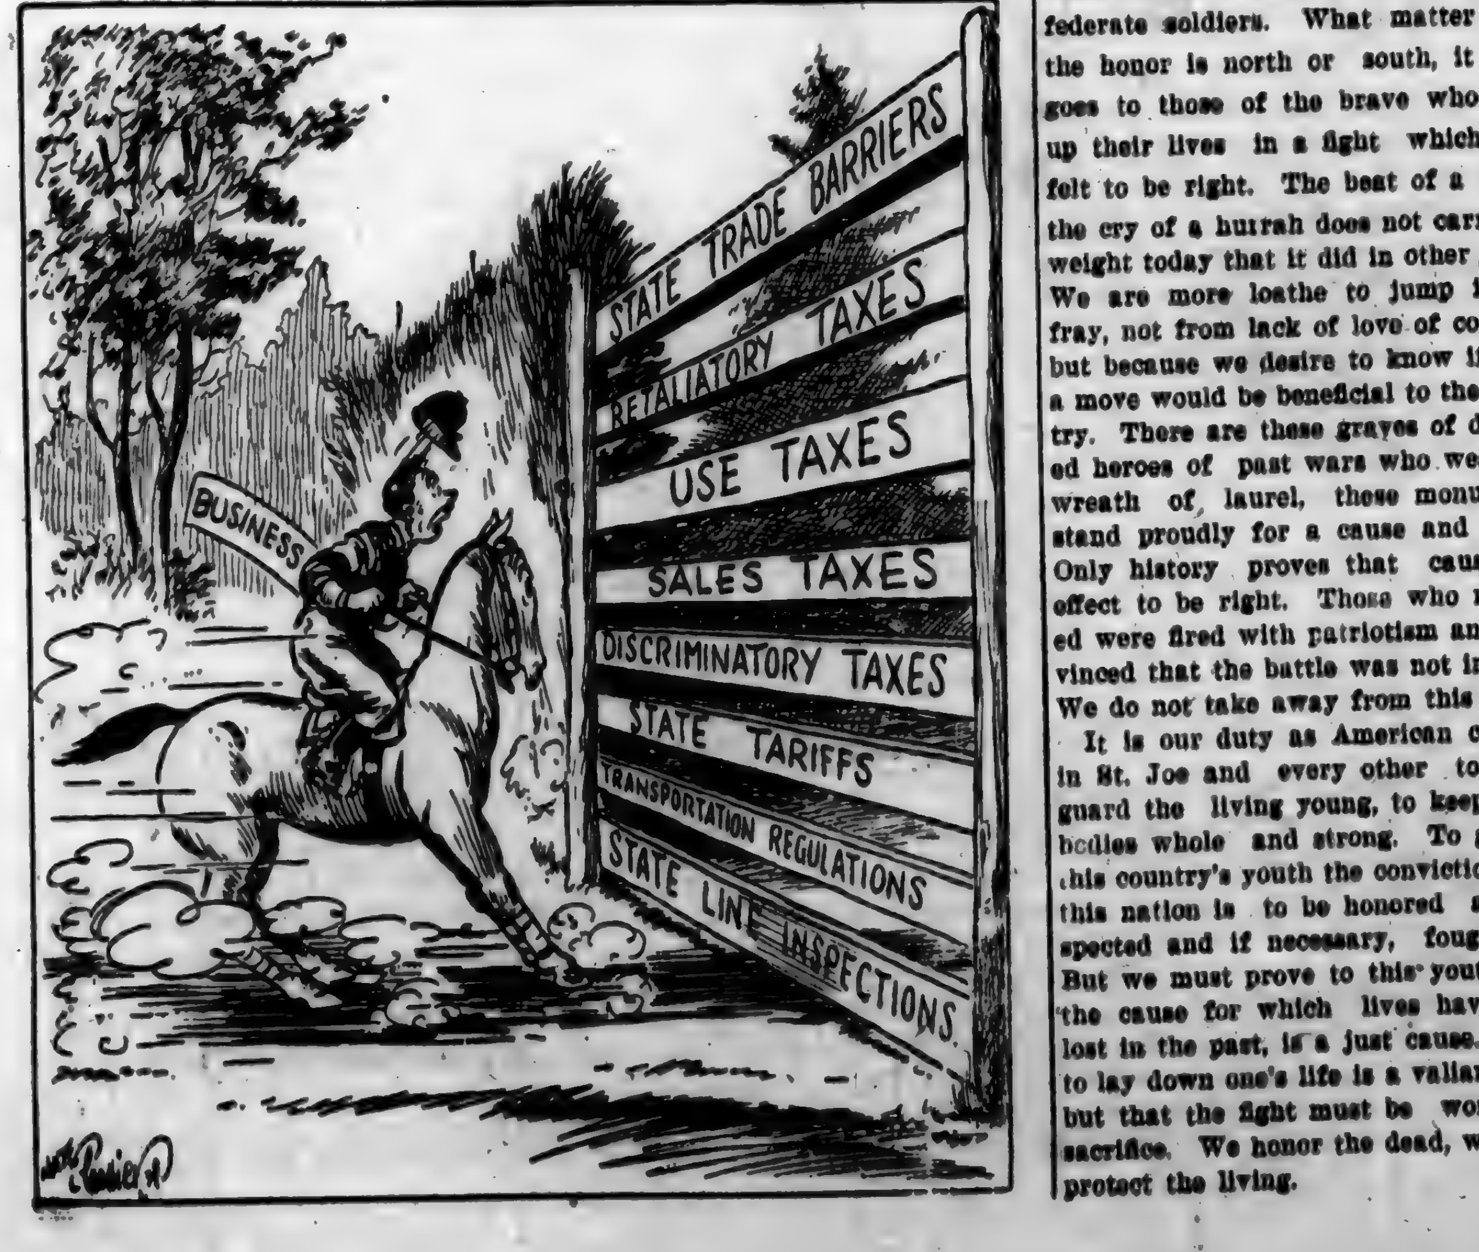
England and Germany are reported to be engaged in the business of burying the hatchet, a wholesome occupation, generally considered, but in this instance robbed of some of its charm. Mr. Hitler will be accorded concessions if he will let the boundaries of Europe alone, an arrangement that reminds one of buying off with candy a bad boy to whom the barrel stave should be applied.

WE PAY HOMAGE

Honor and fame, the battlefield and battlecry, the bursting bomb and camouflaged carrier, the flag and freedom, we salute them all. Memorial Day, celebrated in northern states for decorating the graves of the soldiers of the Union Armies, who fell in the Civil War, is appointed for May 30th. In the south, some of these states have a Memorial Day set aside the 26th of April for the tribute to the fallen Confederate soldiers. What matter it if the honor is north or south, it still goes to those of the brave who gave up their lives in a fight which they felt to be right. The beat of a drum, the cry of a hurrah does not carry the weight today that it did in other years. We are more loathe to jump into a fray, not from lack of love of country, but because we desire to know if such a move would be beneficial to the country. There are these graves of departed heroes of past wars who wear the wreath of laurel, these monuments stand proudly for a cause and effect. Only history proves that cause and effect to be right. Those who marched were fired with patriotism and convinced that the battle was not in vain. We do not take away from this belief.

It is our duty as American citizens in St. Joe and every other town, to guard the living young, to keep these bodies whole and strong. To give to this country's youth the conviction that this nation is to be honored and respected and if necessary, fought for. But we must prove to this youth that the cause for which lives have been lost in the past, is a just cause. That to lay down one's life is a valiant deed but that the fight must be worth the sacrifice. We honor the dead, we must protect the living.

THE BARRIER



GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

ONLY ONE Congressman, a Republican, ventured the opinion that Senator Minton would not be a candidate for re-election. Apparently figuring that the New Albany Senator may receive a Federal appointment and withdraw from the race, he mentioned Gov. M. Clifford Townsend as the probable Democratic Senate nominee. Townsend's term expires next year.

ONLY OTHER Hoosier Congressmen who have been mentioned at all prominently as possible Senate candidates are Rep. Raymond Springer, of Connersville, twice GOP candidate for Governor, and Rep. Forest Harness, of Kokomo, a newcomer in Congress.

Both Springer and Harness, however, refuse to take such seriously and already are planning their campaigns for re-election to the House. Neither cares to buck the fast-growing tide of Willis-for-Senator sentiment.

RUMORS persist here that State Senator William F. Jenner of Shoals, who has anounced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor, may eventualy withdraw and become a serious contender for the Senatoria lnomination. Jenner has been Senate Republican floor leader the past two legislative sessions.

SIDELIGHTS: Rep. George W. Gillie, of Fort Wayne, lived up to his economy promises the other day by voting against a bill which would increase the allowance for Congressional clerk hire from $5,000 to $6,500 per member. Only 95 members voted against it and the bill passed the House by a 3-to-1 majority and is now before the Senate . . . Pleas Greenlee, former patronage secretary to Paul V. McNutt, who has been legislated out of his job as Bituminous Coal Commissioner, may be the next Internal Revenue Collector for Indiana. . . Former Congressman James I. Farley, of Auburn, a frequent visitor in Washington, stopped off here last week for a few days . . . Rep. Eugene Crowe, of Bedford is managing the McNutt presidential campaign in the House. He recently sent out 260 McNutt-for-President letters to Democratic Congressmen. Senator Minton is McNutt's Man Friday in the Senate.

DIPLOMACY: Officials of the Civil Service Commission should take a lesson in diplomacy from the State Department. Twenty-one unsuccessful applicants for the Fort Wayne Postmastership are "madder than hornets" because the Commission sent them letters informing them that they did not meet the qualifications for the post and therefore were graded "zero." It served to convince Fort Wayne Democrats that Postmaster appointments are just one headache after another.

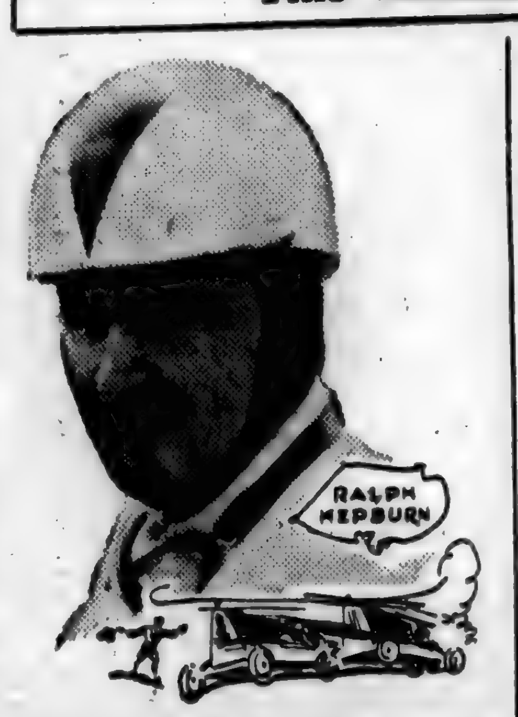
Disappointments Fail to Daunt This Indianapolis "500" Veteran



INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Eleven disappointments, including one which would have broken a heart less stout, are forgotten these days as Ralph Hepburn, 42-year-old ace of the speedway readies himself for another try in the Indianapolis 500.

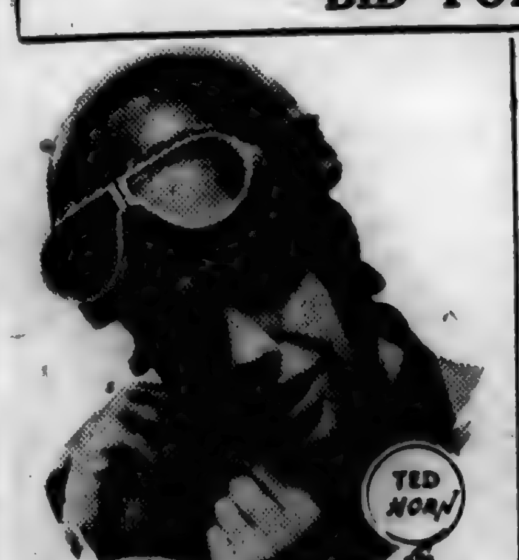
This colorful driver will twist the wheel of the entry of Anthony Gulotta, cousin of driver Tony Gulotta, in the 1939 contest. Even if the fates are kind and Hepp catches the black-and-white checkered flag this year he will have given the great crowd no more of a thrill than he did in 1937 when he finished second. For the finish of that race was unquestionably the greatest in the history of an event crammed with thrills. And when the checkered flag came down the crowd applauded Wilbur Shaw's triumph by a margin of 2.16 seconds and Hepp's brilliant but losing battle.

That was the fourth time in eleven starts that Hepp had finished in the money. His next nearest approach to triumph came in 1931 when he finished third.

Hepburn has been a contestant at Indianapolis since 1925. He led the race for the first 100 miles that year. Then his gas tank burst and he was through.

Although one of the deans of the present-day drivers, Hepburn is still rated among the best.

TED HORN IN WIDE OPEN BID FOR SPEEDWAY WIN



TED HORN
WATCH MY SMOKE THIS YEAR

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Ted Horn is going to put his foot down this year and it may bring him the checkered flag.

There are those who say that the debonaire youngster who has finished second, third and fourth in four starts in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway has been running under wraps in the Harry Hartz stable. The veteran Hartz, who himself had three second places and two fourth positions to his credit when he retired, is a cautious master who seemed always content with second money rather than take a long chance at the top position. Experts believe that he made Horn drive the same way in his Hartz-owned car.

But this year the sandy-haired Adonis of the roaring road is switching camps and will take the late Bill Cummings' place, a tough spot indeed, on the Mike Boyle team and will be allowed to drive as he pleases.

If so, Ted may be blowing his own horn in the afternoon of May 30.

MORTUARY

MARKLE

Benjamin Franklin Markle, son of Jeremiah E. and Catherine Ann Markle, was born in Allen County, Indiana, on March 18, 1867, and departed this life at his home in Spencerville, Indiana, on Monday evening, May 22, 1939, at the age of 72 years, 2 months and 4 days, having spent his entire life in and around Spencerville, Indiana.

In 1897 he joined the Springfield Center Lutheran Church and later transferred his membership to the Spencerville Lutheran Church, of which he was a member at the time of his death.

On June 1, 1899 he was united in marriage to Rally E. Oberholtzer. To this union were born four sons and four daughters, two sons and two daughters dying in infancy.

On August 15, 1937 he was retired from the Wabash Railroad after 31 years of service as a section foreman and crossing watchman.

He was a kind and loving husband, father, and grandfather, and a good neighbor.

He is survived by the widow, Rally E. Markle, four children, Gaylon and Max, at home, and Henry Markle and Mrs. Dorothy Smith, both of Spencerville, two grandchildren, Henry Markle, Jr., and Shirley Ann Smith, two brothers, William Markle, of Spencerville and J. D. Markle, of Fort Wayne, and a host of neighbors and friends.

The funeral services will be held from the Lutheran Church at 2 o'clock Standard Time, today (Thursday.), conducted by Rev. Frank Stevenson, local pastor. The burial will be made in White City Cemetery.

VANDALISM FOUND IN OTHER TOWNS

Destruction of electric lights, drain pipes and other equipment at the Garrett municipal swimming pool will cost the city approximately $300, it was discovered Saturday when an inspection of the premises was made preparatory to re-opening the pool for the Summer.

Throughout the Winter months persons, presumed to be children, have deliberately broken lights, torn off portions of the drain pipes on the pool building and committed other acts of petty vandalism.

This same spirit of destruction has invaded St. Joe in several instances recently. Dr. Price found his prize tulips destroyed recently every blossom plucked and let lay on the ground at their first blooming. Mrs. F. R. Bowman reports a block of prize Iris being dug up and taken from her yard. The Methodist Church windows have some thirty pieces of colored glass broken out by stones.

Nears 50-Year Mark But Still Seeks "500" Win

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — When prize-fighting got too tough Ira Hall, of the Terre Haute "sheriff aspirants" took up automobile racing and broke everything but his funny bone.

Aften ten years of competition in the big circuit, Hall, 47 years old but still packing a heavy foot, will be back in the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30.

Hall used to trade punches with Packy McFarland in the old days but found the going too tough and went in for dirt-track driving at the Indiana fairs. He came to the "big top" at Indianapolis in 1928 and has been a consistent contender ever since although a seventh place in 1932 was his best finish. It was the only time he finished in the money —among the first ten.

However, he is the proud possessor of one of the coveted "sportsmanship awards" obtained in 1928 when his car crashed into the upper wall in the first turn and Hall pinned it to the upper concrete with his back for some 30 minutes to prevent it from rolling down into the fast-moving traffic. He will drive for Carl Magnes and Ted Nowiak.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie attended the funeral of Mr. John Brown at Hicksville, Tuesday afternoon. Mr Brown was the father-in-law of Mary Curie-Brown.

Last week I wrote something about enforcement. This week I want to add a few more words on that subject.

Where state laws grant courts the right to revoke licenses because of drunken or reckless driving, courts should have gumption enough and backbone enough to enforce the state laws. Some courts, however, lack the courage because of political reasons or because they do not feel the law is just.

When people's rights, especially pertaining to safety, are sacrificed because of one man's political feelings or ambitions, then the people in that community are not going to have the protection to which they are entitled. Officers can bring in violators, but the courts must enforce the law. Some judges have shown marked courage in this respect and because of it have established themselves in the community as pillars of justice and courage; therefore, the community has benefited by their actions.

More power to jurists of that kind!

Jimmy led the race with an amazing pace of 120 miles per hour for 375 miles last year but was forced out with supercharger trouble.

In 1937 Snyder not only grabbed the pole position with a fast qualifying speed of 125.287 miles per hour but in the cool of one qualifying evening barrelled about the 2½-mile course at a record-smashing average of 130.492 miles per hour.

Why a Reserve?

The squirrel takes no chances. He knows there will come a day when the trees will be bare . . . and food scarce. So wisely he lays away an adequate reserve supply for the lean days ahead.

This same precaution is followed by capital stock* fire insurance companies in building up sufficient financial reserves for security to their policyholders in times of disaster. For, while it may be possible to predict approximately how many "ordinary" fires will occur each year and provide for them, no one knows when a conflagration or other major catastrophe will cause staggering losses.

At such times each policyholder is concerned with his individual claim. He looks to his insurance company to pay his loss, regardless of how many others must be taken care of. It is then that he appreciates the foresight of his insurance company in laying away sufficient funds, called surplus, for the protection of policyholders in just such emergencies.

Thus, through conflagrations, hurricanes, panics, business depressions and other trying times, capital stock company insurance has paid its losses, has consistently kept faith with the public.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY INSURANCE Standard protection

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, automobile and other possessions the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

*CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

Joe Thorne
Glory

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Indianapolis Speedway's 2½-mile racing strip has been a glory trail instead of a road to gold for many drivers in the 500-mile classic and such it is for lanky Joe Thorne. This 24-year-old millionaire from Tucson and New Rochelle is grooming three cars for the May 30th race and plans to pilot one of them himself. Last year he finished ninth, having been flagged after completing 185 of the scheduled 200 laps. Thorne's personal fortune began with the Union Pacific railways in which his grandfather was a power. It was augmented by his father, an astute New York banker. Joe needs Indianapolis Speedway prize money about as much as he needs another left foot but no driver will make a more determined bid for it than this six-foot-three hell driver.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

A NEW CONTROL FOR CUCUMBER BEETLES

Recent tests by Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station have definitely proved that a new insecticide mixture greatly improves the results previously obtained in the control of the striped cucumber beetles on cucumbers and melons.

This new mixture, according to George E. Gould of the Purdue Department of Entomology contains calcium arsenate, an insoluble copper compound and a diluent such as talc or flour and has increased yields in many instances of 200 per cent over untreated areas. Such mixtures not only control the beetles feeding on the plants, but also check cucumber bacterial wilt which is spread only by the feeding of beetles.

Last season many melon growers in southern Indiana suffered loses as high as 90 per cent of their expected crop, while cucumber growers suffer a loss annually of about 50%. These losses are principally caused by wilt which kills the plants early in the harvest season. The addition of these new materials, known as insoluble copper compounds, aids in the prevention of wilt. These compounds are being manufactured by a number of companies under such names as "Copper chloride," "coppy oxychloride," "basic copper sulphate," "cuprous oxide," and "Insoluble copper compounds" and contain varying amounts of copper indicated by the metallic copper content.

The formula that has given excellent results at Purdue consists of 20 pounds calcium arsenate 10 pounds of an insoluble copper compound containing 25% metallic copper or five pounds of a 50% copper and talc or cheap flour to make 100 pounds. Compounds having different percentages of metallic copper can be computed on the basis of having two and one-half per cent. metallic copper in the finished dust. Several companies are preparing a ready-mixed arsenical-insoluble copper cucumber beetle dust and one such mixture is now available most sections of the state.

Treatment should be applied to cucumbers, melons and watermelons as soon as they come through the ground and every five to seven days thereafter, depending upon the rainfall, until the beginning of harvest. This will necessitate six to eight applications which are best applied with some type of duster.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1939 NUMBER 22

D. B. VAN FLEIT, 77, IS DEAD AT GARRETT

The death of Downing B. Van Fleit, a prominent resident of Garrett and DeKalb County for a half century, took place Friday night at 11:35 o'clock at the home of a son, Don. E. Van Fleit, at 210 East King Street.

Mr. Van Fleit, was 77 years of age, had been failing steadily for the last six months. He was confined to his home last November for two weeks because of a kidney ailment and on February 28 he became very ill. He was never afterward able to perform his duties as vice president and general manager of the Garrett Telephone Co. However, he recovered sufficiently to make a trip in April to the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. Philip Fox, at Washington, Indiana, where he remained a month.

Returning home, Mr. Van Fleit continued to lose strength and he lapsed into a coma Saturday, May 20. His death was expected momentarily after that time. The cause is given as uremic poisoning.

The funeral was held at the Garrett Methodist Church Monday afternoon at 2:30, the pastor, Dr. Wm. T. Arnold, officiating. Interment was made in the mausoleum of Calvary Cemetery, Garrett, beside the body of Mrs. Van Fleit.

Mr. Van Fleit was born in Pottersville, Pennsylvania, January 31, 1862, a son of Edward and Margaret Beecher Van Fleit. His father was in the milling business at Honesdale and Pottersville, Pennsylvania, and Deposit and Oswego, New York. The family moved from Oswego to Big Rapids, Michigan, in 1871 and to Rome City, Indiana eight years later. In 1880 they located at Newville, DeKalb County, remaining six months. In 1881 they moved to Stafford Township, DeKalb County, and Mr. Van Fleit operated Webster's mill. Leaving the milling business, the family moved to St. Joe in 1886 and to Garrett in 1888.

D. B. Van Fleit and Mary Josephine Smith, of St. Joe, were married on Christmas Day, 1887. A daughter, Mrs. Edna Redman, wife of S. O. Redman, died in Garrett January 31, 1936, and Mrs. Van Fleit's death took place the following October 2.

Surviving Mr. Van Fleit are two children, Don E. Van Fleit and Mrs. Fox, and seven grandchildren. Mr. Van Fleit had resided with his son and family since the death of his wife. Frank Smith, of Garrett, a brother-in-law also survives.

Soon after the family moved to Garrett, D. B. Van Fleit became associated with W. L. Webster in the dry goods business. He also served as superintendent of the municipal water and electric plant in those early days.

Mr. Van Fleit organized the Garrett Telephone Co., and became its first manager and continued until his death, a period of 43 years.

Mr. Van Fleit was prominent in civic affairs throughout his career. In the early days of Garrett he served on the city council and a year ago he was reappointed by the council to membership on the school board for his seventh three-year term, setting a new record in Garrett. He was secretary of the board.

ACCIDENT CAUSES DEATH OF CHILD AGE FOUR

Funeral services for Larry Mills, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. DeLoy Mills, 2311 Pittsburgh Street, who died of injuries suffered when he was dragged by a harrow pulled by a runaway team, were held Sunday at 1 P. M. at the residence and at 2 P. M. at the Christian Apostolic Church in Leo. Burial in Leo Cemetery.

The child died of gastro-intestinal hemorrhages Thursday night at 10:10 o'clock at the Lutheran Hospital, where he was taken Tuesday after being injured about 9 A. M. on the farm of his step-grandfather, Ora Wilmot, on the Arcola-Columbia City Road in Whitley County near the Allen-Whitley County Line.

The boy had been riding on the harrow with his step-grandfather. Mr. Wilmot stopped the team in the open field to walk about fifty feet away to see whether his corn was coming up. He thought the lad was following him, but learned Larry had remained on the harrow when his attention was attracted by the horses bolting across an alfalfa field. The child clung to the harrow, was tossed under the teeth of the implement and dragged 500 feet.

The child suffered friction burns on his thighs, abdomen, face, arms and back of his head in addition to internal injuries. He was taken to the hospital Tuesday afternoon when it was realized his condition was more serious than at first believed. Coroner Walter E. Kruse determined cause of death.

Surviving, besides the parents and a step-grandfather, are a brother, Thomas Wade Mills, the grandparents, Mrs. Ora Wilmot, of Whitley County, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Steffen, of Bluffton; and George Mills, of Knox, and the great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mills, and Mrs. Julia E. Miller, all of Fort Wayne.

The funeral was largely attended by friends from St. Joe and Spencerville, the father having lived in St. Joe.

REPORTS INDICATE A RECORD FISH HATCH

Preliminary reports from the state hatcheries and from conservation club ponds indicate a record production of bass and other game fish this year, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Attendants at the Riverside hatchery last week counted 14,583 small mouth black bass on one nest, selected as representative of those in the rearing pond.

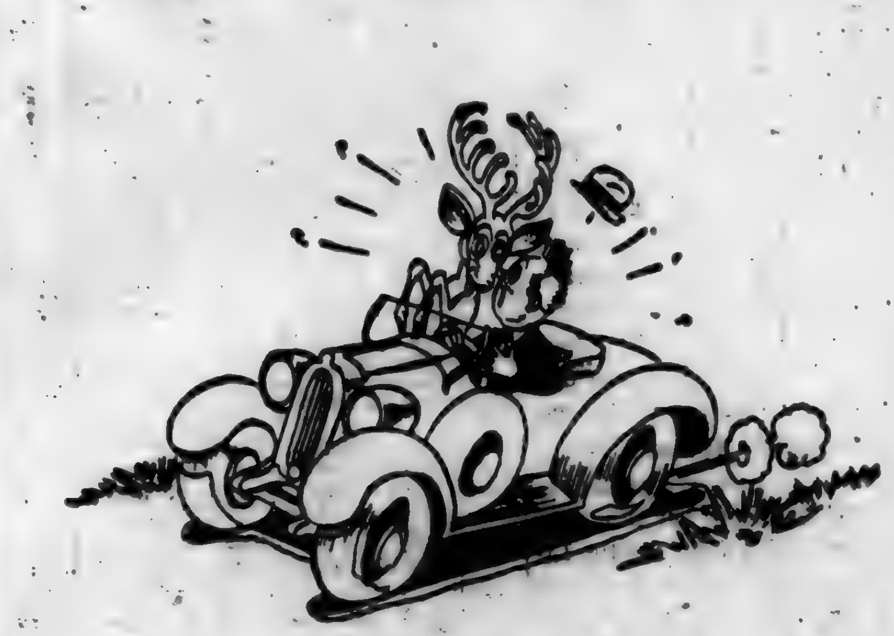
TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT!



By IROQUOIS DAHL

"THIS morning, while one of our citizens was coming to work from out on the mountain (Woolrich, Pa.)," writes our good friend, J. Woods Rich, "a nice big buck deer actually jumped into the front seat of his car, breaking off the front door. The deer was knocked unconscious and therefore rode along a short distance with the driver, in the front seat. Of course, he made a great scramble upon regaining consciousness, after the car had been stopped, and hurried back into the brush."

Deer, deer, no hitch-hikers, please!

1939 Memorial Day Observance

POST 283 AND THE COMMUNITY UNITES IN OBSERVING MEMORIAL DAY

At 8:30 A. M. a delegation from Post 283, with the Firing Squad, and Color Guard, went to Spencerville Cemetery, decorated the 63 veterans graves with sprays of evergreen and gave a short ceremony, immediately afterward they started for Newville arriving there at 9:30, where 100 graves were decorated.

During the ceremonies, a large wreath of evergreen was placed on the grave of Walter Whitehurst, for whom the Post was named, by his sister, Lucille. New markers, issued by the government, have been placed at the graves of Watler Whitehurst and John Miller, a Civil War veteran, during the past week.

After the ceremony at Newville the delegation went to Alton Cemetery, where an impressive service was held in the grove by the school house, the Rev. J. N. Scholes, the principal speaker, gave a very inspiring talk on the relationship of war and the march of civilization, closing with the thought that wars are inevitable until the principles of Peace, as given by the Great Teacher are practiced by all Nations, and the people of the world live by His teaching as well as professing Christianity.

In decorating the 12 veterans graves at Alton, a child with a spray of flowers was stationed at each grave and all graves were decorated at a given signal after which the Post Chaplain offered prayer and the Firing Squad fired three volleys in salute to the dead.

The services at St. Joe began with a colorful parade from the Lutheran Church lawn to the gymnasium where the program was given before a full house.

Selection by the band directed by C. A. Woodcox.
Commander Lehr Wilder posting of Colors
Song, "America," by the assembly, led by C. A. Woodcox and Band
The Scouts' Oath . . by the Boy Scouts
Memorial Day ...... Post Commander
Prayer .... Post Chaplain
Song .... Legion Chorus

Howard Benninghoff, a native Newville boy, now living in Fort Wayne, gave the address and began by recalling his boyhood days in this section of DeKalb County.

The speaker emphasized that most wars are a result of ambitions to acquire more land, and that now we are forced to protect our liberties and civilization. We are not interested in wars of aggression. This community did her full share in furnishing men for every emergency of our nation including the Revolution, War of 1812, Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish American and World War, and we shall not fight wars of other nations again.

We are led to believe that the World War was to make our country safe for democrary, and we, as a community, made the supreme sacrifice of the flower of our young manhood, to uphold that ideal, and today we hear threats of war as in 1917, and involving practically the same principles.

We believe in settling all differences without bloodshed as has been demonstrated for 150 years by the United States and Canada.

Cornet Solo .....Mary Louise Woodcox
Roster of the Dead .....Merwin Place
Flag Drill .... Girl Scouts
Thirty seconds Silence
Star Spangled Banner

The parade then reformed and marched to the cemetery where the 81 graves were decorated by the Boy and Girl Scouts. White crosses had been erected at the cemetery to honor those veterans buried in the Jenkins, Morr and Bear Creek cemeteries which were decorated earlier in the day by a delegation from the Post. Sprays of evergreen were also placed at these crosses and a large wreath was placed at the monument after which the salute to the dead was given by the Firing Squad.

The Post wishes to thank the Band, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and all others whose co-operation made the program a success.

Memorial Day has been observed at Riverside Cemetery, St. Joe, for 50 years according to information received from Roy Wade, who has charge of the cemetery.

The grounds were clean, and well kept, and with the flowers on the graves, it preseented a beautiful appearance to those who make their annual pilgrimage to St. Joe for Memorial Day services. We find it impossible to give names of all the guests as they were here on Monday and Tuesday.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

Both morning and afternoon services at the St. Joe Church of Christ were well attended, Sunday in celebration of the church's dedication on May 28, 1889.

Congeniality and undivided interest were manifest at both sessions, especially in the spiritual uplift of the impressive morning service. The visible results of Elder J. O. Rose's two splendid discourses for the day were keenly felt and appreciated.

At the noon hour the basement swarmed with happy, hungry folk to partake of the generous supply of food contributed by the church women.

A piano solo, by Mrs. Lena Meek, opened the afternoon program, which was short of two numbers, the participants being unable to be present. Congergational singing was led by Mark Williams. After the opening prayer by Milton Fronsoe, minister of the churches at Butler and Newville, a short history, covering the three years from the organization of the church in May, 1886, to the dedication in 1889, which had been recorded by the late Dr. B. S. Sheffer, a charter member was given, including the names of persons who united in membership during the three years.

Special music was rendered thruout both sessions by the Ames Sisters, Frances, Lula and Esther, of Bryan, O. Arlene, one of the original members was unable to be present. Esther was supplied to complete the trio. Their sweet Gospel singing contributed much to the services.

After the sermon by J. O. Rose, short talks were given by several, including Mrs. Opal Wilmot, Reuben Koch, Edward Storer, Meade Baker, Marshall Andress, Mrs. Lena Meek and Milton Fronsoe. Also Harry Hendershot, of Newville, Mrs. Nora McDonald, of Corunna, Chas. Lawson, J. O. Rose, and Mrs. Rose, of Angola.

RULES AGAINST GROSS INCOME TAX COLLECTION

A decision of much interest to business men and possibly of far-reaching importance was handed down in the DeKalb Circuit Court Friday in the case of Jay W. Porter against the county sheriff and the state gross income tax department.

The plaintiff filed a suit in 1937 asking for an injunction to prevent the enforcement of an assessment against him for gross income tax in the sum of $56.40 for the year 1935. The plaintiff operates a country store in Franklin Township, on State Road One, DeKalb County, and he said the transaction involved the sale of produce to persons outside of Indiana, the proceeds therefore being exempt from the Indiana gross income tax.

The United States supreme court recently held in a case reversing the Indiana supreme court that the state does not possess the legal right to tax goods sold in interstate commerce. Joseph P. McNamara, who represented the attorney general of Indiana in the hearing held Friday, contended that the decision applied only when the goods are shipped out of the state, while in the Porter case the produce was delivered to the buyer within Indiana, the buyer collecting the goods at the Porter store. Judge Endicott held there was no material difference in the transactions and entered an order for a perpetual injunction against the gross tax department and the sheriff.

WATCHING FOR ILLEGAL HUNTING AND FISHING

Close check is being kept by the game warden on anglers and hunters during the closed season on game fish and animals, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Indiana laws make it illegal to take bass, bluegills, crappies, and other fish of the protected species during the closed season which extends from May 30 to June 16. These species of fish can be taken legally only on and after June 16. Squirrels are protected in Indiana during May, June and July and the taking or possession of a squirrel during that period is a violation of the state laws.

Under a 1937 law, fishing and hunting equipment used in violation of the state hunting and fishing laws, is subject to confiscation in addition to the imposition of fines.

Ambition is the will to attain something. The desired object may be knowledge or honor or power, but whatever it is, the ambition to reach it must be backed up by the willingness to work for it. Mere wishes accomplish little without the aid of earnest application and industry.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

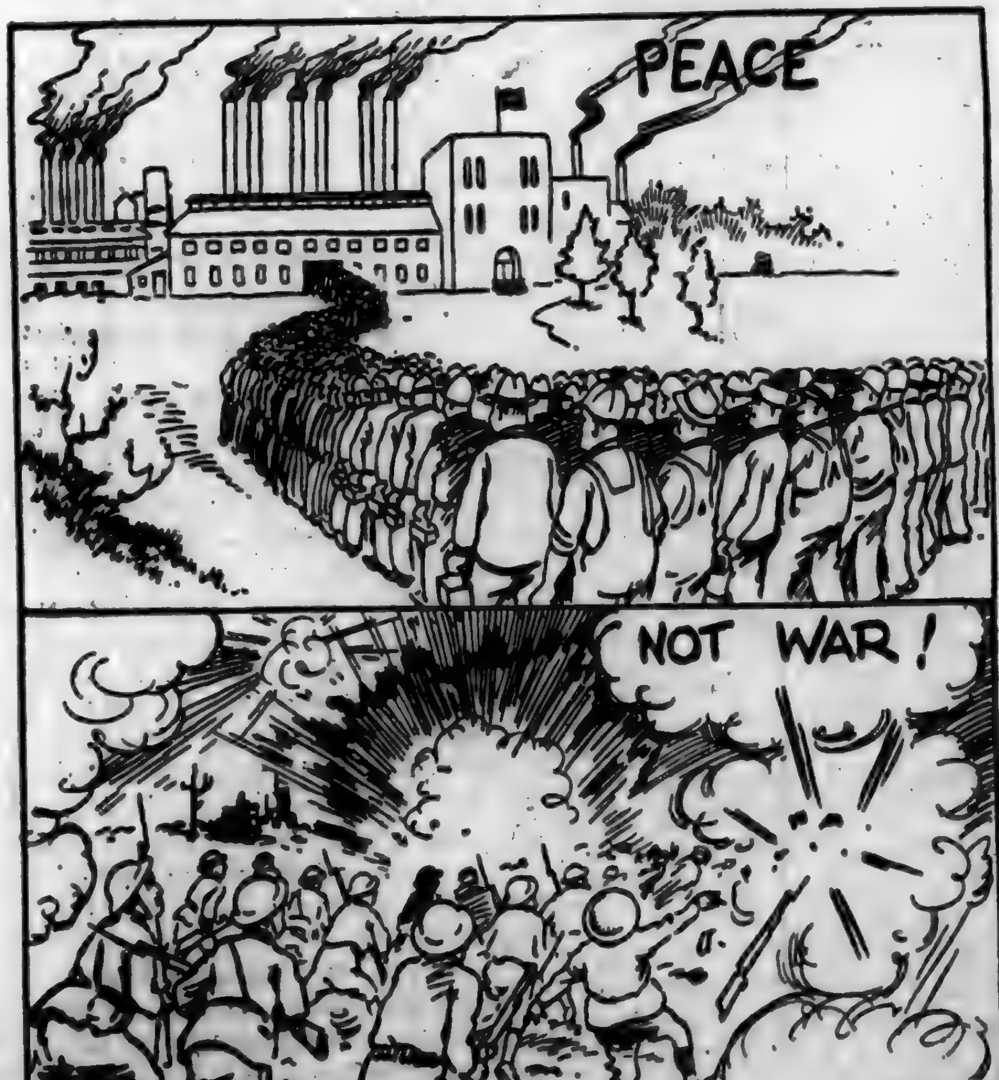
Persons who still find interest in the poetry of the Victorian period will recall that Lord Byron had something to say to the effect that although man was the conqueror of the earth, his domain ended at the shore. Before the curtain rose upon recorded history, the oozy floor of the ocean was receiving wrecks, and they will continue to be deposited there until the day on which land and water shall be no more and the sea gives up its dead. That the submarine Squalus might settle to the bottom off the New Hampshire coast, or elsewhere, was what the Present might expect, if it took cognizance of the lessons of the Past. Approximately threescore craft of that type have come to grief in a generation, and if time were available for searching the records and the use of the adding machine, the loss of life might foot up to a thousand. Undersea navigation, taken at its best, is a bad business, but it seems to be a necessary evil. There is consolation in the thought that those intent upon rescue were not helpless in the face of disaster. With the expansion of submarine travel will come improvement in the means for minimizing its hazards, the hopeless words of Byron to the contrary notwithstanding. Twenty-six who put out in the Squalus still remain with her. Thirty-three were saved. The twenty-six will not have to go through it again. As to the thirty-three, their feet once more are on the solid earth, which has outlasted many tomorrows, and the joy of living still is theirs.

When the Bergdolls named the latest arrival "Grover Cleveland," they set for him a standard of conduct which, in the opinion of many, he has not maintained. Preferring voluntary exile to the World War draft, he governed himself accordingly. Mr. Bergdoll may have come to the conclusion that there is more liberty within a hoosegow in the United States than in much better quarters on German soil; and that, be it ever so uncomfortable, there is no place like home. He may have learned by experience, the broader truth that in the long run the best plan is to stand the gaff.

Those members of the Congress of the United States who favor economy in the conduct of federal affairs are having hard going. It appears as though the red side of the ledger were due to lengthen for some time to come. The House has advanced the Agricultural Appropriation Bill, carrying an outlay of more than a billion dollars. There looms before the legislators the menace of increased taxes, something that everybody can understand, and a circumstance that is hard to explain away on the stump, or in the interviews with constituents that go with the occupation known as mending the fences. A flourish of the pen has made it the law that the Navy is to have almost a billion, possibly the largest peace-time allowance ever set off for that branch of the national defense. During the Civil War, there was considerable anxiety because the expenses amounted to a million dollars a day. The old timers did not know a thing about spending money.

After the crown of England was placed on the head of Edward VIII in Westminster Abbey, his brother no doubt settled down to an uneventful life, as lives of younger princes go. Who could have told, at the coronation, that the second fiddle was to change hands so soon? Edward now is just the Duke of Windsor, with some strings attached to the title at that. George, on the other hand, at home at least, is "by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, and Emperor of India." Such "words of learned length and thundering sound" lose some of their force here, but the visitors seem to be well-mannered and kindly persons of high standing. They will be received hospitably in the United States, and it is hoped that they will carry away nothing but pleasant memories.

NO STOMACH FOR WAR



News Item: "I want to make it plain that American industry has no stomach for war."—Howard Coonley, President of the National Association of Manufacturers.

WAR DEBTS

There are persistent efforts that Great Britain will soon make a token-payment on its war debt. We have been hearing about it for the past year—and no one need believe it until Great Britain makes the offer.

IS THIS MORE "SMEARING?"

The Dies Committee has been in the limelight again, with a lot of explosive testimony, that has not been convincing, that some of the accused persons have violated rules of good citizenship. Prominent attention has been given to one or two witnesses whose testimony indicated that they were harmless, or cranks.

The finger of suspicion has pointed towards other persons of promingnce. Men like General Moseley and John Hamilton do not need certificates of character from a committee that is supposed to be investigating un-American activities.

THE ROYAL GUESTS

Royalty will be entertained in Washington in truly royal ways. The Democratic United States hasn't made much fuss over the Royal House of Britain since the time the English troops came here and burned the White House. But President James Madison didn't have much of a military force to show the British a century and a quarter ago. President Roosevelt is going to let the King and Queen look over our military and naval forces, including tanks and airplanes, as a part of the royal welcome. They will be surprised when they find out how forgiving and nice we Americans are.

ROADSIDE VANDALISM

It's hard to understand just what it is in the makeup of some people that enables them to derive pleasure out of destroying other people's property. Just try to imagine how forlorn the countryside would be around St. Joe without flowers and trees and shrubbery along the roadways. Then you will be in position to wonder more than ever how anyone can find joy in such ruthless and unnecessary vandalism as you frequently see enacted. Breaking the limbs off of flowering trees and carting them off by the auto load seems to be sort of mania with some people; an outdoor sport they appear to derive pleasure from. They seem not to realize that they are not only taking that which does not belong to them, but they are robbing others of the joys that natural beauties afford. Nature has been generous with this community. For that reason she deserves a better fate than is meted out to her by the roadside vandal.

IS IT FREEDOM?

The man, acquitted for the mercy-killing of his 16 year old imbecile son, is planning upon adopting a child to take the place of this other boy whom he loved so much. The jury freed him of the charge and the father who faced trial for his life is ready to face the world, a "free man." We do not know, here in St. Joe whether society is appeased with this decision. There has always been talk on the right and wrong of "mercy killing." There are many cases when it has seemed justifiable and humane, but we pray we may never be faced with such a decision. There are some who say there should be a law where physicians could control and give the relief. There are others who feel that those mentally unfit who are a danger to society, should be put out of the way. It is a momentous question and one perhaps never to be considered officially. But this released father who has been forgiven by law, for his act, and who is planning upon beginning a new life, is he a free man? The heart will be heavy though the mind is convinced of justice and of doing right. A sorrowful memory will never free him, perhaps.

SOCIAL WELFARE BUDGETS FOR 1940 TO BE MADE SOON

Two things to which Harry Miesse, secretary of the Indiana Taxpayers Association, says Hoosier property taxpayers should direct their attention during the next two months are the budgets for social welfare activities and the contracts for transporting rural children to and from school.

"In each county," Mr. Miesse explains, "budgets for the various activities of the social welfare program will be prepared by the county boards of public welfare. These budgets will be completed during June and must be submitted to the state welfare department, for final approval, by July 5. Our organization is not fighting necessary relief expenditures but we are taking the position that the people who provide the money for these activities have a right to scrutinize the budgets and question any proposal they deem uwnise. When the special session of the general assembly was held last Summer, $2,000,000 was taken from the state general fund and allocated to welfare work for use this year. This money will not be available next year and unless corresponding savings are made there will be a material increase in porperty taxes.

"In all townships where children are hauled to and from the public schools, township advisory boards will meet at 8 P. M., on the night of July 18, and let contracts for transportation for the next four years. This form of service, in which Indiana is said to lead all the other states, has been costing about $4,500,000 annually. Our study of this expense during the school year of 1934-35 and the 1937-38 year show astonishing and unexplained increases in many townships. In one township the cost of transporting children jumped from $6,773 to $12,255 although the number of children transported showed an increase of but 41. Another township shows an increase of $2,819 while the increase in the number of children is 49. A county's school bus expense was $49,016 for the first period and $94,153 for the second, a gain of $45,137 in three years although the increase in the number was only 155. These are but a few illustrations of what has been happening throughout the state. The taxpayers must watch these bus contracts and protest if the bids for the next four years threaten a continuation of increased costs.

"With a general election next year, which will cost about $1,000,000, and with $2,000,000 from the general fund for welfare work no longer available as it was after the special session, the people face astonishing tax increases next year. Their remedy is to cut the cost of government and hold expenditures to absolute necessities. Every taxpayer in Indiana is interested in this alarming situation and should protect his own interests by watching budgets and demanding economy."

If your'e going traveling you'd better know: A lady in San Francisco entered a tourist agency and demanded a ticket to Honolulu on the next ship, "and I must have a cabin to myself!" There was no single cabin available and it was only after great difficulty that the clerk was able to get a berth in a double cabin. The lady was indignant! "No, sir, young man," she said: "if you can't get me a cabin by myself I will cancel my steamship ticket entirely. I'll go by train!"

Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock, an automobile collision occurred at the Hadsell river bridge, at the south end, when Barney Hindman, of Ft. Wayne, was going south, and Elwood Hart was coming to town. Neither saw the other. Fenders were badly damaged, lights broken, and the Hart car had the axle bent. The two men looked rather queer at each other, as if to say, "and where did you come from all so sudden?" They agreed that neither one was to blame, so they would each repair their own damaged car. Mr. Hindman was going to Alton Cemetery to decorate his parents graves.

BOY SCOUT CAMPOREE HELD IN DILLS GROVE

The second DeKalb County Boy Scout Camporee which ended Sunday was a complete success so far as the Boys are concerned. The Scoutmaster and men who headed the affair may have been ready to go home but the Scouts were having a grand time up to the very last. Two patrols from Troop No. 184 of Orland, were there with their Scoutmaster, Howard Brown. Leslie Wilbern registered three patrols from St Joe, Troop No. 164, and had two of his senior scouts camped nearyby to render whatever assistance they could to the officials. Ned McIntosh could not stay for the Camporee but he brought over one patrol from Number 168 of Waterloo. Two of Auburn's troops were represented full force. Troop 165 had three patrols while 167 had two. Don Winegardner and Ed Quinn, Scoutmasters of these troops, were present both days altho Ed was not equal to the rigors of the camp bed and went home for the night. Archie Kirkpatrick, Jr. Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 160 assisted the inspectors and cooked their meals as well as conducting some of the field events.

The Camporee this year was held in a wooded are on the St. Joe River south of St. Joe. It proved to be an ideal spot although there was no available water supply. The City of Auburn very kindly remedied this by sending Speed Brandon over with 1200 gallons in the City tank truck. Registration, Camp building and preparation of the noon meal took up all of the forenoon Saturday. Following the rest period after dinner, scout contests such as knot tieing, tree identification, fire building, etc., were scheduled. But the rain came down and the wind came up and a wild scramble for shelter ensued. Some got wet and some got soaked but as soon as the sun came out, out came the boys for more but another downpour canceled the games for that day. The sun came out in time for the beautiful retreat ceremony at 5:00 o'clock.

In the evening, Judge Dan Link, chairman of the Court of Honor Committee, assisted by Wm. Willenar, president of the local council, conducted a court of honor. Here by a blazing council fire on the banks of the historic St. Joe River, seven boys from St. Joe, Auburn and Orland were invested as Tenderfoot Scouts by twelve scouts of Troop 165, who used small pyramid fires to represent the twelve scout laws. Fifteen scouts were presented with badges of advanced rank, ten merit badges were awarded to eight scouts, a Junior Assistant Scoutmaster's commission was presented to Howard Carbaugh of Troop 165 and commissions as Senior Patrol leaders were presented to Mark Casebeer of Troop 165 and to Donald Brown of Troop 184. Following court adjournment the scouts sang songs of their own selection. It is remarkable what talents lie concealed in some peoples Judge Link and Mr. Willenar are certainly able to get volume out of a bunch of boys when it comes to singing.

Sunday dawned clear if somewhat cool and windy. The bugler sounded first call about 4:45 and a little later reveille. Charley Smith was waiting and immediately organized a bird hike. For nearly an hour he led the sixty-seven scouts along the banks of the river and introduced them to the song birds native to this locality. This part of the day was a treat to the boys, some of whom had never been in the woods when the songsters were starting the day. At eleven o'clock Rev. Claud Garrison conductd a short devotional period. By a story of three ancient princes, he depicted the weakness of the rule by power and by wealth but the strength and greatness of rule by love and righteousness.

Dinner, Sunday, was a treat, especially for those scouts whose parents brought out picnic dinners. After two days of their own cooking, mothers meals really tasted good.

The Camporee closed about three o'clock with final inspection, presenting of awards and retreat ceremony. Blue streamers were awarded the Bob White patrol of Troop 164, Rough Riders of Troop 165, Panthers of 165, Wolf of 167, Panther of 164, and Flying Eagle of 164. Red streamers were presented to the Crow Patrol of 167, the Panther of 168, and the Flaming Arrow of 165. Green streamers were awarded the Tiger patrol and the Flying Eagle, both of Troop 184.

Those who advanced in rank at the Court of Honor were: Judson Keeler, James Kees, Ned Keller and Harold Yeiser of Troop 164; Robert Carbaugh, Tom Muhn, Robert South, Jr., Robert Widdicombe of Troop 165, and Robert Emerick of Troop 184, who became second class scouts. The following received their first class badges: Jack Goodwin of 164; Howard Carbaugh, Mark Casebeer, Wesley Clark, Ben Garrison of 165, and Donald Brown of Troop 184.

Merit badges were given to Charles Hart, Farm Home and It's Planning; James Kees, Animal Husbandry; James Maxwell, Electricity; Franklyn Sechler, Scholarship; Howard Carbaugh, Gardening; Wesley Clark, Carpentry and Music; Robert Widdicombe, Carpentry and Handicraft.

THEY ARE STILL WITH US

There was a hope for most men, that with the change of seasons there might be a change in the hair-do and a greater change in the feminine hats. One male designer of millinery, states that he fears husbands who usually greet him with insulting and pitying glances. No wonder! Perhaps we expected too much, but we hoped that there would come a great awakening for women who wear their hair as absurd as fashion dictates and buy hats that perch on the top of heads like postage stamps. But should we complain, when they have given to industry a revival in the hairpin trade, the old-fashioned hat-pin has come into its own, elastic is necessary and veils are flowing and free. It helps industry. The fuller skirts are a joy to the manufacturers and if women swing to the fluffy parosols of old, this country may come in for a real boom. These present styles may be becoming to some, they may be also a welcome to the jaded tastes of a sophisticated society, but one thing sure, they won't bring us the open trolley cars, hansom cabs and bicycles "built for two."

State Parks Ready for Many Visitors

Indiana's State Parks are ready for their biggest season with added facilities for the use of thousands of Hoosiers and tourists from other states who will visit them during the coming months, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

This is the twenty-third year that Indiana has provided for enjoyment of nature and outdoor recreation through the operation of State Parks. It was nearly twenty-four years ago, late in 1916, that areas constituting the original McCormick's Creek and Turkey Run State Parks were acquired for public use. Since that time additional areas have been established and today Indiana has eleven State Parks, five Memorials, and a bathing beach on Bass Lake.

In 1919 when first attendance records were kept, the two parks then in existence reported an attendance of less than thirty-four thousand visitors. In 1938 the parks and memorials where attendance records are kept, showed an attendance of approximately one and a quarter million persons. Attendance at the parks practically doubled in the past six years, due to efforts to acquaint Indiana residents with the facilities which the parks provide for vacation and weekend outings, and to provision of more adequate facilities for the use of the parks by the visitor.

The State Parks have become one of Indiana's major factors in bringing tourists into the state. Surveys have shown that approximately forty per cent of the attendance during the vacation months is made up of visitors from other states. A recent study in cooperation with the National Park Service, revealed that motorists visiting the State Parks traveled approximately thirty-seven million miles in one year and that practically every state was represented.

The parks today have picnic facilities adequate for twenty thousand persons, camping areas for hundreds of tents and scores of trailers, more than a hunderd miles of bridle paths and over a hundred miles of foot trails. Two have swimming pools and five have bathing beaches. Seven have hotel facilities and two others have cottages. All have scenic beauty and historic backgrounds as well as being havens for all species of birds and plant life, giving them a varied, continuing attraction.

GROSS INCOME PAYMENTS SHOW INCREASE

With more than a month to go, gross income tax collections during the second quarter of 1939 (April, May, and June) have already outdistanced the collections during the entire second quarter of 1938 by more than $42,000, Clarence A. Jackson, director of the state Gross Income Tax Division, announced today.

"The final figure for the second quarter of 1938 was $3,795,316.90. This year during April and to date this month collections total $3,837,910.62." Mr. Jackson said, "and there is still the entire month of June before the books will be closed for the second quarter of 1939.

"Such an increase in gross income tax collections may certainly be taken to indicate that Hoosier business and industry are thriving and corroborates further evidences of increased prosperity in Indiana seen in increased farm accounts in the Gross Income Tax Division and large increases in the number of store licenses issued this year over last year."

CALVIN KAIN, WORLD WAR VETERAN PASSES MONDAY

Taps, the soldier's last call, were sounded at 3:10 o'clock Monday morning for Calvin C. Kain, of 716 East Seventh Street, Auburn, at the Dr. J. A. Sanders Hospital. The flagdraped casket was removed to the late home late afternoon, where the body lay in state until military services on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Kain, World War veteran, DeKalb County Surveyor for sixteen years, the longest term ever held by any local county official, and one of the most widely known citizens of the county, died as the result of heart trouble and complications after being ill since April 13. He had been a patient at the hospital three weeks.

Following a short service at the residence at 1:30, the funeral was held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, the pastor, Rev. O. B. Noren, officiating, and burial was made in Roselawn Cemetery. Full military honors were accorded the overseas army engineer.

Mr. Kain was born on October 21, 1883, at Summit, Indiana, a son of Jesse S. and Mary Jane Kain. The family moved to Newville Township and Mr. Kain was graduated from the St. Joe public school. Subsequently he took a course in engineering at Tri-State College at Angola and for a number of years was employed in engineering projects in various parts of the United States.

His first work in the office of DeKalb County Surveyor was that of deputy under Clark Scholes, now county highway supervisor. Mr. Kain and Mr. Scholes quit the office to enlist in the army during the World War on November 13, 1917, the former being a sergeant, first class, in Company C, 25th Army Engineers, in France. He received his discharge on June 6, 1919.

Mr. Kain was a past commander of DeKalb Post No. 97, American Legion, and at the time of his demise was a member of the board of directors. He was also a member of the 40 and 8, joining as a charter member at Evansville, Indiana. Besides his affiliation with the military organizations, he was a member of the church council of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, having been elected last January for a term of three years. He also belonged to the Auburn Chamber of Commerce and the Knights of Pythias lodge at St. Joe.

From 1923 to 1929 Mr. Kain was surveyor of DeKalb County. He served as deputy surveyor of Kosciusko County, Ind., from January, 1929, to June, 1929. He was then employed by the Ray L. Harris Construction Co., of Fort Wayne as a construction engineer and from January, 1931, until January, 1939, he served continuously as surveyor of DeKalb County. Part of this time he was county supervisor of highways. On February 2, 1939, Mr. Kain received the appointment as government engineer on a large public works project at Fort Wayne and held that position until he was incapacitated by his last illness.

Mr. Kain was united in marriage with Miss Mable Guthrie of near LaOtto, on August 8, 1923. To them were born two children, a daughter, Patricia, and a son, Roger, both at home. Survivors besides the widow are four brothers, Forrest and Russell of Fort Wayne, Everett of Newville Township, and Dwight of Garrett, and four sisters, Mrs. Stella Young of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Grace Robertson of Hicksville, Ohio, Mrs. Gladys Treesh of Garrett, principal of the Riley school in Auburn, and Mrs. Bein Moore of Newville Township.

Lloyd Curie and family, of Toledo, Ohio, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Curie and family, over Sunday. They went on Monday to Fort Wayne, to be guests of relatives.

Thee thirty-fifth reunion of the Gramling families will be held at the home of Mrs. Jennie Gengnagel at Newville next Sunday. Frederick Gengnagel is the family president and Rose Gramling is secretary.

Our Amateur Composer

SUNRISE AND SUNSET

The sun begins in the early morn
To shine its golden ray—
Out o'er the earth so dark and still,
To bring us another day.

As the sunbeams shine on the morning dew
With the brightness of glittering gold,
The red and amber on the Eastern sky
Make a picture of beauty untold.

The shining sun in all its glory
Up o'er the earth does creep,
So bright and forceful in its splendor,
And the whole world wakes from sleep.

But if by chance a cloud appears,
And shuts the light away,
A shadow falls upon the earth,
And darker is the day.

Time travels on and eve draws nigh
The sun is going down,
A big, round ball of fire bright
So very red and round.

The colors painted on the sky
Are in perfection blended;
The sun sinks lower in the West,
The day is almost ended.

Of all the pictures the artists paint
I'm sure that there is none
More wondrous in its beauty
Than the rising and setting sun.

AN ASSOCIATED Press dispatch from Willows, Calif., says that a chap by the name of John Cavier has perfected a phonograph which records the varied language of ducks. He uses this machine to call ducks during the hunting season. It has supposedly taken $2,000 and ten years for Cavier to develop the phonograph. We wonder how he manages to broadcast the right duck talk at the right moment.

Observe 50th Anniversary of the Dedication of Spencerville Lutheran Church.

Many There who Attended 50 Years Ago

The fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the present building of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church at Spencerville was celebrated Sunday in an all day service. The church had been beautifully decorated with baskets of peonies and Summer flowers and sprays of mock orange, and visitors, members and friends were met at the door, greeted and welcomed by the pastor, Rev. Frank Stevenson, assisted by members of the young people's class.

The morning service opened at nine thirty, Central Standard Time with the orchestra playing, "Forward, Heroes' Brave!" after which the following program was given:

Hymn ....Congregation and orchestra
Invocation, Superintendent Loyd Laux and school
Gloria Patri .... Congregation
Prayer .... Rev. Stevenson
Orchestra .... "Whispering Hope"
Children's Day Program. Thirty minutes program of songs, exercises, recitations, and prayer, by the three primary classes under the direction of Mrs. Flossie Rhoads, assisted by Gaylon Markle, Helen Koch, Dorothy Smith and Fara Lee Walter.)
Hymn
Welcome .... Stanley Means
Greetings from the Butler and St. Joe Superintendents
History of the Congregation,
.... Mrs. George Doll
The State of the Parish,
.... Rev. Frank Stevenson
Orchestra
Closing Versicles, Supt, and Congregation
Benediction.

After the above mentioned program visitors and members were happy to go below to the basement where the tables were set and a basket dinner enjoyed. Food was both plentiful and delicious making the meal a most enjoyable one. However during the noon hour much visiting took place and from all appearances the older members enjoyed the meal not half so much as they enjoyed meeting and greeting and visiting old friends who were here years ago and were associated with the Sunday School and Church.

The afternoon session began at 1:30 C. S. T. and it was pleasing to note additional old and new faces of other people who had come because they were interested in the church. The afternoon service was a worship service yet it was conducted rather informally in order to allow visiting pastors and old friends and members to say a few words of greeting. Those pastors offering congratulations and encouragement were Rev. C. J. Ferster, of Mulberry Home, Rev. Noren, pastor of St. Mark's Church at Auburn, Rev. Wallace, of the Harlan and Springfield Center Parishes, as well as greetings sent from Rev. Mumma, who was unable to be present because of the illness of Mrs. Mumma.

Dr. W, W. Carey, of Ft. Wayne, was first called upon to give a few memories of olden days in the church. He spoke first of how they had to come in spring wagons in the olden days and one family who seldom missed a service used chairs in their wagons instead of the usual spring seat. He mentioned an old lady who was so faithful to the church, who walked in each Sunday in her bare feet until she reached the church corner, and then she put on her shoes. Today that lady's descendants comprise a large per cent of our Sunday School. He told of the committees appointed to supervise the building of the church building and how hard they worked to erect a church they might be proud of and from history and records we know that it was a success and that they erected an enduring structure entirely debt-free.

He was followed in his remarks by a few words from Mr. Jack Beams, of Fort Wayne and then Mrs. Fannie Beams who was one of the members who helped build the church. She was able to name various committees, also to give the names of the few left alive who were present and helped with the dedication exercises. Three are still members and very faithful ones of our Lutheran Church. They are Mr. Ezra Horn, Mr. Frank Horn, and Mrs. Ella Horn. Mr. Frank Steward, of Garrett, who married into the church was happy to extend his felicitations to the church in his old home town.

The pastor, Rev. Frank Stevenson found he had very little time left for the sermon which was his main part of the afternoon service. He talked on the subect of "Enoch" and used a series of picture drawings to illustrate his sermon. The first was of a small child being offered for dedication to God. The name of the this picture might have been "Enoch" because that name according to the meaning given it by the old Jewish peoples meant dedication. Another picture showed the silver vessels like those we use for baptism and communion and gave their scriptural meaning. A third picture showed an individual looking in a mirror and seeing only himself and depicted the selfishness that can come to a church which is interested only in itself and not in the work of the church as a whole. Missionary societies are important in carrying on this missionary and charitable work and it is with a feeling of guilt that we must acknowledge that we have no missionary society in our church at the present time.

The pastor concluded his service with the offertory, prayer and usual beneditcion. Again the people were given a chance to renew old acquaintances. There were 194 present at the morning service.

The St. Joe and Butler parishes were well represented during the day. Among the other out of town visitors were Dr. and Mrs. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Beams, Mrs. Fanny Beams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beams and family, all of Fort Wayne, Rev. and Mrs. Wallace, son and daughter, of Harlan, Rev. Ferster, of Mulberry, Ind., Rev. Noren, of Auburn, Mrs. Otis Fitch and family, Mrs. Ruth Gorrell and Miss Josephine Gorrell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Steward, Miss Vera Silberg, of Garrett, Ind., the pastor's family from near Woodburn.

Our thanks go to all the committees and workers, to the pastor as well as to all who attended and helped in their own way to make this day an anniversary to be remembered.

The history as read at the service will appear in The News next week.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
© The Safety Man

Recently, a man wrote in and asked me whether all automobile drivers were bad drivers. We must remember that there are millions of good drivers compared to thousands of reckless ones. Approximately 25 per cent of the driving public is responsible for all of the accidents and the accompanying grief and suffering which is reported annually.

Seventy-five per cent of the driving public does not have accidents.

However, it is necessary for the 75 per cent that does not have accidents to be constantly alert because the constituents of the 25 per cent that does report accidents is not permanent. In other words, the possibility of an accident is passed around frequently; and therefore, good drivers must be constantly alert in order to remain good drivers, and bad drivers ought to change their habits immediately.

Mr. Johnson said he enjoyed the trip immensely and that they visited Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert, Mercer, Shelby, Auglaize and Logan Counties. They drove in a nice shower most of the distance.

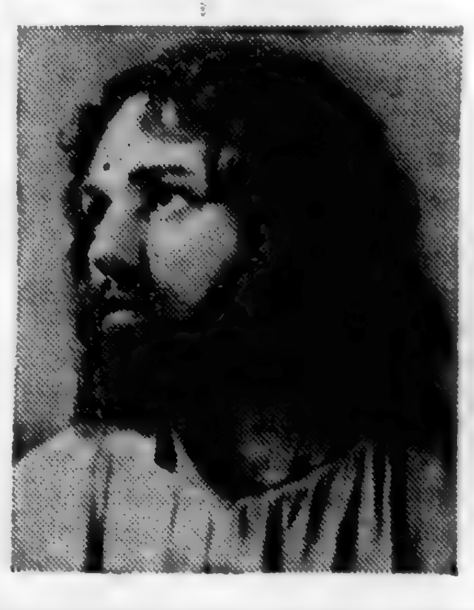
LUTHERAN W. M. S. CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

St. Mark's Lutheran Church celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its Missionary Society on Saturday, June 3rd. Rev. Frank Stevenson, pastor, presided. The organization had twenty-six charter members, five of whom are living: Mrs. Emma Baker, St. Joe; Mrs. Minnie Kagey, Auburn; Mrs. Addie Patterson, Fort Wayne, were present, and Mrs. Bertha Olds, Hicksville, Ohio, and Mrs. Ida Walker, South Bend, were unable to attend. The charter members present were honored at roll call were presented American Beauty roses by Mrs. Lillian Buckingham.

Mrs. W. A. Reichert, of Fort Wayne, gave an inspirational talk and reminisced of her former association with the church and society. Rev. H. J. Currens, of Cromwell, gave a very interesting account of our African Mission and had with him many curios and some handiwork of the native people.

Special musical numbers included a solo by Earl Kinsey and vocal duet by Mrs. Gladys Shull and Miss Vivienne Zeigler. Mrs. Retta Hathaway gave the response to welcome. Greetings were given by many who came to enjoy the day and also by letter and telegram from friends who were unable to be present.

THE CHRISTUS



The church and dining room were beautifully decorated with flowers and five cakes each with ten candles reminding us of the golden occasion. From the altar the pastor gave a lighted candle to the charter members and they in turn passed their lighted candles to younger women who set the 50 candles aglow. The prayer followed that we as christians might carry ever on and on the light of the Gospel and pass our light on to some one else, obeying the command to Go and Teach All Nations. A tribute was paid to the memory of a faithful member, Mrs. Jennie Sechler, who had been active in the organization for 48 years.

At noon a delicious luncheon was served by local society.

After much reminiscing and visiting the meeting adjourned feeling indeed that the day had been one of Spiritual blessing and Christian fellowship, and that our debt to the past can best be paid by concern for the future and our loyalty to the church in our midst.

HOOSIER ANGLERS TO CELEBRATE OPENING O F FISHING SEASON

With eleven days remaining before the opening of the fishing season on Friday, June 16, Hoosier anglers are looking forward to some exceptional sport, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Community celebrations, welcoming the anglers and opening of the season will again be held at Monticello, Angola, Syracuse, Tippecanoe, Culver and a dozen other fishing centers, with special entertainment programs planned. Indiana has approximately a half-million anglers, a large percentage of whom are out for the opening of the season.

Weather conditions prevailing over most of the state during April—continued cold weather with frequent rains—left many Hoosier anglers with only a taste of their favorite sport before the open season ended May 1. Many of them whetted their appetites during the past month with trout fishing in northern Indiana streams but are looking forward to tangling with a black bass or bringing in a string of bluegills.

During the past month reports from all parts of the state indicated a record hatch of bass and other game fish in the lakes and streams as well as in the state and club hatcheries. Eighteen million game fish were planted in Indiana waters last year by the Division of Fish and Game, with an additional seven million fish planted by the conservation clubs.

Saturday Night Show

KENTUCKY BLUE STREAK
(6 reels)

Running Time: 60 Minutes
Director: Raymond Johnson
Story: Homer King Gordon
Cast: Eddie Nugent, Junior Coghlan, Patricia Scott, Cornelius O'Keefe, Margaret Mann, Roy D'Arcy, Al Corporal, Dave Gross, Joe Girard and others.

KENTUCKY BLUE STREAK reached its peak in that thundering Derby finish but it never failed to hold interest from the very beginning. From that peaceful scene of the "Blue Grass" region with softly singing darkies and strumming banjoes, there is little to indicate the thrills which follow, of the tragedy in fact, which sets the whole smashing theme in action.

Picture a son of the old South, bred in the theory that honor must be placed above all else and then follow him through an action classic in which the fate of a loved sister and mother transcended even honor.

The Bradley estate's stables were depleted but for two thoroughbreds. One was the favorite to make track history, but an accident took its life. Hopes shattered, John agreed to hide his identity and ride on an outlaw track for a group of gamblers. He had to do it, he reasoned, to save his home for his mother and sister. Fate plays a cruel trick and Johnnie is sent to jail of a trumped up charge of murder.

Eddie Nugent, a newspaper reporter, who is in love with Johnnie's sister, befriends Johnnie, unaware he is Mary's brother. He convinces the warden that Johnnie should be made a trusty. But word comes from home that "Kentucky Blue Streak" has been entered in the derby. Without Johnnie in the saddle there is little hope of victory. Johnnie breaks jail and after many thrilling incidents reaches the Derby in time to take his mount to the barrier.

The race alone makes a picture never to be forgotten and as Johnnie, exonerated of the murder charge, flashes to victory, two lovers are united—Marty and Mary.

There are some folks who would rather prot by the mistakes of their acquaintances than by their own.

As yet we haven't found the mirror which would enable us to see ourselves as others see us.

One of our common complaints is that we do more worrying about what the world owes us and less about what we owe the world.

It doesn't seem possible to us here that it was around fifty years ago that they didn't call them detours and safety stops.

They aren't all dead—the folks who never expected to see the day when a girl's knees would get as sun-burned as her face.

There is nothing the matter with the younger generation but youth, and that is a period that we all go thru in order to get any place.

Maybe the farme ris lucky after all. If he was awfully prosperous the government would start investigating his operations.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

It is estimated that there will be an increase of $1,200,000,000 in old age benefit payments during the next five years, and some of our big statesmen claim to have discovered that eventually the United States will get on a pay-as-you-go system of old age benefits.

Within the next two and a half years widows, orphans and aged persons will be included in benefit payments according to authentic opinions held in Washington. But when you ask if it will be the Townsend plan the answer is sure to be "no." The idea is to have legislation worked out that will conform to the Social Security Act. But none of the wise men of the Washington Administration seem to have formulated definite plans that furnish any certainty that these popular visions will come through.

UNFIT TO DRIVE

When you came close to having that auto accident last Winter, and called the other driver "crazy," you might have hit the nail on the head. In Detroit, Michigan, they examined 467 motorists who were arrested for breaking traffic laws. 190 of these cases were serious mental cases, seven found insane, 40 on the verge of insanity, 46 feeble-minded and 97 judged to be mentally dangerous on the highway. Folks in St. Joe wonder why licenses were issued to these, in the first place. It would appear to be negligence on the part of someone, or a laxity in traffic laws. This proves that there are many unfit drivers who should not be permitted the responsibility of handling a car. We will never be out of the red in auto fatalities if like cases are given licenses to drive.

WATCH FOR THEM

With the coming of warmer months we are beset all about with worry of weeds, if we care for our yards, pollen, if we care for our hay-fever, and termites, if we care for our homes. These nasty insects carry on a work of destruction often unknown until they have undermined a whole structure and left it a hollow shell. They work from the inside out and do it rapidly and well. The termites can be distinguished from an ordinary flying ant by the thickness of their bodies and their two pairs of wings being the same length instead of uneven as in the flying ant. In the larger cities concerns will rid homes of termites, but it is usually costly. A very effective way to protect your home from invasion is to secure information from your congressman or writing to Washington. Inspect your home before it is too late.

UNDER WAY

Which is the fairest of the Fair? But unlike the jealous Queen Mother in Snow White, we go to no dramatic lengths to pass jugdment. There are people all over the United States who are planning upon going either East or West to view these exhibitions of worlds of tomorrow. There will be varied opinions on the sights and scenes and folks in St. Joe who will see for themselves, are the best judges. It is possible to view wonders of the modern age from arts and agriculture to lighter notes of amuesments and bally-hoo. But there will be a liberal education, in any case, and each sight-seer will return home with a vision of magnificent things planned by industry and science to give a future generation.

GETTING MARRIED?

The marriage custom is followed during all the year, but we figure June as the month of brides. This is our opportunity to express a few personal opinions on the most sacred and important subject.

What concerns the nation regarding the increased divorce rate does not concern us at this writing. We are considering the following of the paths of matrimony through life together. Few of us can say we have followed the wisest and most prudent paths, ourselves, for often we have failed. But there is a lot of starting out on the right foot and that is what we are considering now. The present problem of whether a girl should marry until her young man has a desired position and a nice bank account, is of importance, but so is whether the chap is agreeable, fond of work, has good habits, can be relied upon and pays his bills as he goes along. He must take into consideration whether this girl will assume the responsibilities of maintaining a home and the cares of raising a family. The subject of marriage is not original with us, nor is advice. It has both been going on for a long time, and successfully, don't forget that. Marriage is not just for today and it stands a better chance of surviving tomorrow when both parties realize the necessity of co-operation and hard work, with a large dose of sacrifice thrown in. Marriage deserves the best of heart and mind from every young person who considers it.

WELCOME

There are many people who say that the reason of the royal visitors of Great Britain favoring this country, is purely political and an indication of a diplomatic move in appealing to our sympathy in case of a European war. Whether true or not, it is our belief that their majesties appreciate and realize that just such an idea would be forthcoming from the majority. However, we pay our deep respects to these crowned heads and welcome them to the United States. We love our land and are proud of our democracy. Being a nation of admirers, we doff our hats to these two who have taken up the reins of government and stepped into a tense situation in their country which was smoothed over by their capability in accepting the honor and royal rights bestowed upon them. They are to be admired and snown the hospitality that makes America famous.

WEEDS AGAIN

The weed problem is one of the most serious ones facing agriculture, and it is a hard nut to crack! There is an annual loss in total destruction that runs us into many millions of dollars. The truck-gardener, the farmer who tills large acres, the city dweller who tends a small patch, all face the weed problem. There are so many kinds of weeds, some of them not so prevalent as others or not quite so destructive but all dangerous to land and cause a lot of hard work on the part of St. Joe folk if they wish to keep their premises looking respectable. There are various methods, many recent ones, in the control of weeds, but it is up to all of us to find out the best way to battle them. Information is available from many sources and the wise fellow begins early to lick the weeks before they lick him.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

It cannot be denied that old folks present something of a problem, almost so serious a problem as that presented by youth. Not the least difficulty to be overcome is to decide just when a person is "old." Perhaps thirty years old, Dr. Osler, prominent physician and educator, raised a tempest by stating that a maid did his best work before forty, and that after sixty, both he and the world would be better off if he were out of it. Mr. Townsend is not quite so harsh. He would have the government grant a maximum pension of two hundred dollars to anyone who has turned the three-score mark. The House is not interested in the Townsend plan, if one may judge by the vote of a few days ago, which was 97 for and 302 against; yet since approximtely one legislator in three viewed the suggestion favorably, it was by no means buried in a landslide.

The Townsend measure is mentioned as a fair example of the work that Congress has handled so far during the present session. Important though old age pensions may be, both to him who receives the benefit and to him who foots the bill, pensioning the aged is not one of the affairs about which the country as a whole is vitally and chiefly concerned. Aside from appropriations, Congress has not done much to attract notice. Of major legislation there has been an amazingly small amount. Aside from relief, there has been practically nothing that the President has laid before Congress as requiring action then and there, and thus and so.

If it is true that "in the Spring a young man's fancy lighty turns to thoughts of love," it is equally true that in early Summer a Congressman's fancy turns seriously to thoughts of adjournment. The fifteenth of July is mentioned in a low breath as the day on which reservations for the trip back home should be dated, but no deposits are being placed. If there arises a public demand for action on important business as yet untouched, the final bang of the gavel will have to be put off until some Saturday more remote than July 15. Among the things that may loom up large for action are: giving more elasticity to the Social Security Law, tax revision along certain lines, and Relief for the fiscal year that lies ahead. The big barrier to early adjournment, however, may be the necessity for accurate and positive definition regarding Neutrality. If that Pandora's box is opened, Congress will have to mop its brow, pick up the palm leaf fan and settle back into its seat for a protracted stay.

The union of Republicans and old line Democrats on Capitol Hill, hoped for by some and condemned or scoffed at by others, has failed to materialize to any appreciable extent. White House suggestions have not been followed by the vociferous cheers and the wholesale throwing of hats into the air that were the custom in the past, but on the wohle, the New Deal has come out with its tail feathers intact. Congress now and then has seen fit to stop, look and listen, but in the end it has gone ahead, pretty much along the line that might be expected when a Chief Executive has a safe Congressional majority behind him.

It looks as though the end of tax exempt securities were approaching and that by statutory enactment rather than constitutional amendment, the issuing of tax free government bonds would be stopped. The plan is to let Congress take care of the situation, and amend the Constitution later, if it is found that amendment is necessary.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

There were 229 hogs on sale this week reflecting the general downward trend of meat prices every where but selling at satisfactory prices in comparison with competitive markets: Hogs of the most pupular weights, averaging around 200, and in a range from 170 to 225, $6.25 to $6.40. Light Yorks, 140 pounds to 100 from $8.10 down. In spite of declining hog prices shoats suitable for short feeding periods are comparatively high, selling up to $8.00 and the light thin kinds as high as $10.00 per cwt. Sows to farrow and with litter at heel are in poor demand and selling much lower. Veals topped at $9.90 with most offerings from $9.00 to $9.50.

The best butcher heifers in the sale changed hands at $8.00 with common kinds mostly $6.50 to $7.00. There is still very good demand for thin young pasture cattle. Cows suitable for slaughter $5.40 to $5.65. This is about 50 cents per cwt. lower than sales of like quality last week. Bulls seemed the most active kinds in the cattle department with a top sale of $7.90.

LOG of the U.S. MARINES

TREASURE CHEST MYSTERY

Buried treasure, hidden for nearly a century and a quarter, may some day be located near the marine barricks in Washington, D. C., and its discovery would unravel a mystery that the U. S. Marines have been trying to solve since the War of 1812.

The "treasure," amounting to some $25,000, consisted of funds to meet the pay roll of the marines, and it, along with other valuable trophies and documents, was kept in a military box in the comamndant's house, one of the oldest official buildings in Washington.

According to a Marine Corps legend, when the capital was preparing to meet the invasion of the British in 1814, the two marine sergeants who guarded the strong-box carefully dug a hole in a certain part of the yard, and buried it. They failed to disclose the location of the spot and rushed off to take part in the Battle of Bladensburg, where both were killed.

Efforts to locate the missing strong-box failed, and the Marine Corps, which at that time numbered about a thousand men, was financially embarassed for some time. The chest contained all the funds available to the commandant, who was both Marine Corps leader and paymaster.

For many years workmen digging in the yard during building operations have hoped that their spades would strike an iron-bound chest, and the mystery finally would be solved. Thus far, the secret cache, if it exists, has not been revealed.

When new barracks were under construction a few years ago, workers were advised to be on the lookout for the military chest. One theory is that the strong-box was discovered by the British who made away with it.

MORTUARY

SECHLER

Mrs. Jennie Sechler, 76, widow of Jacob Sechler, of St. Joe, and member of a pioneer DeKalb County family, died suddenly Wednesday morning at 10:45 o'clock at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Everett Mavis, of 207 West Fifteenth Street, Auburn. Mrs. Sechler was sitting in the living room of the Mavis home crocheting, when stricken with a heart attack, and death was instantaneous, it is believed. Her daughter had been conversing with her only a few minutes before.

Mrs. Sechler, a lifelong resident of DeKalb County, had spent the past fifteen winters at the Mavis home, and the remainder of the time at her home in St. Joe. She lived in St. Joe and on the home farm near St. Joe her entire life.

She was born December 15, 1862, on a farm near St. Joe, the daughter of Charles and Nancy Widney. She and Jacob Sechler were united in marriage in September, 1879. Mr. Sechler, a farmer, died December 29, 1924. A brother and a sister also preceded her in death.

A member of the St. Joe Lutheran Church, Mrs. Sechler was active in many church organizations.

Three children survive her, Mrs. Mavis, Merritt Sechler, of near St. Joe, and Mrs. Cora Curie, of St. Joe, nine grandchildren, and nine great grandchildren. The grandchildren are Herbert Curie, of Garrett, Mrs. Lucille Frederick, of Reading, Pa., Franklin Curie, Jr., of St. Joe, Mrs. Catherine Jump, Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Grace Cook, Mrs. Ruth Moore, all of Hicksville, Ohio, Everett Mavis, of Auburn, and Betty Mavis, a student at Mary Washinngton College at Fredericksburg, Va.

The body was brought to the Kinsey funeral home and was then returned to the Mavis home Thursday morning, where her many Auburn friends were permitted to call. On Friday afternoon the bodp was removed to the Curie home here, where her wide circle of friends were permitted to call and pay their last respects.

The funeral was held from the St. Joe Lutheran Church, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Frank Stevenson, with burial in the K. of P. Cemetery.

NICHOLLS

Mrs. Bird C. Roberts Nicholls, daughter of William and Parlia Roberts, was born October 4, 1872 and departed this life at her home at Orangeville, Tuesday afternoon, May 30, at 2 o'clock, after suffering a severe heart attack on Monday. She was 65 years, 7 months and 26 dayc old.

On June 6, 1897 she was united in marriage to Robert Nicholls by Rev C. E. Disbor, then pastor of Butler M. E. Church.

A lifelong resident of the Orangeville vicinity, Mrs. Nicholls was a member of the United Brethren Church at Newville and was active in all church organizations. She is survived by her husband; a son, Simon Nicholls, of two miles north of Newville; two daughters, Mrs. Parlia Hull, of Fort Wayne, and Mrs. Madeline Lemon, of Pleasant Lake, and a brother, Preston Roberts, who made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock (DST) at the residence, with Rev. P. A. Hubartt officiating. Burial in Evergreen Cemetery at Newville.

HELLER

The funeral of little Clifford Lowell Heller, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Heller, of Spencerville, was held on Wednesday from the Mennonite Church on St. Mary's Avenue, Fort Wayne, with burial in the I. O. O. F. Cemetery at Roanoke.

Clifford was born October 30, 1933, in Fort Wayne and came to Spencerville with his parents just fourteen months ago. He was a pupil in the second grade of the Spencerville school in the room taught by Mrs. Gladys Impton. He was a very regular attender of the Lutheran Sunday School after coming here.

He was ill only a few hours. On Sunday morning he dressed for Sunday School and his parents noted that a tooth was infected. They took him to a doctor and then to a dentist who removed the tooth. The infection coming from the tooth or possibly from some other source had apparently gained rapid progress in the blood stream. He became quite ill in the evening and died about ten o'clock. After a consultation doctors pronounced his disease as a rare and fatal form of blood infection.

He leaves the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Heller, a brother, Lawrence, one sister, Loretta; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Aschleman, of Pigeon, Mich., and Mrs. and Mrs. Heller, of Cedarville; five great grandparents, many other relatives ,and a host of playmates and friends.

CONCERNING EMPLOYMENT

There is a tightening of the laws in many states regarding the employment of married women. This is especially true in the field in State and local governments. Where they formerly raised objections if the husband was employed by the state, it is now whether the hubsand is employed at all. This problem has rapidly spread into education and there are many schools who do not employ married women under any circumstances. There are two sides to the question and we are not taking sides, for everyone in St. Joe knows of various instances where each has a strong case. But we do see the passing of many bills in the land limiting the employment of married women. The national employment situation being what it is, the fact that there are still women who work after marriage when they have a husband able to support them, is an angle that must be considered.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

American candy is to be introduced into British East Africa within a short time.

Wednesday night picture shows at St. Joe will be in operation commencing this week with Courage of the North. Next week the picture will be Kelley of the Secret Service.

When I see a boy who hasn't a dog
  Or a dog that hasn't a boy—
I think of the lot they are missing
  Of frolic and genuine joy.
Some parents think dogs are a nuisance
  Just something to bark and annoy—
They can't know how badly a boy needs a dog
  Or how sadly a dog needs a boy.

If you are planning to get married in Trinidad you'd better know about one of their local customs. A visitor attended a marriage ceremony of a Spanish couple recently. The bride was decked in white with voluminous satin skirts that trailed out behind where two pages carried the hem. Then, when the couple was about to be united in holy wedlock, the pages lifted the train of the skirt and out flew—guess what—a flock of doves!

ICKES CLAIMS STORY IN LOOK MAGAZINE IS MISLEADING

Look magazine denied today that it had misinterpreted any part of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes' recent article urging a third term for President Roosevelt, and asserted that the cabinet officer had approved personally their plans for publicising his political views.

To clear up any possible misunderstanding, however, the magazine announced it would reprint the exact words used by Secretary Ickes to express his views concerning the third-term question. In a statement issued here, the editors of Look said:

"When Look purchased the article from Mr. Ickes, he knew exactly how it was to be used and he has since approved it.

"In editing Mr. Ickes' article, the editors of Look exercised scrupulous care to preserve intact the message of his original text. With the exception of a few words inserted to describe pictures, the article as published contained no words that were not written by Mr. Ickes.

"Because Mr. Ickes preferred the article in its original form, Look has agreed to publish his text in full in its next issue (which goes on sale June 20) and invites its readers to judge whether the article as originally published changed the meaning of what he wrote by so much as one jot."

If you want a copy of Look for June 20, get it at News office this week.

The R. H.C.

A poem written by Mrs. Winnifred Hart and read at the Anniversary Celebration of the club organization last week.

Twenty-six years ago today,
A few neighbor ladies met to say,
They thought an afternoon now and then
Away from our work, our cares and men,
Would give us a broader outlook on life,
And help each to be a more charming wife.

They decided then to organize.
(I think you'll agree they were very wise.)
And to meet each Thursday at any rate.
The very next meeting they would initiate
Those who came to join their ranks,
And two were victims of their pranks.

Now those first members at Pluma's met
And chose their officers and dates were set.
We met with Ines the very next time,
Where Jessie and Winifred fell into line.
They were put through the traces at a rapid pace,
'Tis hard to say, what all took place.

We chose our colors and name that day,
And the motto we were to follow alway
"Striving to find the blue bird old,
The blue bird of happiness at our own threshold."
The pledge is found on pages neat,
Let us one and all repeat
Pledge—I promise—

Many good times we have had together
Through both fair and stormy weather.
Always faithful in attendance true,
Surprising sometimes the things we'd do.
Walking the fence row, through mud, glub, glub,
The buggy wheels went in to the hub.

Once the harness broke and Nellie had to climb
To the horse's back and grab the line
And ride to the neighbors to get assistance,
For Cora was sitting back there quite a distance.
The thills from the buggy had broke with a snap
And Cora, of course, was caught in a trap.

Oh, many wonderful times we have had.
Tho many were pleasant, yet some have been sad.
For into each life some clouds must appear,
But unto each other we've grown very dear.
While some have passed on to that great home above,
Yet new ones have come and shared in our love.

I hope that the R. H. C. may live on down through many years,
Sharing in the happiness and also in the tears.
For what are burdens if they are shared
In any kind of weather?
The sun comes shining through the clouds,
Just so we keep together.

History of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Spencerville, Ind.

1849--1939

(By Mrs. George Doll)

The St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, was organised in October, 1849, at the home of Wm. Downs by twelve charter members under the leadership of Rev. J. Carther, who, assisted by Rev. Hoffman, supplied as pastor until Rev. John Leidle was called in January, 1851.

In 1852, under the pastorate of Rev. Wm. Waltman, the first constitution was adopted, formally naming the new congregation, "The St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Spencerville, Indiana."

The first plans for a church building were made in the summer of 1854 when a committee submitted specifications for the proposed structure but no ground was broken until in July, 1858, when subscriptions were received and the work let to John A. Chillis and Solomon Bowman.

The congregation used the building for the first time on March 14, 1858, for the service of Holy Communion. The structure was formally dedicated to God's honor and service on September 26 of the same year when the Synod of Northern Indiana was assembled and "duly organized." Rev. Wells delivered the dedication sermon.

In February, 1860, a hymnal was purchased by the council and each member of the congregation was instructed to purchase and carry his own copy,—a practice then more common than now.

The first parsonage, a house located where the home of Frank Beams now stands, was purchased in 1868.

The second twenty-year period in the congregation's history was even more fruitful than the noteworthy first. Under the long pastorate of Rev. E. W. Erick and the ministry of the able men who follow him, the congregation experienced great growth so that by 1886, it was expedient to build a new church. Devotion and wealth combined to envision plans for the best church building in the county.

In the afternoon of July 2, 1887, the congregation met to lay, on ground purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, the cornerstone for their new church. The following articles were sealed in the stone: a copy of the Holy Bible, Luther's Catechism, Lutheran Observer, Lutheran Missionary Journal, Lutheran Evangelist, Auburn Courier & Dispatch, St. Joe News, and the Spencerville Owl, together with a list of the officers, trustees, and committees for the year.

Nearly two years were required to complete the large brick structure but on June 1, 1889, the South District Conference of the Northern Indiana Synod being here assembled, the congregation gathered for a farewell service is the old church building. Rev. Erick led the service. On the following day, Sunday, June 2, a happy people under the leadership of the Rev. S. A. Ort, president of Wittenberg College, dedicated and entered their beautiful new church home, a worthy house of God costing about $9,000 all of which was paid by the evening of that day. Four years later, a new brick parsonage was built according to the personal plans of Rev. Thomas, at a cost of $1,700.

For the next quarter of a century, the history of St. Peter's is written in the more quiet, though often more important, records of baptisms, confirmations, conversions, communions, weddings and deaths. These are the real signs of church life.

During the early years of Rev. A. K. Mumma's ministry, the need for a new furnace room and more Sunday school rooms lead to the undertaking of the seemingly impossible task of excavating for a basement under this heavy structure. New entrances were constructed involving the removal of the porch at the northwest corner and the sealing of the trapdoor in the north-east Sunday school room.

In the summer and fall of 1938, in co-operation with the St. Mark's Congregation, St. Joe, Indiana, and by the hearty response of the people of St. Peter's as individuals and groups, the parsonage was modernised and redecorated inside. This work has done much to make the Spencerville parish one of the better rural parishes in the Indiana Synod.

Today, we are marking the ninetieth year of St. Peter's congregation, commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of our church building, a challenging gift of love and sacrifice from our forefathers, and noting the completion of the first year of service by our present pastor.

We have been served by twenty-six pastors, ten of whom are still living. We have been on the mountain tops, we have been in the deep valleys, out through it all God has been merciful to us and good. In recent years we have been served by several ministers who have urged a return to more Lutheran practices so that today the congregation is using the Lutheran Hymnal and the Common Service in part; observing the chief festivals of the Church Year, and taking a greater interest in the organizations and institutions of the Church at large. The young are being instructed, an opportunity for worship and Holy Communion is provided regularly; so under God's guidance we look forward to continued years of service in His kingdom, to whom be praise, honor and glory now and forevermore. Amen.

Pastor's Parish Report

(Rev. Frank Stevenson)

Today we are recalling with joy some of the outstanding dates in the history of a congregation and of a church building but we are utterly unable to measure the work which God has done through them. In an era when ideas and institutions are appearing and disappearing within the course of a few weeks or months, it is especially noteworthy and encouraging to be in the presenec of things which have served for many decades. From this particular church, we can look back through the centuries and witness the same endurance of our Savior's Church for, 'underneath are the everlasting arms.' Our fellowmen appeal to us for the support of many clever and inviting plans for the betterment of self or of the world but the only plan that has been or ever shall be known that the same time demands everything we have to offer and gives us all that we can receive and use, is the eternal Plan of Life revealed to us in, through and by our Lord Jesus Christ.

As your Pastor, I have come to the close of this first year with a feeling of human rejoicing for what has been done but with a divine dissatisfaction with myself, with you, and with the world, as we are. I wish to thank you all for your co-operation in the work and in the repair of the parsonage and for your many personal acts of kindness. Of God, for myself, I ask increased wisdom and understanding for the better fulfilling of my office as His ambassador and servant, and for you, growth in all Christian virtues through an outpouring of His Grace upon you.

WARNED TO GUARD AGAINST SUMMER PERILS

Safety engineers tell us in a recent bulletin that Accident never takes a holiday. One set of hazards is merely replaced by another as the seasons change.

Spring is melting into Summer, and everybody knows what Summer hazards are. But we shall remind you of them anyway. Some unpleasant things, if remembered in this delightful season of baseball, fishing, golf. and gardening, will allow the season to pass less painfully.

So don't forget:

Heat prostration, heatstroke, and sunstroke. Avoid them by doing what the doctors have said again and again—summer hygiene, summer diet, plenty of salt when exerting yourself on hot days.

Water accidents. Remember the precautions to be taken even though you can swim. Don't swim directly after a heavy meal or allow your swimming appetite to go beyond your actual prowess. And your conduct in boats—know what you are about and something about the waters you sail on. In a boat, allow the most skillful sailor to be in complete charge.

Fourth of July. Attend public fireworks exhibits. Let somebody else provide the show. Scores of children die each year as the result of handling fireworks, and thousands suffer painful burns.

Sunburn. A beautiful tan is fine, and the sun's rays are beneficial, but thousands of impetuous tan seekers suffer severe burns each year. Many of these impetuous ones who expose themselves too long the first day are obliged to spend days in bed where each time they move they are painfully reminded of their folly.

Automobiles. That Saturday afternoon hurry to get to the fishing spot, or the swimming beach, and the Sunday night drive back may be dangerous. Crowded highways, passing on hills and curves, too much hurry for the little time saved these are common, but deadly hazards.

Automobile accidents were reduced last year from 39,500 in 1937 to 32,000 in 1938. Why not reduce the innumerable accidents from other causes?

SACRIFICE

War is hell! On God's deep seas,
With gray steel ships, in groups of threes.
Bombing guns and singing bombing shells,
Lights in flashes, with ringing bells,
Wave it, pass it, anvthing to prevent it.
We have peace, So help us keep it!

War is hell! In God's clear atmosphere
With silvery plane, that's hard to steer,
Some pilot shot! and maybe killed,
They have trouble, no matter how skilled,
If burning tourance hits the ground,
An injured pilot! it is death-ward bound.

War is hell! On God's green pastures,
Fighting soldiers and their masters,
With peace-made cannons, rifles, and gasses deadly,
Among death-bound soldiers tramping steadily.
With young daughters and sons on their way,
And worried mothers, who dare not say,
The hazard of war! It's on its way.

—Jack Chorpenning.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

There were 22 less head of livestock on sale this week than last. There was a definite tendancy toward lower prices with several slaughter house buyers off the market.

Hogs: All popular slaughter weights ranging from 240 to 160, $6.15 to $6.20. 240 to 325 pounds, $5.25 to $6.00. Fat cows, $4.40. Boars $2.50 to $2.75. Feeder shoats and sows with litters are in good demand in spite of lower slaugther hog prices. Veals were not in as good demand as in recent weeks but made a top of $8.60 with the bulk between $9.25 and $9.50. Light thin calves are popular with slaughter buyers.

The cattle department reflected less weakness than other kinds of livestock. Common slaughter steers and heifers off grass $7.00 to $7.30. Cows $5.25 to $5.65. Common thin cows $4.00 to $5.00. Bulls $5.25 to $5.70.

Saturday Night Show

MOONLIGHT ON THE RANGE

(6 reels)

Running Time: 60 Minutes.
Story: Whitney Williams.
Director: Sam Newfield.
Cast: Fred Scott, Al. St. John, Lois January, Dick Curtis, Frank LaRue, Jimmy Aubrey, Oscar Gahan.

For the movie clientele that likes realistic action drama, with romance and comedy thrown in, MOONLIGHT ON THE RANGE more than meets their wants.

Starring Fred Scott, the "silvery voiced" baritone, it dashes along at a good pace, strongly punctuated by the popping of six guns and enlivened by the star's latest song hits. These include "Shindig" two typical western songs, "Albuquerque" and "Sundown Trail," and a plaintive lyric "As the Sun Goes Down."

Not only is the plot not formulated, but it has new twists that provide thrilling dramatic situations, while a romantic thread runs through the whole. Fred, after a band of rustlers, stops at a ranch house where he falls in love with Lois January, daughter of the crippled owner. His resemblance to a notorious outlaw causes him to be regarded with suspicion. He tells Lois that the bad man is his half brother, and thereafter is sustained by her faith in him. The outcome is ingeniously worked out. Scott plays the dual roles of the half brothers with fine distinction.

WHEELS FOR ALL

We used to think the bicycle was disappearing, along with the horse and buggy. Seldom did you see anyone except the very young riding a bicycle, as of yore. But they became very popular on college campus and transporting youths to school and men to work, for delivering messages and small merchandise from stores. Today we think nothing of seeing folks on bicycles, and perhaps if we could keep our balance we might join them! We are all familiar with the signs of "Rent a Bicycle." There are many cities where they have paths for riders in public parks. It is a wide move, this one of pedal and coast. It is a healthy move too, for what better exercise than this for a muscular work out. Last year there were about 1,500,000 bicycles sold in this country. That is nearly 250,000 more than were sold at the beginning of the century when the "bic" was king. Our reason for quoting these figures is to show how necessary it is for more caution when traveling by auto or by cycle. It is a traffic problem which calls for every rider and driver to use his head. Wise heads in St. Joe will tell you there is need for care whether the wheels be two or four.

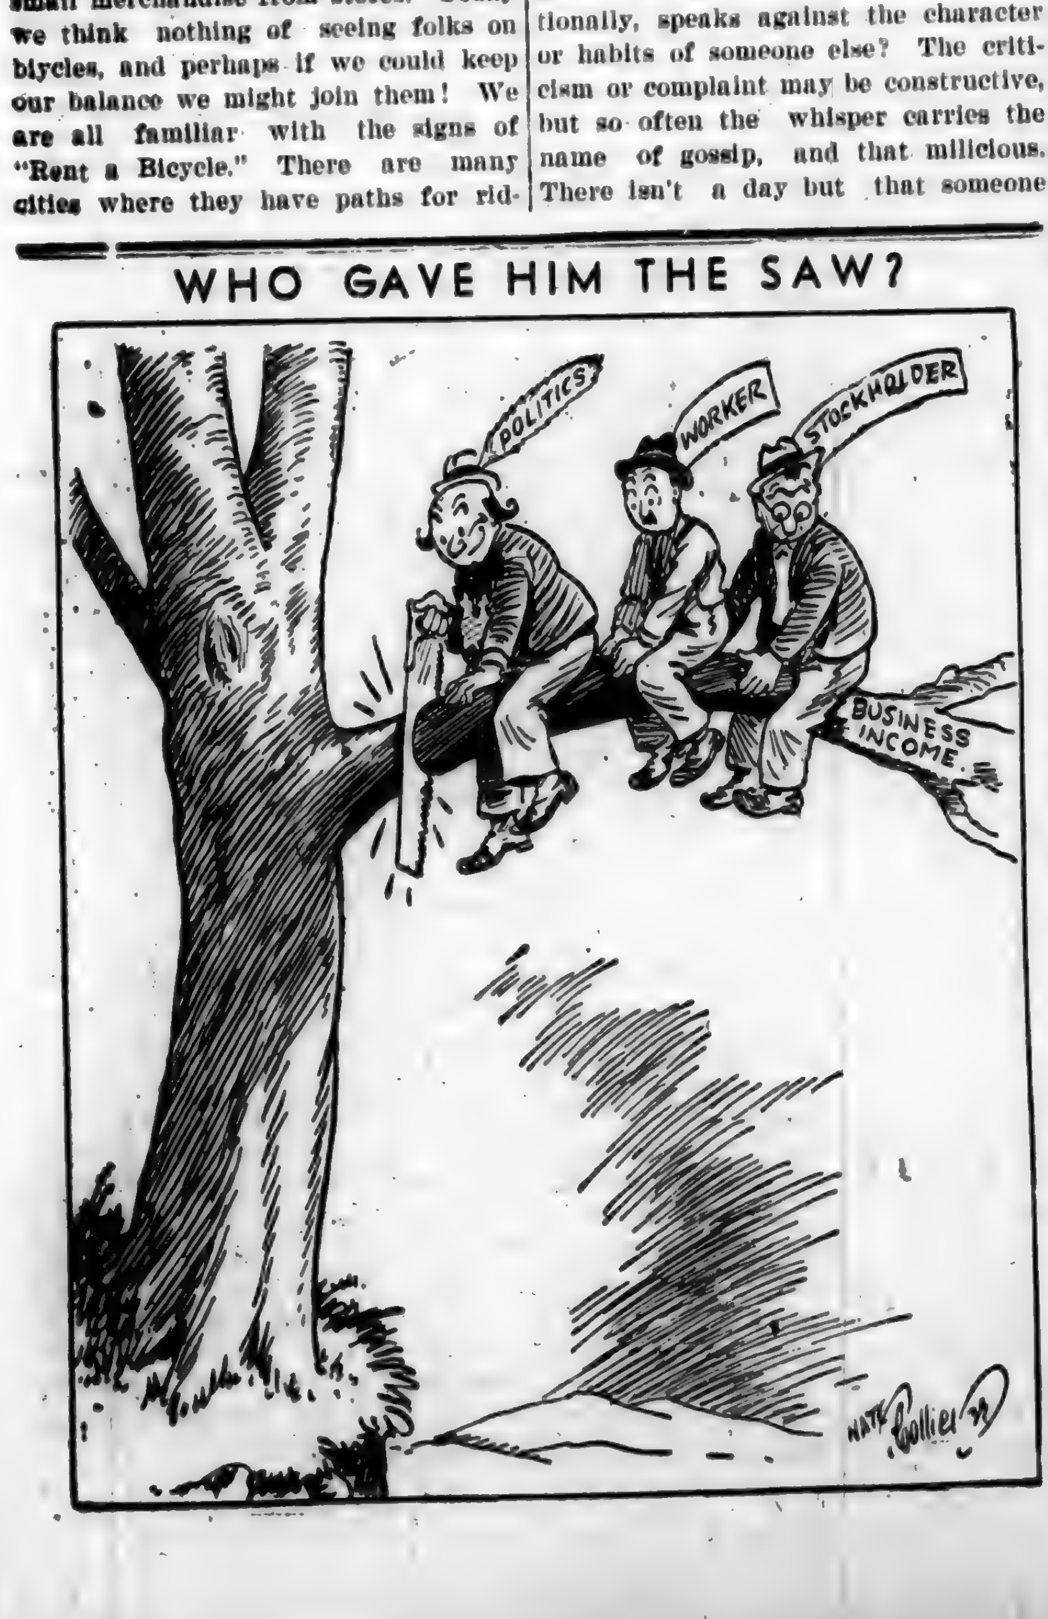
COUNTRY DOCTOR

It pleases us that there is more recognition given yearly to our country doctors. They have been the material for a revival of interest in movies, fiction and on the radio. And it is high time their services and abilities are noted. There are those who believe that the training and equipment of the country doctor is not up to modern standards, but that is not as true today as in past years. We must remember that the country doctor made up for a technical knowledge with a personal knoweldge of the patient and his family for many generations back, and this is an important item in present day medicine. They call it case history. The country doctor was a pioneer in this field, he battled against fear and superstition and ignorance. He was handicapped by poor roads and unsanitary conditions. He dwelt with all civilization and made the way easier for the modern physician. The country has been given a back seat as eyes turn to large hospitals and expensive laboratories, equipment and training. The time is indeed ripe to speak of the nation's debt and obligation of science, to these our country doctors.

LOOSE TONGUES

As you walked along the river bank you picked up a pebble and tossed it into the water to watch the ripples it made. The tiny waves seemed to spread so far and wide, a calm surface disturbed by your toss of that small pebble. Every town has their pebble tossers, their citizens who disturb the calm of the quiet life. Have you ever noticed the many ripples that are made when someone, perhaps unintentionally, speaks against the character or habits of someone else? The criticism or complaint may be constructive, but so often the whisper carries the name of gossip, and that milicious. There isn't a day but that someone speaks ill of another. Quite often it is unjust, untrue or exaggerated. How many ripples this leaves! We would all be happier without the gossip and how many of us are apt to catch ourselves doing the same thing if we aren't careful.

WHO GAVE HIM THE SAW?



WHY CHANCE IT?

It seems that every once in a while somebody of prominence pops up with a charge of smuggling against their name. Not long ago familiar actors, more recently a judge's wife and a society matron. It is called smuggling but is really another form of gambling. Perhaps these folks who could well afford to pay the duty are trying to put something over on the customs inspector for the sport in running such a risk. Maybe it isn't considered bad taste in good society. But when the culprit is caught there comes a steep fine, perhaps imprisonment and a goodly share of public shame and humiliation. It may be worth it to some but not to us in St. Joe.

NO AGE LIMIT

What of it, if he is getting up in years? Many a man is at his best after youth has been left behind. At 75 Ford still makes good automobiles. Often one will insist that age is against many a man in being competent. While youth is necessary in business, age has had its experience and the judgment of men over 50 is an assistance in the efforts of the young man. There is not an age limit to be put on man's usefulness. The era of the young would be sad indeed without the experience of age to guide it. Business in the hands of the old would become laggard and dull, but all business in the control of the young would perish suddenly. Both the mind of the aged and the energy of the young have their uses.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senator Minton's announcement that he will be a candidate for re-election in 1940 came as no great surprise to anyone. Made during a brief visit to Indiana, the announcement created not the slightest stir in political circles, rated only inside space in most Indiana newspapers.

One reason the announcement couldn't be classed as one of the ten best news stories of 1939 was that Minton previously had indicated that he would be a second-term candidate. Approached by reporters in March after Ray Willis, Republican senatorial candidate, had revealed that he would seek re-nomination, Senator Minton had remarked:

"I haven't made any announcement, and don't intend to at this time, but I believe it has been generally understood in Indiana that I would be a candidate."

PROSPECTS of any Democrat opposing re-nomination of the Hoosier New Dealer are exceedingly slim. The State House Machine, fearful that the McNutt presidential candidacy may flounder on the rocks of party factionalism, will see to it that he gets the nomination without any trouble. No other candidate would be foolish enough to enter the Machine-controlled Democratic convention entertaining serious hopes of getting anywhere.

Thus assured of the nomination, the New Albany Senator is planning to wage his campaign in 1940 on a platform of 100 per cent of the New Deal and, if things work out the way he'd like them to, Paul V. McNutt.

The issue will be clear cut. Minton, all-weather friend of the President, will defend the New Deal and everything it has sponsored, including the Supreme Court plan, the Black appointment, the Social Security hoax and farm, relief and spending programs. His opponent will be an ardent anti-New Dealer, in all probability Mr. Willis.

The campaign will not be like the Van Nuys-Willis fight last year, in which the issues were muddled and both candidates were in the anti-New Deal camp. It will be a raring-tearing battle between a leading New Dealer and a vigorous anti-New Dealer, with a seat in the U. S. Senate as the prize.

MINTON'S announcement almost coincided with the publication in a Fort Wayne Democratic newspaper of a full page of letters from leading Senators, denying that Minton was "actively disliked" by a majority of his colleagues. The charge was made by a nationally-syndicated Washington writer several weeks ago and mentioned in this column at the time. Irked by the story, the publisher of the Fort Wayne paper, after conferring with Minton, addressed letters to every member of the Senate inquiring if it were true. Forty-nine, a clear majority, replied that it was not.

REPUBLICAN Congressmen from Indiana, polled this week on the probable outcome of next year's Congressional races in the twelve Hoosier districts, expressed the opinion that the GOP will gain at least two and possibly five seats. The present division is seven Republicans and five Democrats.

Two of the Republicans, expecting a GOP landslide, predicted that their party will make a clean sweep of the State and return an all-Republican Congressional delegation. Two others offered the opinion that the division after 1940 will be ten Republicans and two Democrats. The rest conceded the Democrats two seats.

Considered hardest to beat are Representatives Schultz of the First District, Boehne of the Eighth and Ludlow of the Twelfth, all of whom were re-elected last Fall by comfortable majorities. The GOP Congressmen, however, are confident that Republicans will replace Representatives Larrabee of the Eleventh District and Crowe of the Ninth, who won by narrow margins.

DEMOCRATIC Congressmen, polled on the same question, were of the opinion that Democrats will win back at least three of the seats they lost last year and perhaps five.

They believe that Representatives Halleck of the Second District and Gillie of the Fourth, both of whom were elected by record majorities of over 20,000 votes, will be hardest to defeat. They also have a healthy respect for the vote-getting abilities of Representatives Harness of the Fifth District and Springer of the Tenth, who won by fairly large majorities.

Democratic hopes for 1940 are chiefly centered in the Third, Sixth and Seventh districts, which went Republican last year by very small margins. These districts are represented by Grant, Johnson and Landis.

SIDELIGHTS: The King and Queen have gone, but the memory of their charm and graciousness lingers on. . . It will be weeks before Washington recovers completely from their visit. . . Indiana's Congressmen and Senators all had an opportunity to meet Their Majesties during the Capitol reception, but only a few were among the guests at the Embassy garden party. . . A reporter called upon Rep. George W. Gillie, homespun Hoosier, to inquire what he planned to wear when he met the Royal Couple. "My three-year-old dark blue suit," the unassuming Gillie replied. . . A native of Scotland, the Fort Wayne Congressman greeted the Scottish-born Queen Elizabeth as one Scot to another. . . Also in Washington to meet the King and Queen was Dr. Gillie's 86-year-old mother, Mrs. Janet Gillie of Fort Wayne. It was her first glimpse of the Capital and second glimpse of British royalty. Mrs. Gillie had met Queen Victoria more than sixty years ago in Scotland.

Economic Highlights...

To attempt to analyze and project the future course of business at present amounts to seeking a short cut to the insane asylum. Today (and for months past) the purely economic factors that in normal times determine what business and industry are going to do, have been at least relatively good. There is an abundance of credit. There are almost unlimited opportunities for expansion of important industries in both the consumers' and producers' goods fields. The inventory situation, with one or two more or less minor exceptions, is favorable. And, according to trustworthy reports, representative business, weary of almost endless years of depression broken by occasional, sporadic upturns, is chafing at the bit to go ahead.

But business doesn't go ahead. New industrial financing remains practically at the zero level. No major basic industry is expanding on any important scale. Little preparation is being made for the future. And long-planned expansion programs, some of them of the most ambitious nature, are being held in abeyance for an indefinite time.

This isn't as puzzling as it may seem. For business is still dominated by the political factor, as against the purely economic factor. It is afraid of what politicians may do next. It fears for the future of earnings and profits. It fears the constantly growing specter of government control and, in some cases, actual government competition. It is waiting—as it has been waiting for many moons—to see what happens. And so far as it is able it is husbanding its resources, spending almost nothing that is not necesasry to the day-by-day routine conduct of its affairs.

You can find eloquent advocates who will say that is the wrong attitude—that business has more than discounted political conditions and isn't justified in its fears. You can find equally eloquent advocates who will say that business is right—that, under present circumstances, it can do nothing else. But, regardless of opinions, that is the way business-at-large feels, and that is the reason depression hangs tenaciously on.

In the light of this, a recent event is of potential significance as a possible factor in helping break the log-jam of pessimism that holds back business. That event is Secretary Morgenthau's "tax relief" proposal to a Congress which is becoming increasingly economy-minded. Mr. Morgenthau has the unenviable job of having to finance a government with an ever-soaring national debt, and he has long pondered the obtuse problem of taxation. Some time ago it was announced that he had a definite program he wished enacted in an effort to encourage business. Then the program dropped out of sight, as the President reaffirmed his faith in the spending-for-prosperity policy. Late in May another change took place. Senator Harrison, one of the leaders of the economy bloc in Congress, went to the White House. And, according to Newsweek, "'Harrison started in by telling President Roosevelt flatly that, having talked for months about giving business the tax changes it seemed to want, Congress intended to see business get the changes whether the President liked it or not." The next day the President consulted with Senator Byrnes, a Democratic whip who also tends toward economy.

Result: A week later Secretary Morgenthau appeared before a meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee wth a detailed tax-revision program recommended by the Treasury, and, according to the Secretary, endorsed by the President.

Mr. Morgenthau's program calls for repeal of the undistributed profits tax, the excess profits tax, and the capital stock tax; a change in the law to permit business to carry over net losses for several years; reduction of the surtax in high brackets; a change in the corporate income tax, to make it a flat 18 per cent on incomes over $25,000; reduction in the tax on small corporations.

This program obviously doesn't solve the tax problem by a long shot, but it is definitely an appeasement policy. If it is enacted it should give business a ray of hope.

Mr. Garner's announcement that he will seek the Democratic Presidential nomination next year turns a rumor into a fact.

It also serves to further emphasize the split in the ranks of the majority party. Mr. Garner has a solid following among the relatively conservative Democrats—which includes the influential Southern bloc almost 100 per cent and he is heartily disliked by the more extreme New Dealers. He will probably go to the convention with enough votes to make it tough for any candidate he opposes.

At the same time, talk of nominating Secretary Hull, as a sort of compromise candidate, grows. Many feel Mr. Hull would be the strongest candidate the Democrats could put in the field.

Historic Covered Bridges on State Highway to be Replaced.

above—bridge on Road 44, east of Rushville, over Big Flat Rock River left—bridge on Road 229, west of Metamora, over the Butts Fork of Salt Creek

These two historic covered bridges, among the few still left on the state highway system, are to be replaced with modern structures as a part of the state highway modernization program, T. A. Dicus, chairman of the Commission, reported today. Bids on the new bridges will be received by the State Highway Commission on June 29.

The bridge on Road 44 just east of Rushville, was built in 1881 by A. M. Kennedy & Sons, of Rushville, who erected a number of timber bridges in that part of the state. It is 160 feet long and is widely known for the sidewalks on either side of the 15-foot roadway. The new bridge will have a 28-foot roadway with sidewalks on either side.

The bridge on Road 229, known to scores of Indiana motorists as the "Metamora Bridge" also employed the "Burr Truss" type of construction and is believed to have been built by the Kennedy family of Rushville more than fifty years ago. Little is known of its history. It is 172 feet long with a 17-foot roadway. The bridge which will replace this structure will have a 24-foot roadway.

The replacement of the two timber structures is a part of the modernization of the state highway system, eliminating structures which are safety hazards due to narrow roadways and other factors.

It has often been said, and in this column, too, that accidents do not happen—they are caused.

The cause of any particular accident may be attributed to a careless driver or pedestrian, to a defect in the highway, to a mechanical defect, to hazardous weather conditions, or to a combination of a number of these factors.

Yearly statistics, as prepared by all states and bureaus, indicate that the human element is the outstanding cause. The driver of the automobile is usually responsible for the accident. According to the statistics given in recent years, two out of every three accidents involve mistakes by drivers. Excessive speed, driving on the wrong side of the road, disregard of traffic signals, and other careless habits have contributed to the high frequency of accidents.

We are to blame—not the machine.

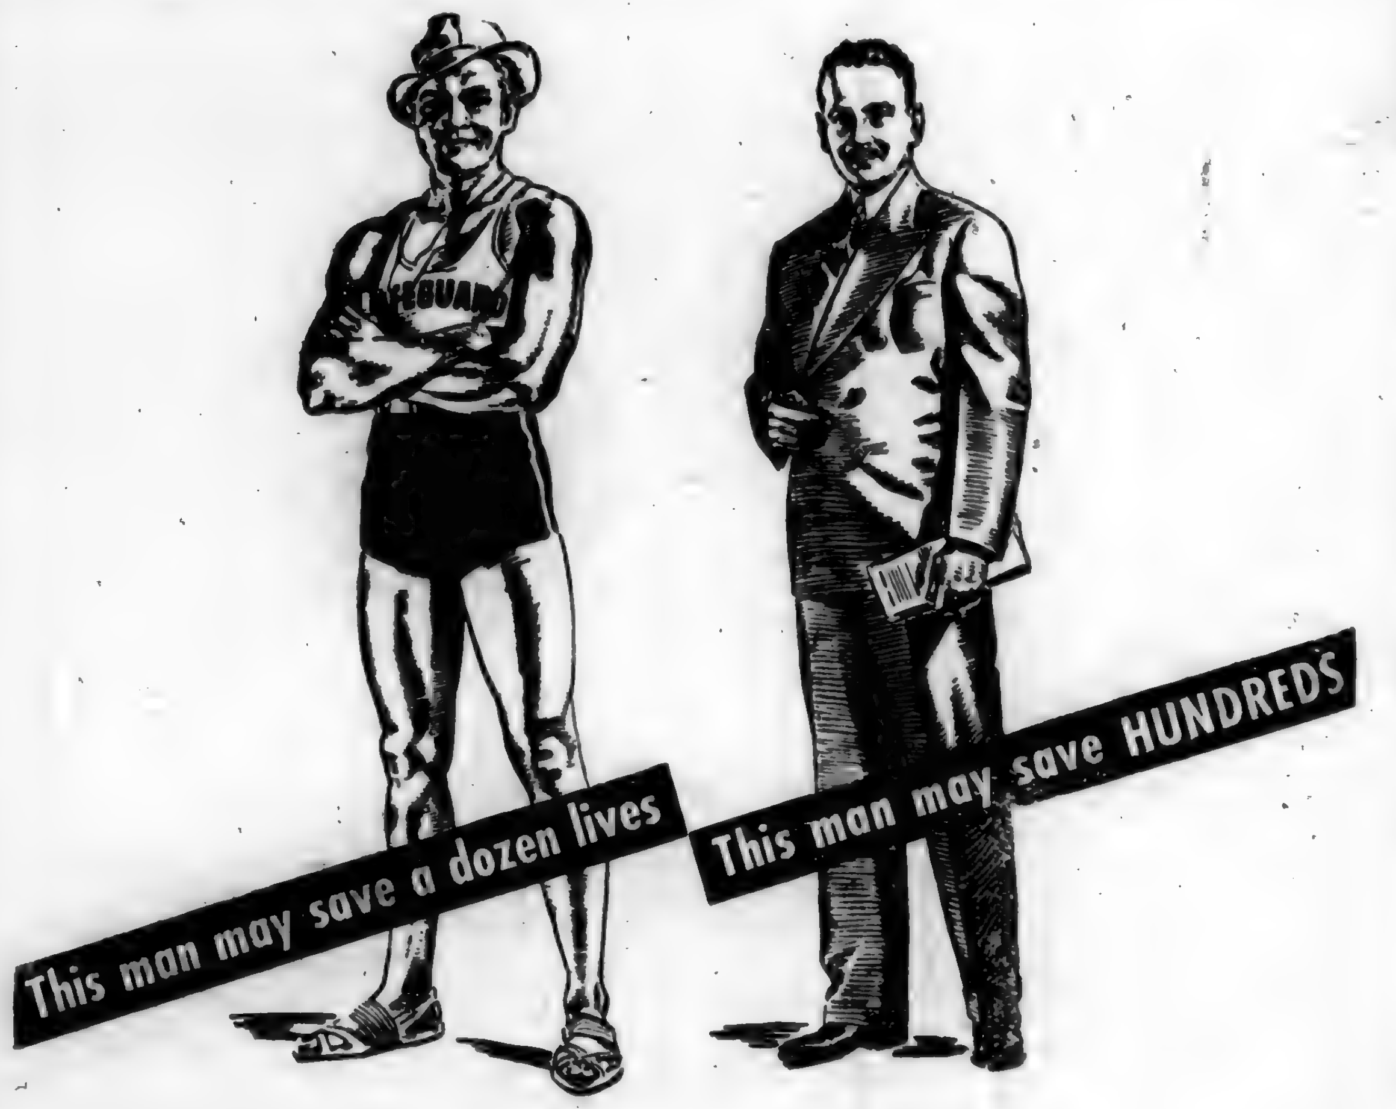
Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

The tree trimmer who sat on the end of a limb and then sawed off the limb has nothing on certain automobile drivers.

Is there any difference as far as results are concerned between the man sitting on the end of the limb and the man who drives an automobile recklessly by passing people on hills and curves and at intersections?

The man in the tree we would call a "fool." Much stronger language has been used by drivers who have been passed on a hill by a reckless driver. Innocent people become the victims of such careless acts, and serious accidents result.

It's stupid to take a chance—it's smart to drive carefully.



LIFEGUARD
This man may save a dozen lives
This man may save HUNDREDS

The man on the right is a lifeguard, too. He is a Fire Prevention Engineer. His job is to prevent fire, to save life and property. No one knows how many hundreds . . . perhaps thousands . . . of lives he helps to save, how much suffering his expert knowledge prevents.

There is a nation-wide force of these Fire Prevention experts employed by The National Board of Fire Underwriters, the great public-service organization maintained by 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies. Their work has helped to make hundreds of communities safer against the danger of conflagration. In co-operation with local officials, these experts study the water supply (its sources, reservoirs, flow pressure, size of water mains, position of hydrants, etc.), test fire alarm systems, engines and fire-fighting equipment, report existing fire dangers in business and manufacturing sections and in hazardous industries.

This and similar safety services are "plus" values that do not appear in your fire insurance policy. But because of them, your family is safer, your property is safer . . . and your fire insurance costs you less. Steadily, for many years, capital stock fire insurance companies have thus been able to lower their average rates . . . 40% since 1905.

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, car and other property the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY INSURANCE Standard protection

*CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

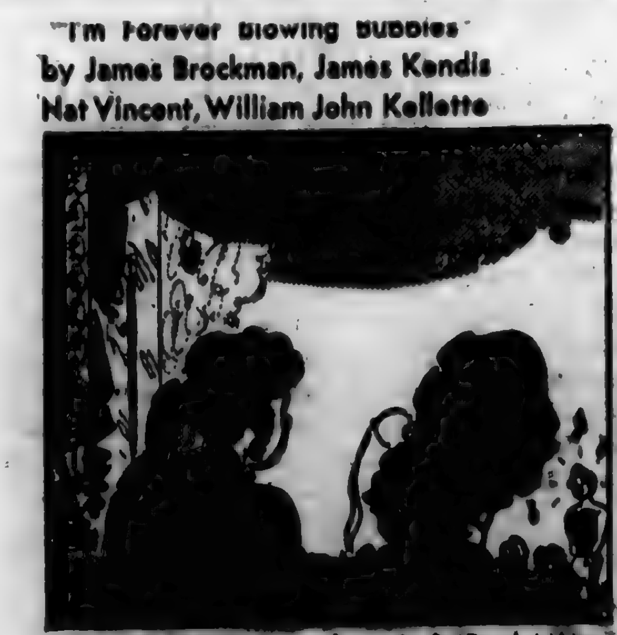
BIRTH OF A SONG

From ASCAP Files
by Joseph R. Fliesler and Paul Carr

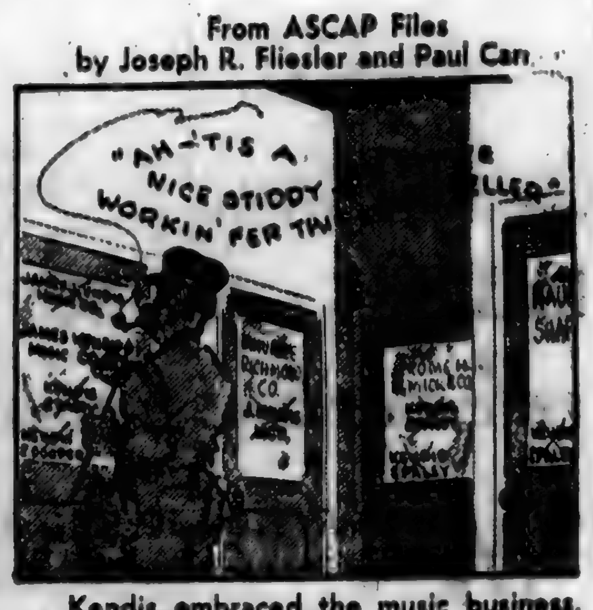


JAMES KENDIS was born in St. Paul, Minn., moved to Philadelphia as a child, and at thirteen had left school to go to work. Every time he went to the theatre, he remembered the popular songs.

He sang the songs for the boys on the corner, but the boys discovered that Jimmy was substituting his own lyrics, which gave him an idea: he would write his own songs!

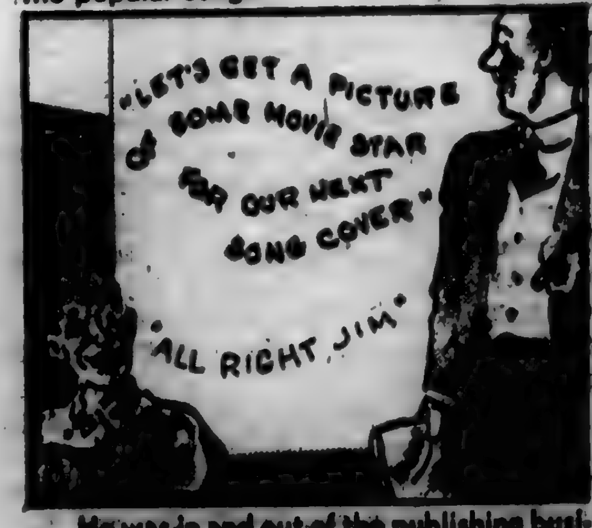
(Music Features & Photo Syndicate, Reg. N. Y.)
"NOW— ALL TOGETHER BOYS"
NEW YORK

By the time he was sixteen, he had written fifty songs, not one of which he sold. He went to N. Y. to work for "The World." The following year he sold his first song.



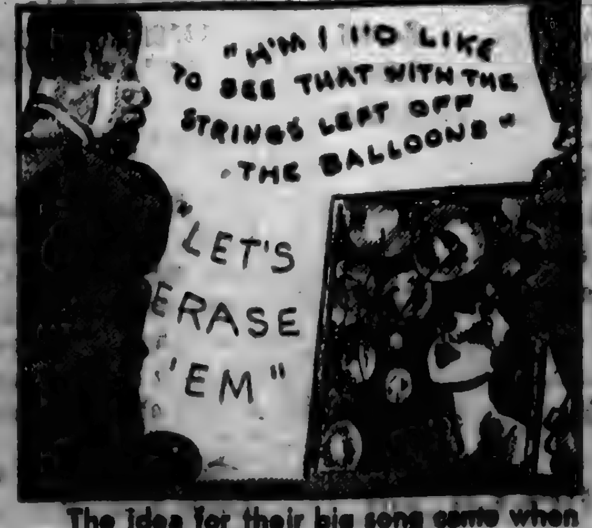
"AH—'TIS A NICE STIDDY WORKIN' FER TH"

Kendis embraced the music business, and despite his ups and downs, has remained with his chosen profession through the years, as a writer and as a publisher.



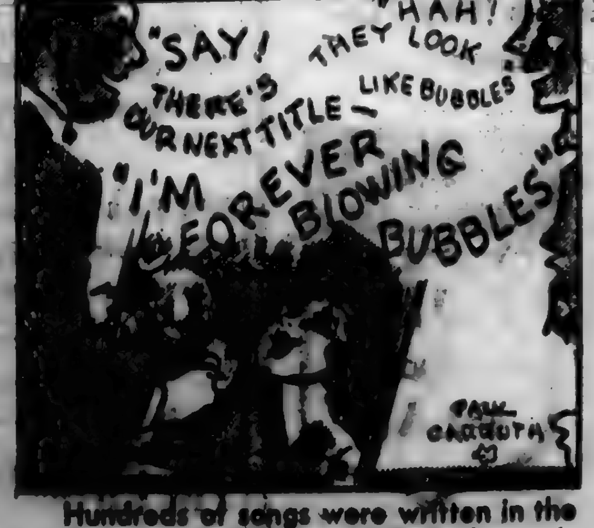
"LET'S GET A PICTURE OF SOME MOVIE STAR FOR OUR NEXT SONG COVER"
"ALL RIGHT JIM"

He was in and out of the publishing business often. In 1919, he was collaborating with James Brockman on some new songs. They were looking for a new idea.



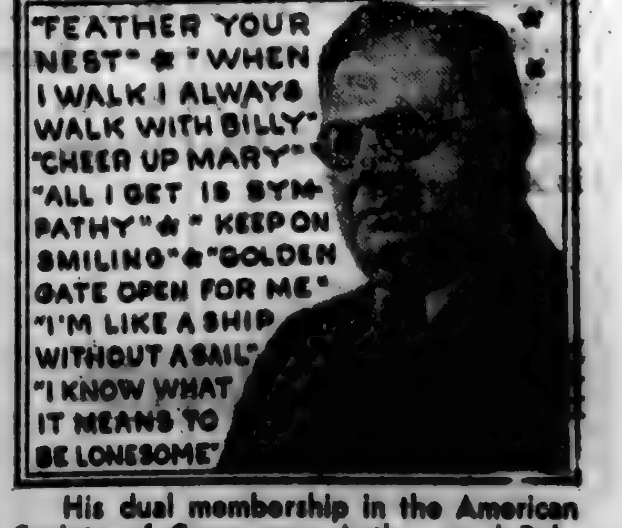
"H'M I'D LIKE TO SEE THAT WITH THE STRINGS LEFT OFF THE BALLOONS"
"LET'S ERASE 'EM"

The idea for their big song came when they sent for a picture of a movie star to be used as a cover for another song. They were quick to act on the inspiration.



"SAY! THERE'S OUR NEXT TITLE— 'I'M FOREVER BLOWING BUBBLES'"
"HAH! THEY LOOK LIKE BUBBLES"
PAUL CARRUTH

Hundreds of songs were written in the nearly forty years of Kendis' life in the music business, and there is a steady revival of interest in many of his earlier works.



"FEATHER YOUR NEST" ★ "WHEN I WALK I ALWAYS WALK WITH BILLY" "CHEER UP MARY" "ALL I GET IS SYMPATHY" ★ "KEEP ON SMILING" ★ "GOLDEN GATE OPEN FOR ME" "I'M LIKE A SHIP WITHOUT A SAIL" "I KNOW WHAT IT MEANS TO BE LONESOME"

His dual membership in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers keeps his works, and the works of others published by him, fully protected.

DROWNING TRAGEDY IN ST. JOE RIVER

DeKalb County's first drowning tragedy for several years occurred Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock, when Harold Sordelet, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sordelet, of seven miles north of Fort Wayne, died while wading in the St. Joe River at Dill's grove, one mile south of St. Joe. The youth stepped off a sand bar into about eight feet of water.

Funeral services for the boy were held at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning at his parents' home and at 9 o'clock at St. Vincent's Catholic Church in Allen County. Rev. Charles Keyser officiated and interment followed in the church cemetery.

After Harold was in danger in the deep water, a brother, Roy, 14, made a vain attempt to save his life. Neither boy was able to swim. Their father, who was sitting with other members of the family on the shore watching the two boys play on the sand bar, shouted for help when he saw his son sink, and he was himself in danger as he brought Roy to the shore. Roy jumped off the bar at once when he saw his brother sinking.

The St. Joe fire department was summoned immediately as well as a Spencerville physician. DuWayne Kinsey, W. L. Hurni and Albert Moore raised the body from the water and was removed to the Kinsey funeral home awaiting the family undertaker. Firemen applied artificial respiration for a long time but efforts were in vain. Harold's body was in the river over an hour when a St. Joe River when a fireman, Wayne Storer, stumbled upon it while wading shoulder-deep in the river.

John R. Clark, of Auburn, DeKalb County Coroner, investigated the tragedy.

The boy was a member of the Sons of the Legion Band in Fort Wayne.

Harold is survived by his parents; four brothers, Roy, Gene, Russell, and Richard Sordelet, all at home; and the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sordelet, of R. R. 2, Fort Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roy, of R. R. 1, Fort Wayne.

LOCAL VALEDICTORIAL WINS READER'S DIGEST AWARD

Leslie Wilbern, Principal of Concord Township High School, announced today that the coveted Reader's Digest Award for Scholastic Achievement has been won by the valedictorian of the class of 1939, James Maxwell, this city.

He will receive an engrossed certificate in a few days.

The Reader's Digest confers this annual award as encouragement to young men and women throughout the nation who, by their scholastic achievement, give promise of growing into leadership in their communities.

The awards go to valedictorians of graduating classes each year and were established in response both to the increasing interest among students in the most significant articles which appear in current magazines and to the belief of educators that vital contact with the living, quickening thought of our day is essential both before and after graduation.

The fact that one of our pupils has been chosen to receive The Reader's Digest award is a distinct tribute to the high standards of our schools and to the modern methods of this community's education.

GILT -off the DOME

— BY —

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If members of Congress from Indiana had the responsibility of selecting the Republican presidential nominee for 1940, their choice undoubtedly would be Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg, of Michigan.

This is true despite the fact that various polls taken throughout the country still show Thomas E. Dewey, New York racket-buster, in the lead over all others who have been mentioned as possible White House material.

Indiana Republicans consider the nationally-experienced Michigan Senator the best-qualified candidate in the field. In suggesting him as the most likely nominee, they point out that he has demonstrated his ability in the Senate and has taken a position on all important issues likely to develop in the next campaign.

They realize that Dewey, in the popular sense, has more strength among the voters than Vandenburg. But they also know that among party leaders, who actually do the nominating, Vandenberg is the favorite.

WHAT INDIANA Republicans really would like to see is a ticket pairing Vandenberg for President and Dewey for Vice-President. They believe that this combination would be unbeatable. The New York prosecutor would supply the popular appeal and give representation to the East, and the Michigan Senator would provide the necessary experience and qualifications and represent the Midwest.

With Vandenberg pre-pledged to one term in the White House, they point out Dewey could be groomed to succeed him in 1944 when, with four years of national experience under his belt, he would be highly qualified to take over.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, whom rumor says is harboring third-term ambitions, is quite aware of the rapidly-growing Vandenberg sentiment, although he pretends not to take is seriously. Best illustration of this is the story that popped up following the recent visit of British Royalty. The President, according to the story, introduced Vandenberg to King George at the White House reception.

"And this," F. D. R. is reported to have said, with a smile cocked on the side of his mouth, "is Senator Arthur Vandenburg, the fellow who thinks he's going to succeed me in the White House. Haw, haw, haw!"

The word "thinks" was spoken in the most thorough italics. There is no record of what Vandenberg said.

CLEAN-UP: Threatened investigation of the WPA in Indiana has resulted in a widespread "clean-up" of that agency in various parts of the state, according to reports which have reached Capitol Hill. Yielding to demands of Republican Congressmen, and fearing a possible probe, politicians and relatives of officials have been dismissed from the rolls in many cities. Pressure is still being brought to bear on the House investigating committee to look into the Indiana situation, but present indications are that they will ignore it.

SIDELIGHTS: Rep. George W. Gillie, who has been looking forward to spending a lot of time on his farm near Fort Wayne this Summer, is dismayed by rumors that Congress may not adjourn until September. He hasn't given up hope, however, for he recently wired a group of friends in the district: "I'll see you all when the corn grows tall." His interest in the problems of agriculture is personal as well as political. . . Two prominent Indiana Congressmen, one a Republican and the other a Democrat, Joined in the debate over the WPA appropriation bill. Rep. Charles Halleck, dean of the Republican delegation, pointed out that the relief question is not a partisan issue but declared "there is a deep division between those who contend for an honest and efficient system of administration and those who undertake to defend what the record reveals in the way of corruption, waste, extravagance, political manipulation and irregular waste of relief moneys." Rep. Louis Ludlow, veteran Democrat, spoke immediately after Halleck, saying: "Springing as I do from Scotch ancestry, no one could possibly abhor reckless spending more than I do." Later on he dramatically exclaimed: "In my home city, Indianapolis, old people are picking stale bread out of garbage cans to keep body and soul together." Ludlow, who is suspected by his colleagues of being a Republican at heart ,is one of the most effective speakers in Congress.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Lest we forget, it may be well to note that at this season of the year the Treasury runs its eye over those old war debts. So far, they have been paid to the extent of less than a dollar for each ten thousand dollars, which is not exactly what might be called a good clean up. Finland, as usual, placed a full payment on the line. Hungary managed to raise about ten thousand dollars. Yugoslavia, Esthonia, Italy, Latvia, Belgium, Lithuania, and Poland were sorry, but could do nothing, and will see about it later. As to the rest, with one exception, the debtor nations did not bother greatly about the time of reckoning, and the day passed in the customary carefree manner.

Great Britain constituted the exception mentioned. She too presented her apologies, but no cash. Let's forget that though, for the time being at least. Many had a lot of fun, coupled with perspiration and weary limbs, out of taking a look at the King and Queen, and those who were not spectators could be interested readers. Good luck to George and Elizabeth anyhow. Perhaps before the next trip to the U. S. A., someone will think of the debts and come forward with a well filled purse before the lines are cast off for the voyage to America.

Having acted as the perfect host to British royalty, and kept himself with good taste in the background, the President has settled down again to real work. It is reported that he is considering a new outlay in the interest of presperity, to the extent of two billion. It is expected that the ventures will be of such nature that they will be able to repay with the passage of the years. The railroads could use half a billion for equipment and improvement during the next few months. Tenant farmers of responsibility are to be set on their feet by means of loans. Toll roads and toll bridges would furnish needed accommodations and should be able to make substantial curtails. There is room for clinics and hospitals, especially in rural regions.

The spending project may reach Congress this session, but that it will do so is by no means certain, since there is much to be considered before it can be placed in the hands of the law makers, who still hope to be able to shake the dust of the capitol city from their shoes by the middle of July. The matters to be cleared up before adjournment include tax legislation, social security, relief and neutrality. The greatest of these, as a bar to an early shut-down, is neutrality, the Administration program along with that line being something that is certain to raise much debate and no little opposition. The House feels that it can close its doors in thirty days. The Senate is not in a position to give a like assurance.

With kings, queens, presidents and statesmen so much in evidence, to say nothing of the objectionable dictators and prospective war makers, those of the past and not among the classes specified, are likely to be forgotten. It was entirely proper and in order for Washington to hold a somewhat elaborate musical festival a few days ago in honor of John Philip Sousa. By the million, the tired feet of soldiers have marched toward victory or everlasting rest, to the sound of his stirring tunes. The circus, the county fair and the parade of any sort would fall flat without the Washington Post March, even though many hearers did not know it by title. The composer has perished but his work is likely to live on for a long time. People remember such names as Wagner and Mozart but in most instances they do not mean a great deal. Mr. Sousa will survive in his music, which is a far kindlier fate than to exist in name only.

INDUSTRY IS PLAYING A BIG PART EVERY YEAR AT THE INDIANA STATE FAIR

For the past few years industry in the state of Indiana has been playing a big part at the Indiana State Fair. The Machinery Field, one of the largest upon any state fair grounds, has for the past few years been completely taken up and the Manufacturers' Building filled to capacity.

This year again, the space in both the Manufacturers' Building and the Machinery Field is being rapidly sold. The exhibitors state that there is no place that they can reach as many people as they can at the Fair where last year 48,000 people paid their way in to see the exhibits and the Fair.

This year the Indiana State Fair will be held from September 1st to 8th and the above department will be in charge of E. Curtis White, R. R. 8, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Hess, of Painesville, Ohio, called on Mrs. Loretta Hull last Wednesday.

Running Time: 60 Minutes.
Story by: Henri Samuels.
Director: Bernard B. Ray.
Cast: Richard Talmadge, Luana Walters, Richard Cramer, Bob Walker, Frank Crane, Earle Dwire, John Ince, George Chesebro, Edward Cassidy.

The fascinating life of the city room that is always colored with romance in the eyes of the general public, is brought to the screen in THE SPEED REPORTER.

The supporting cast is excellent and the story is a thrilling narrative of modern news gathering in an average big city. Luana Walters as a society editor who is drawn into the police news, plays an excellent role.

The story tells of a reform league organized by the crooked element in a great city as a cover-up for their own activities. Talmadge, as the ferret of the newspaper clan, gives an amazing interpretation of the character.

His love for the society editor provides a charming thread of romance that runs through the action as he risks his life in the daily talk of covering the news. The newspaper atmosphere is maintained throughout the story.

THE SPEED REPORTER is a decidedly good picture, presenting a subject in which the public has always found the elements of romance and adventure.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

Receipts were light in all departments except Veals this week with prices mostly above last week. Hogs responded to prophesied of higher prices and weights from 160 to 225 sold from $6.10 to $6.25. There were not enough heavy hogs to really make a market but odd lots brought around $5.00. Fat sows $4.50 to $4.75. Boars mostly $2.00. Feeding shoats are selling actively at about steady prices.

Veals were the high spot in this week's sale making a top price of $9.60, which was $1.10 above the highest competitive market. This top was paid on a liberal sort. Nine seemed to be the starting price on any fat calf. Spring lambs $9.00. Slaughter ewes $2.00 to $2.50. In the cattle department heifers were $6.00 to $7. Fat cows $5.00 to $6.50. Milk cows $40.00 to $52.00 per head.

The Safety Man

Some people feel that because they have the right of way at an intersection they have a certain measure of safety.

Strict adherence to the right of way rule is sometimes very foolish.

The interpretation of the right of way rule is, generally speaking, that the vehicle arriving first at an ordinary unprotected intersection shall have the right to cross first, but that when two vehicles reach the crossing at the same time, the one on the left should give way to the one on the right. Most drivers know and observe this rule. Many abuse this privilege. They assume that the other driver will stop and let them pass.

Be careful lest you become a "statistic."

It's Smart to Drive Carefully.

It is the transmission that burns the midnight old these days.

From forecasts for Summer clothes, it looks as though women are carrying the practice of economy a bit too far.

Miss Myrtle Sellon of Quincy, Mich., is here visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Strouse, and family, and will remain for several weeks.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1939 NUMBER 27

PASTOR'S DAUGHTER AND INDIANA MINISTER ARE WED IN CANDLELIGHT SERVICE

(Alliance Review)

Miss Ruth Kathryn Myers, daughter of Rev. S. D. Myers, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church, promised to love and to honor Rev. Frank Stevenson, of Spencerville, Ind., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stevenson, of Woodburn, Ind., when they were united in marriage at a candlelight ceremony Sunday evening in the St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Alliance, Ohio. The bride's father read the single-ring ceremony. The old custom of open church was observed.

Organ music was played by Miss Esther Hillgreen before the ceremony. It included "Love Came Calling" by Bainbridge, "Berceuse" from "Jocelyn" by Godard and "I Love Thee" by Greig. Mrs. Rose Boyer sang "At Dawning" by Cadman and DeKoven's "O Promise Me." Before the processional the five-branch candelabras on the altar were lighted by Luther Mehl.

The processional was "Loengrin" by Wagner and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was the recessional. During the exchange of vows "I Love You Truly" was played softly. The altar was decorated with white lilies and the five-branch candelabras. The chancel was decorated with palms and ferns and the white kneeling bench. A bouquet of pink roses graced the organ.

AttractivelyGowned

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Paul L. Myers, wore a white gown with a fitted bodice of lace and a full tulle skirt. Her veil was an off-the-face finger tip of tulle trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses with a shower of white satin ribbons.

MRS. FRANK STEVENSON

Miss Dorothy Myers attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a peach embroidered chiffon gown and a heart-shaped hat of blue tulle. Her arm bouquet was of yellow rose buds with blue forget-me-nots.

The flower girl, little Carol Stevenson, niece of the groom from Antwerp, Ohio, wore a dress of yellow organdy and blue ribbons. She carried a basket of mixed flowers with green fernery.

Supports Brother

Walter Stevenson Jr., of Woodburn, Ind., attended his brother as best man. Ushers were Karl Fiegenschuh, Jr., Tom Mehl, Austin Sheatsley and Chas. Sinkovitz.

The bride's sister, Lucile, was dressed in dusty rose of silk mousseline with hyacinth blue accessories. She wore a corsage of white gardenias with blue forget-me-nots. Miss Helen Myers, another sister, wore a two-piece dress of navy blue romaine with pink accessories. She wore a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds and white baby's breath.

The groom's mother was dressed in navy polka dot and wore a corsage of gardenias.

Parsonage Reception

A reception for immediate relatives was held at the parsonage, 830 South Haines Avenue, following the wedding ceremony. The tea table was decorated with a centerpiece of pink and white roses flanked by tall rose tapers. A two-tier wedding cake topped with wedding bells and doves was on the table. The bride cut the first piece. The house was decorated with garden flowers. During the reception the many wedding gifts were on display. Misses Bernice Ritzman, Mary Ellen Mehl and Freida Lucas served.

Among the guests were Miss Freida Mahler, aunt of the bride, of Nappanee, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Rollo Bowsher and family from Lima, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stevenson and family, of Woodburn, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson and daughter, of Antwerp, O.; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Perrott, of Springfield, O.; Mrs. Earl Tom, of Milford, Ind., and Miss Kathryn Knobel and Mr. Karl Knobel, of Nappanee, Indiana.

The young couple left for a wedding trip through the Smoky Mountains. For traveling, the bride chose a navy blue polka dot chiffon dress with a sugar jacket and wore harmonizing accessories in white and blue.

Mrs. Stevenson, a graduate of Central High School of Findlay, Ohio, took her nurses training at the City Hospital of Akron. She attended Akron University and received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Wittenberg College, Springfield, O. She has held the position of superintendent of nurses at the Children's Hospital, Columbus, O.

Reverend Stevenson is a graduate of the Woodburn, Ind., High School. He was graduated from Wittenberg College and Hamma Divinity Seminary of Springfield. At the present time he is pastor of the Lutheran Church at Spencerville, St. Joe and Butler, Ind.

Since the announcement of her engagement the bride has been complimented at parties given by Mrs. S. J. Perrott, of Springfield, O., the staff of nurses and doctors at the hospital in Columbus and by the Nurses Educational Section of Columbus.

After July 8, the couple will be at home in their newly decorated home in Spencerville.

CHAIRMAN WARD JACKMAN ATTACKS PROPAGANDA

Ward Jackman, Presidnt of the DeKalb County Welfare Board, wishes to call the attention of the public to a campaign of publicity launched by The State Welfare Board in an effort to create public sentiment in favor of hiring more investigators for the local welfare office. The publicity in the form of a review of cases, published at the rate of two or three per week, in which a reinvestigation would have saved the tax payers money. An intelligent analysis of the facts will show just the opposite to be the case. The last state legislature as part of an economy program, reduced the amount of state funds available for welfare work. Under this program DeKalb County is reimbursed to the extent of one half of the salaries of the present office force thru state and federal funds but if additional investigators are hired the entire expense must be bourne by local taxation without state and federal aid. In addition the State Welfare Board has raised the amounts required for several items of relief for recipients so that each case reinvestigated must receive more than was granted under the rules in force a year ago. The only reinvestigated cases in which a saving to tax payers is possible are cases in which the recipient has become ineligible for relief owing to a private income or loss of residence, both of which are very rare. Those who have read the articles published will notice that the cases reviewed as showing a saving of money to tax payers are cases dropped because the recipients have become ineligible. Mr. Jackman states that it is his belief that not more than two cases have been lowered in this county after having been reinvestigated and that these were found to be ineligible while in all other cases reinvestigated recently it was necessary to continue relief payments in the same amount or to grant a larger sum, owing to the rules of The State Welfare Board.

The local Welfare Board is making an honest effort to keep the expense of administration as low as possible so that more money will be available for those needing relief. It is the desire of the local board to grant sufficient aid to all eligible persons but it is their policy to consider the tax payer also and guard him against exploitation by those who would build a political machine through public welfare. There must be no politics in DeKalb County Relief.

Story: John T. Neville
Director: Lynn Shores
Cast: Tom Keene, Joan Barclay, Capt. E. H. Calvert, Frank Melton, William Royle, Walter Long, Allen Greer, William Cromwell, Harve Foster, Ann Hovey, John Lester Johnson, Etta McDaniel, James Bush.

GLORY TRAIL sticks to history of the Reconstruction period and makes it vigorous and heroic outdoor drama. It tells of the pioneer days of the building of the West, the hardships and struggles of those early settlers and the battles with the Indians.

Historically the story breaks some fresh ground. It is laid on the Bozeman Trail, Montana, just after the close of the Civil War, when bands of soldiers from both sides were striking West in the country of the Sioux, looking for lands to settle. Feeling still ran high between militant sons of the North and South, but this was disappearing in the face of the common danger from the Indians, who had sworn to drive back the whites.

Tom Keene is the leader of a band of Southern soldiers that has vowed never to accept the disgrace of surrender. Their intent is to establish a new colony along the Bozeman Trail. First brought into dramatic conflict with Frank Melton, Lieutenant in command of a Yankee wagon train, Keene comes into romantic conflict, that has a comedy tinge, with Joan Barclay. Recovering an ammunition wagon stolen by raiding Indians while Melton's troops are off on a wild goose chase inspired by renegade Walter Long, romance grows for Keene and Miss Barclay. The most thrilling scene is when the Indians attack a wagon train bringing families and prospective wives of the southerners to the new settlement. Union and Confederate soldiers forget their enmity and under Keene's leadership combine to fight off the marauders. The finale is a mass marriage, in which Miss Barclay stands by Keene's side to repeat the wedding vows he reads to his followers.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Presidents, both past and in office are speaking pointedly about the Senate just now. Mr. Hoover has called upon a member of that body to retract, revise or reverse a statement respecting the relief policies of the former administration, and there the matter stands, with assurance from the Senator that at the earliest opportunity the alleged shortcomings of the period of Republican control will receive an airing. The irritation of Republican Mr. Hoover by the doings of the Senate is not more violent than that of Democratic Mr. Roosevelt. The curb on the power of the President over the value of the dollar amounted to what Sir Walter Raleigh referred to as "sharp medicine."

During the closing hours of the month of June, Congress got considerable off its chest. The Relief Bill was passed and signed, and the supplemental Army Bill followed the same course. The Neutrality Bill was passed by the House, but with some features that the White House did not approve. Consideration of the Tax Revision Bill, and many other affairs, made the last day of the fiscal year a busy one, on the Hill and in the White House.

It is stated that the R. F. C. has power to make loans to the South American republics, even though there may have been no authorizing legislation on the part of Congress. If that is true, the law makers should see to it that the barn is locked before the horse is stolen. The irght to lend federal funds abroad is too serious a matter to rest unrestrained, and without approval in the hands of single government agency. Beside, it is not wise to make enemies out of South American friends, a result which according to the proverb, will be a necessary consequence of lending them money.

Forty thousand persons saw Joe Louis get the better of Tony Galento in the fourth round, which was somewhat longer than the average prophet expected the bout to last. There seems to be a cave man instinct in most spectators and hearers which prompts them to long for the good old times when one contestant battered the other until he was down for keeps. A half century ago the promotors really gave the public something for its money. On July 8, 1889, John L. Sullivan disposed of Jake Kilrain only after 75 rounds, in the last bare knuckle set-to. Conforming to present day standards, one must denounce it as a brutalising and degrading exhibition; yet who would tear up a ringside ticket if he could be carried back to 1889? Anyhow, it must be admitted that the old boys of the prize ring could dish out plenty of punishment, and expected to take as much in return.

For many decades, Germany sang with great vociferation, a patriotic song about the Watch on the Rhine. Poland is not doing much singing, but seems to be acting, on the theory that she too has a boundary watch to keep, that watch being along the shores of the Baltic Ocean. In this instance, there is no sign of a back-down on the part of the smaller power, and the situation is regarded as more tense than any which has preceded it. Through the centuries, Poland has been trimmed and divided to suit the notions of stronger governments, and was partially reassembled only after the World War. For a proud race, the Poles have had to put up with a great deal. Considering that they are fighters of no mean merit, there is gorund for anxiety respecting the peace of Europe. It is alleged across the sea that President Roosevelt may tender his good offices. Along that line, the futile efforts of Mr. Wilson furnish ground for discouraging comment. The League of Nations went up like a rocket and came down like a stick. Should Mr. Roosevelt see fit to take a friendly hand, it is to be hoped that like his predecessor, he will not be forced to learn the bitter lesson which very often is to be derived from the kindly but unprofitable business of casting pearls before swine.

THE OATS BUG PEST

For several weeks many of our readers have been bothered with oats bugs—some thinking them to be lice, because they were so small.

J. J. Davis, head of the entomology department at Purdue, explained at great length about the annoying little insects, stating that there are two varieties—onion and gladiola—and that they mature about this time of the year and cause blasting of the heads of oats.

Mr. Davis stated that they have never been considered as a serious threat to oats or to other small grain crops on which they feed.

"Oats Bugs," as they are commonly known, are a peculiar sucking insect. They first blast the small grain then suck the blasted portion until the cells of the grain collapse.

These bugs seem to make their appearance about this time every year and they are very able and willing to make themselves entirely too familiar with human beings. Though the pests can barely be seen with the naked eye they can be felt in a large and tantilizing way and in the most unwelcome places.

Farmers and laborers as well as office workers have been complaining for several weeks about how annoying they are.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The race is not to the swift, but to those that endure to the end. On the last day of June, it looked as though the President had been outdistanced in the contest for the control of the value of the dollar, but the race was by no means finished. The Senate, by a vote of 48 to 39, has approved the money legislation, substantially in the form that Mr. Roosevelt desired. An opinion having been rendered by the Attorney General and by the legal end of the Treasury Department, the Adminstration determined to press the matter to a vote, notwithstanding the fact that the White House power over the dollar lapsed, and remained for four days in the place that was supposed to be its tomb. Republicans, and Democrats who are not in sympathy with what amounts virtually to a victory for the silver wing, hold that the courts will not sustain the Senate action, but at the same time admit that at present they do not know just how the question can be brought before the bench for decision.

The plans of the Administration in regard to neutrality await action at the will of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that body having laid the matter on the shelf for the fourth time hand running. Senator Pittman is quoted as saying that this particular piece of business will be disposed of before Congress packs its trunks, and Majority Leader Barkley seems to be of the same mind, although he is not in a position to state just what might be expected as to details. The House bill departs somewhat from the original draft. It will however, serve as a framework for discussion, and no doubt amendments will produce considerable shuttling back and forth before things are reduced to a condition in which the lawmakers will be in a position to vote yes or no.

Danzig, for a long time just another old town on the Baltic, continues to retain its place on the front page. Perhaps England has no power to keep the ancient city serene and peaceful, but she purposes, at least, to see to it that there shall be no map revision so far as Danzig is concerned. The British Parliament has extended a credit of a half-billion to her smaller European allies, and while Poland is mentioned simply as one of several, it cannot be doubted that the threat against the Polish corridor had something to do with the credit legislation. Mr. Hitler has ordered the amputation of a part of his official title. Henceforward he is to be known simply as the Leader, rather than as the Leader and Chancellor of the Realm. It is to be feared that the Fuehrer entertained no notion of abbreviating his ambitions respecting Poland. At least, Great Britain cannot discern a softening of heart in that direction.

Pro and con, the third term argument goes on apace, without assistance or obstruction from the quarter where the first and most important word is spoken. Secretary Ickes remains an out and out third termer, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson replying to Mr. Ickes in characteristically pointed language. Senator Guffey is in favor of a third term, but for some reason his endorsement did not produce enthusiasm in the group that it was intended to benefit. When the nomination was tendered to one of the Shermans, either General William T. or John, his reply was: "I will not run if nominated, or serve if elected." Mr. Coolidge did not "choose to run," a statement which was an enigma to many, though definite enough among those accustmed to New England speech. Until Mr. Roosevelt comes out with something approximating the bluntness of Mr. Sherman, there is nothing for the non-combatant to do saving to get what fun he can out of the scrimmage that is being carried on by those who are violently "fur" or violently "agin."

A Senate committee has declined to take a hand, even indirectly, in the Third Term controversy which has Washington thoroughly excited. A bill limiting the Presidential tenure to six years, has been moved along without comment, for consideration by the Senate as a whole. A similar bill, making both President and Vice President ineligible for re-election, but leaving it open for a Vice President to be nominated for the Presidency, was disapproved in committeee by a ten to two ballot.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN The Safety Man

The whole world was schocked recently at the loss of three submarines, American, English, and French. Everybody spoke about the terrible loss of life and expressed sympathy for the wives and families of the men who died under water. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent to bring those submarines to the surface, if it is possible, and to determine the cause of those terrible accidents.

While we are discussing these submarine fatalities, have you and I thought about the daily traffic toll? Ten times more persons were killed by automobiles on our highways during the days we were discussing these submarine accidents than died in the submarines. These families deserve sympathy, too.

You and I can help eliminate these accidents by driving carefully and by supporting the many safety campaigns sponsored by organizations.

IT'S SMART TO DRIVE CAREFULLY.

THE LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE

(7 reels)

Director: Charles Lamont.
Story and Screenplay by: Paul Perez, S. W. G.
Cast: Frank Coghlan, Jr. Dickie Moore, Ann Doran, Lloyd Hughes, "Corky" and others.

Mary Burke, one of the two teachers in the little red school house at Hilldale, lives in a small cottage with her two brothers: Frank, sixteen years old and Dickie, about seven years of age. Frank, now in the graduating class, is tired of school and is anxious to go to work.

The other teacher at the school is Roger Owen, an ambitious young man, who is looking forward to an appointment to teach at a near-by high school so that he can afford to marry Mary. Roger, anxious that Frank should complete his schooling is severe with the youngster and Frank, misunderstanding the motive, believes that the teacher dislikes him. Frank is scredueld to recite at the school's Easter exercise. While the children are giving their performance, Frank and one of the other boys get into an argument and they sneak out of the room to settle their difficulties in the yard. Roger breaks up the fight and Frank is blamed for it, though he is not really at fault. Roger refuses to let Frank recite his piece and Frank runs away.

Taking Corky, his dog with him, Frank boards a freight train. He encounters a group of tramps, among whom is the Professor, a well-educated man, who has fallen from grace because of drink. The Professor takes Frank to New York with him. They go to the apartment of three crooks who plan to take Frank with them to rob a bank. The professor prevents this. The attempted robbery is unsuccessful. The watchman at the bank is shot. The robbers are traced to their apartment. They escape but the professor is shot and Frank is arrested. Roger visits Frank and Frank escapes. Roger is accused of helping him and is sentenced to jail. Frank returns to the reform school when he reads about Roger. Roger is absolved from all blame. Meantime all three bank robbers are caught and they make a full confession exonerating Frank. Frank is released. Frank has learned his lesson and is now ready to apply himself to school and realizes that Mary and Roger have been right all the time. Mary and Roger are married for he wins the coveted appointment to the teaching staff at the near-by school. On graduation day Frank stands up proudly and speaks the piece that he had been prevented from reciting at the school's Easter exercises.

HIGHWAY WORK IN JUNE IS SLOWED BY WEATHER

Progress in paving and other highway construction work was delayed in June by the frequent rains with the result that only 25 miles of paving and grading was completed during the month, T. A. Dicus, chairman of the State Highway Commission, reports.

Reports filed with the Commission show that during June, 16.759 miles of high type construction and 7.71 miles of grading were completed. During the preceding month, May, 14.93 miles of high type and 19.132 miles of low type construction were finished along with 13.4 miles of grading for a total completion of 47.462 miles.

In June contracts were awarded for approximately two hundred and fifty miles of paving, surfacing and grading on the state highway system.

"OUR FLAG"

Forever May You Wave to the Free Winds of Heaven
(Written by Cora Dill Price)

Our Star Spangled Banner still floats to the breeze,
Untarnished and unstained by the foe.
We have sent forth the brave men, the pride of our land,
And they fought for our freedom and home.
Then fight if we must when our cause is just,
God forbid it's for envy or gain.
But when country and home and our freedom's the prize,
God grant us the victory to win.

CHORUS
Oh, the Star Spangled Banner, the red, white, and blue
The pride of our Nation so grand.
Fore'er may you wave to the Free Winds of Heaven
Our Emblem of Freedom and Home.

Oh, where are the foes who so vauntingly said:
You have no right on land or on sea.
They have paid for this taunt with the blood of their men,
And they now honor our Stars and Stripes.
God grant that this forever shall be
When our Flag waves o'er land and o'er the sea.
May it always be known as the Flag without stain
The Flag that ne'er suffered defeat.

CHORUS
Oh, the Star Spangled Banner, the red, white, and blue
The pride of our Nation so grand.
Fore'er may you wave to the Free Winds of Heaven
Untarnished, unstained by the foe.

We watched through the night, heard the cannon's loud roar,
We watched for the Star Spangled Banner.
We could see by the light from the rocket's bright glare
That our Stars and our Stripes were still there.
We knew while they flew our boys were still safe,
And that Country and Freedom were ours.
We prayed God for wisdom to guide us aright
And to grant us our Freedom and Home.

CHORUS

We've fought many battles for Country and Home
We have fougth for the freedom of slaves.
And we have sacrificed men, the pride of our land
That this country it's freedom might save.
God grant that this nation forever may prove
To be Loyal, Unselfish, and True,
So that every nation and in every land
They will honor the Red, White and Blue.

MELONS TO START RIPENING WITHIN TWO WEEKS

In two weeks the first of DeKalb County's melon crop and particularly the St. Joe River Valley section will be ready for the market, County Agent C. E. Baker predicted Friday. About 250 acres were put out in melons this year, an increase of over 50 acres from last year. If the marketing plan arranged by the county agent and the B. & O. Railroad company proves successful, a sharp increase in melon acreage is predicted for next year.

The first melons to ripen will be hotbed melons, which were planted the latter part of March and transplanted to the fields in late May for early sales on the Fort Wayne market. However, the greater portion of the melon crop this year will be those from direct seeding, which will be ready for table use about the middle of August.

Melon patches, nearly all of which are in the St. Joe Valley, in general have a good stand this year. A fair crop is expected.

Melon wilt, which is carried and spread by the striped cucumber beetle, is quite prevalent this year. Symptoms of this plant disease are the wilting of the entire vine or one runner of the vine. It is also revealed by rather large areas of the individual leaves turning brown and dying, this being caused by the bugs feeding directly on the leaf with infection starting at that point.

There is little melon blight in the county this season, County Agent Baker said, and most of it is more prevalent in the hotbed fields than in the seeded acreage. This disease can be controlled by a melon dust.

Lewis Washler of near Spencerville and Elwood Hart of near St. Joe, have dusting demonstration plots on their farms, and next year melon growers hope to start several more of these demonstration plots.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The word "Washington," which holds its accustomed place at the head of the column, is something of a misnomer this week, since the copy is being prepared in Vancouver, British Columbia, a young city, as cities go, having been on the map but fifty-four years. During that time, it has assembled a population of three hundred and twenty-five thousand, yet it remains a city of contrasts. One can get a moderately priced room in a ten million dollar hotel. In the foreground, from the tourist's window, can be seen the changing traffic signals that bespeak the bustle of a busy and up to date metropolis. A little more remote, but clearly visible, are the log booms, saw mills and sawdust burners of the still-continuing lumber days. Behind all, rise the eternal mountains, still crested with a portion of the winter's snow, and accessible in most instances only afoot, or by pack animal and trail. Moving in the shadow of these heights is a water-carried commerce that streams away to every port of seven seas.

There is talk here of the "depression," the ingenuity of the tax collector is in evidence, and upon the whole, the dividing line between Canada and the United States does ot seem to run between national troubles and problems that are essentially different. To those accustomed to the Washington vehicular snarl, in which fender contends with fender, and bumper smites bumper, British Columbian traffic seems mild, and driving circumspect and considerate; yet the conservative Canadian brethren are not satisfied and are in the midst of a safety-first campaign to better conditions that on our side of the boundary would be regarded as a close approach to the ideal. Vancouver is heated up over the invasion of the salmon grounds by the Japanese, a matter that has given the United States some concern, especially as to Alaskan waters, but on the whole, the American salmon trouble does no go much deeper than trying to find the can opener.

The course that Administration plans have to travel, like the course of true love, seldom runs absolutely smooth, as Presidents Republican and Democratic can testify. Mr. Roosevelt, therefore, did not find himself in an unknown predicament when the Senate foreign relations committee voted to put aside until the next session, consideration of the neutrality bill: yet it was a setback for the White House nevertheless. Congress sometimes has raised its foot with good grace, after having set it firmly down. Again, the foot has remained where it was planted in the first place, a good example of abiding by an original planting being the payment of the veterans' bonus. The President is represented as intending to go right ahead with the neutrality fight. Some of his generals would discharge the committee and battle out the issue on the open floor. With an adjournment-minded Congress on the one hand, and an Administration eagerly pressing for action and not particularly concerned about adjournment, on the other, there are side issues which, of themselves, and independent of the merits, are sufficient to give pep, to say nothing of downright bitterness, to the doings of concluding portion of the session. According to common report, Congress has earmarked enough labor of the "must" variety to satisfy even those who think that the body on Capital Hill draws its pay and gives little in return. Among the measures scheduled for consideration before closing time are extension of the powers of the Tennessee Valley Authority, limiting political activities on the part of federal employes, the lending bill and amendments to the social security act.

The Work Projects Administration is an organization which, upon the whole, has been looked upon with wide favor. If a man wants work, perhaps it is up to the government to supply it. Upon the other hand, a job, under existing conditions, is a gift horse that should not be looked too critically in the mouth. There is general disapproval of strikes on public work projects. Still stronger is the condemnation of the killing of a Minneapolis policeman during a violent demonstration against the WPA. Both Congress and the Administration are to be commended for lack of interest in fomented disorders based upon the theory that the federal government is a slave driver and a penny pinching boss.

Mrs. Elizabeth Waters Benner, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Waters, was born at Independence, Ohio, February 15, 1846, and departed this life July 9, 1939, aged 93 years, 4 months and 24 days.

October 14, 1922 Mr. and Mrs. Benner moved to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Traxler, where they lived until they each passed away. Mrs. Benner was one of the oldest readers of the Religious Telescope. She always spoke very highly of this paper and never missed reading a copy of it.

WASHLER

Curtis A. Washler was born to John and Caroline Washler May 8, 1855 in Stark County, Ohio. After a few moments of severe illness death touched his brow and called him out of this world on the afternoon of July 12, 1939 at his own home near Newville, Indiana, at the age of 84 years, 2 months and 4 days.

Early in life he moved with his parents to DeKalb County, Indiana, where he spent all his life and on May 10, 1877 he was united in marriage to Christiania S. Farver. To this union was born nine children, two of whom preceded him in death.

Mrs. Washler, who was a faithful companion and a loving mother, preceded him in death passing to her reward May 22, 1935.

Two daughters, Leuora E. and Lily L. Washler preceded him in death.

In the year of 1886 under the pastorate of Rev. Shilling, Mr. Washler gave his heart to God and joined the Newville U. B. Church where he and his faithful wife remained members until they were each called from time into eternity.

Mr. Washler's life has gone out but he will live in the hearts and lives of others. Beside the children already mentioned he leaves to mourn his going three brothers and three sisters: Eli, Alva, and Oro, of Auburn; Cora Stoop, of Auburn, Salome Burg, of Indianapolis, and Ethel Beard. Eleven grandchildren and three great grandchildren and a host of friends and neighbors.

The funeral was held from the U. B. Church at Newville, Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. P. A. Hubartt, pastor, with burial in Newville cemetery.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

Receipts were very light in all departments for this week's auction. Bidding was active, all buyers being anxious to fill their orders from the meager supply. Hogs 170 to 225, $6.75 to $7.10. Heavy hogs showed a tendency to sell above their class price. Boars $2.50 to $4.60. A very liberal supply of feeder shoats found active sales at prices slightly higher than last week. Veals: select $9.40 to $9.60. Top grade mostly $9.00. Light calves $7.75 to $8.50. There were not many young butcher cattle on sale, prices seemed about in line with last week. Butcher cows were 50 cents to $1.00 lower than a week ago. Best cows $5.60. Medium grades from $4.00 to $5.00.

Back in 1903, Charles F. Young was the speed demon who literally burned up the track at Mount Holly, New Jersey, with his single-cylinder, eight horsepower, four speed, double chain drive auto. It had a breath-taking speed of 35 miles an hour, and driver Young usually came in first.

Today some people insist on going through a busy thoroughfare, past school houses, and other dangerous locations on our highways at, not 35, but 55 and more. A car traveling 60 miles an hour, hitting a dead object, has the same force of impact it would have if it were dropped from the top of a 10-story building to the pavement.

Before you drive fast—think.

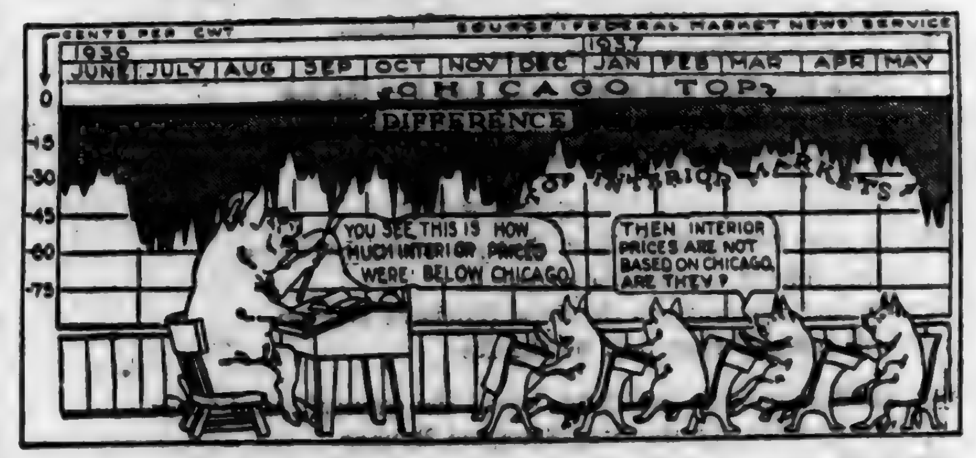
Construction on the state highway system, done under contract, provided jobs for 2,552 workers in June. This represented an increase of more than nine hundred from the number directly employed by contractors in construction work on the state highway system in May. A total of 81 road, bridge and grade separation construction projects were in operation in June, representing work in most of the counties of the state. Included were 54 road and 27 bridge projects.

A judgment of $15,931.44 was entered for the plaintiff Saturday in the DeKalb Circuit Court in the friendly suits of Oleus K. Shull against Concord Township. The sum represents township warrants issued during the last several years but not redeemed because of shortage of funds in the township treasury. Based upon the judgment, the township will now offer bonds at a lower rate of interest than the warrants provided. Husselman & Husselman are the plaintiff's attorneys.

"Spread" Between Chicago and Interior Markets Fluctuates Daily



The little pigs pictured above are learning that the "Spread" or "Difference" between prices paid for hogs at the Chicago central market and at interior markets in Southern Minnesota and Iowa is not a fixed amount determined by freight rates and other marketing costs. For, if this were true, the interior price line (shown at the bottom of the shaded area), would be a straight line.

As the chart shows, the difference between Chicago top and average interior top prices fluctuates from day to day, and, during the twelve months' period shown, has varied between the two extremes of 10 cents to 65 cents per cwt. below the Chicago market.

In this connection, Misc. Publication 222, "The Direct Marketing of Hogs," published by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, states: "There is no fixed relationship between prices at any market and prices at other public markets or at interior points. Data shows that a rise or a decline in hog prices is as likely to appear first at interior markets as at public markets. Although there is a close relationship between prices quoted at some markets and prices at other markets, no one market actually determines the price for hogs sold at other markets in this area. The equilibrium of the composite supply and composite demand at all markets marks the level of hog prices."

Data shown in the chart was furnished by the Federal Market News Service of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, and is based on top hog prices paid at Chicago and the average top hog prices paid at interior packing houses and concentration points in Iowa and Southern Minnesota for 220 to 250 pound butcher hogs.

JOB INSURANCE BENEFIT APPLICATIONS

The number of job insurance benefit applications filed in Indiana has passed the 300,000 mark, it was announced today.

Since job insurance became effective in Indiana 16 months ago, some 267,000 individuals have filed claims, and of that number 33,000 have filed a second claim. In the Auburn district 110 of the 1,680 claims filed to date have been repeaters. The number of workers in insured employment has been around 660,000 in the state and 5,125 in this district, which covers Steuben, DeKalb and Noble Counties.

Since the first of the year an increasing proportion of the new claims has been entered by persons who had filed applications in an earlier period of total or partial employment, A. Steinkamp, local job insurance manager, pointed out. In June 8,500 of the 13,660 applications filed in the state and 10 of 42 filed in this district were repeaters.

Benefits paid since April 1938 have exceeded $122,000.00 in this district and $23,000,000 in the state, he added.

SUNDAY NIGHT FIRE AT GROVER CURIE HOME

Sunday evening about 10:30 fire broke out at the Grover Curie home on Widney Avenue, and the entire town was aroused by the ringing of the fire bell. When the fire department arrived the house was filled with smoke to such an extent that firemen had to use masks in order to enter the basement, where the fire was thought to be.

When the cellar window was opened and they started to throw a stream of chemicals into the fire, a severe shock was received by Wilbur Yeiser, and the light fuse was blown. The siding continued to smoke for a long time because of the tight slate roof.

Mr. and Mrs. Curie were sitting on the front porch, and when they detected smoke, the house was pretty well filled. Grover tried to get out some clothing while Mrs. Curie spread the alarm of fire. Because of the ill health of Mr. Curie, the ordeal was almost too much for him, effecting his heart.

FAMILY REUNIONS

(Mrs. Ethel Shilling)

Family Reunions, come once a year,
Meet all our Aunties and Uncles so dear,
Cousins and friends, We're all glad to see,
Friendship and hand shakes again we shall clasp!
Family Reunions, Pride of our hearts,
Chatting and laughing, of days long ago;
Gone are those days when our life was young,
Family Reunions, bring back Memories!
Family Reunions, bring back Memories.

Back to those days, of long ago,
Where we were taught the Golden Rule,
Down by the brook, where bare-foot boys played,
Gone are those days, but the memories still stay!
Back to those school-days, of long ago,
Those are the times we all loved so dear;
Now we have cares of life's busy throng,
Gone are those days but the memories still stay!
Gone are those days, but the memories still stay.

Family Reunions, dear to our hearts,
We are all glad to see one and all again,
Some have passed on, and others have come,
That is our mission of life in this world.
Family Reunions, pride of our hearts,
We hope to see, you all next year again;
May God take care, of us one and all,
Family Reunions, the pride of our hearts!
Family Reunions, the pride of our hearts.

P. S.— This may be used and sung with the popular song, "Beautiful Dreamer," and you have the permission of the author to use it if you care to.

CAREY—TUSTISON

(Defiance Crescent-News)

In a ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Miss Mary Carey, daughter of S. H. Carey, of Frankfort, Ind., and granddaughter of Mrs. S. H. Carey, became the bride of Keith H. Tustison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee O. Tustison.

Radiance from the many lighted candles in the two seven-branch candelabra, and palms and baskets of pink gladioli, blue delphinium and daisies formed the beautiful setting for the single ring service at which Dr. W. A. Rex, the pastor, officiated.

During the nuptial music, provided by Mrs. Arthur Norden, organist, Mrs. R. H. Waldron, soloist, sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride was charming in a floor length model of London mist marquisette fashioned with high neckline, shirred bodice, short puff sleeves and a bouffant skirt. Blue accessories with a large horsehair braid picture hat and an arm bouquet of pink briar cliff and sweetheart roses, blue delphinium and daisies formed a pleasing contrast to her blue outfit.

Mr. Tustiosn was attended by John Moses as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Kettering Golf Club to the briday party and about fifty guests, including relatives and members of the immediate families.

The bridal table was beautifully decorated with a three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom as the center-piece flanked with bowls of roses, blue corn flowers and daisies.

In two weeks the couple will be at home at 410 Fort Street.

The bride, who has taught the past two years in Defiance high school, is a graduate of Defiance high school and Defiance College, where she is affiliated with Gamma Omega Kappa sorority. She also is a member of Alpha Zeta Beta, national sorority.

WILLIS IS THE POPULAR CHOICE FOR SENATOR

Foster W. Riddick, editor of the Columbia City Commercial Mail, summed up the Willis situation in an interesting editorial last week as follows:

"There should be no doubt about who should be the Republican nominee for United States Senator on the 1940 ticket. Raymond E. Willis, it is felt by 90 per cent of the voters of the state, was defrauded out of the place by election corruption—and came within a hair's breadth of securing election in spite of the frauds. Not only Republican voters but Democrats as well, are expressing themselves in conversation, and saying that Ray Willis not only deserves to represent the state in the Senate but has secured such a wide acquaintance during the past campaign that he is the logical candidate."

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

At this writing, which indicates a definite possibility that Congress may be able to wind up its business and go home by the end of July— or August 5th at the latest—the usual last spurt has produced some surprisingly effective legislation: While it is still too early to crow (said legislation being yet in the embryonic class) the unexpected resistance to the Administration's spending-lending measure and passage of the Hatch bill to curb U. S. officials in politics has gone far to redeem Congress in the eyes of a public grown weary with its petulance, senseless bickering, and sheer dalliance.

The House staged one stormy session lasting until 1 o'clock in the morning—almost a record for the House, which generally leaves such deadlocks to the Senate end of the Capitol—and cut the heart out of the political ambitions of Federal officials and employes. The entire Republican membership, allying itself with sufficient Democrats, rode roughshod over all opposition and came off victorious with one of the most vital measures of the session; the so-called Hatch-Dempsey bill forbids all employes in the executive departments—including postmasters, marshals, and United States attorneys—from taking active part in political management, or political campaigns. Only the President, Vice President, Cabinet officers, and top-ranking administrative chiefs, would be exempted. It would, if it becomes law, awake endless repercussions along the whole political front, depriving the Administration of direct control of the 1940 Democratic convention, forbidding the solicitation of campaign contributions from all persons who are paid from relief funds, and protecting relief workers from political threat. Small wonder that the Democratic National Committee is pretty sick about the prospect!

Having been bothered long enough with the neutrality Jonah, who has been a trouble-making passenger for some time aboard the good ship Congress, the officers of that vessel finally threw him bodily over the rail, so far as action at this session is concerned. Republican and Democratic leaders in the Senate made it plain to the White House that neutrality would have to rest for the time being: and so it was, although the Administration did not accept the ruling with the best of grace, and states that the issue will be taken to the people.

There is a sound reason why the Administration may well wish to have the neutrality matter settled at the earliest possible date. The country seems to be definitely in favor of keeping out of the European war mess. If neutrality can be disposed of somehow in the near future, it may not be an issue of 1940. As a campaign issue, neutrality may be a powder mine that can blow to pieces any candidate, and any policy.

By way of summary, the law now provides a ban against the shipment of munitions to belligerents. The Department of State wants a system under which any nation having the ready cash could purchase freely here. That seems fair to all, but it is pointed out, that, England and her allies alone would profit, since the English navy, could control the seas. Anyone would be free to buy, but not many could carry home the purchases.

And now for another picture: the National Youth Administration announces that its employment service found positions in industry in June for 10,996 young people—a placement 105 per cent greater than in June last year. And our always dependable Postmaster General informs us that postal revenue for the year reached a record high of $745,098,350, exceeding the previous year by $17,000,000....From the National Munitions Control Board comes a June report that American armament exports for the year are approaching a total valuation of $150,000,000; licenses totalled $72,112,319; of deliveries, France has been able to obtain only 25 per cent of the war planes she ordered, but Great Britain has had delivery on virtually all her orders placed so far........

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Today I saw a mother deliberately pull her young daughter, about seven or eight years old, and start across the street in the middle of the block.

How will sefety people ever get to these parents to make them realize that this is a very dangerous practice? How can we expect the coming generation to comply with safety regulations and live out a full life?

Communities throughout the country are making a special drive to educate pedestrians. Pedestrians are involved in approximately 40 per cent of all automobile fatalities. Statistics show that in more than two thirds of the fatal pedestrian accidents in 1938, the pedestrian was walking in an unsafe manner, walking across highways, between intersections, and jaywalking at intersections.

You parents who read this, please teach your children to walk and drive carefully; and the best way to do this is to set the exampel yourselves.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1939 NUMBER 31

QUAIL, PHEASANT LIBERATIONS WILL SET STATE RECORD

Liberations of quail and pheasants in Indiana during the present fiscal year will establish a new record for the state, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, predicted today.

It is anticipated that more than 125,000 game birds will be liberated during the twelve-month period through the joint action of the Division of Fish and Game and the hundreds of local conservation clubs. At the present time 28,000 pheasants are being released in the central and northern counties, the first distribution of birds propagated at the state game farms this year.

Conservation clubs over the state have started liberation of pheasants reared in club brooders, these birds being released when they reach an age of eight weeks. Liberation of quail from club-operated brooders will begin within a short time. A record number of clubs are participating in the quail and pheasant propagation program this year.

With prospects of 125,000 quail and pheasants being liberated in suitable areas between July 1, 1939 and June 30, 1940; a new record will be established. During the past fiscal year 94,000 game birds were liberated in Indiana, which was an increase from the liberation of 55,000 birds the preceding year.

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 23

A gigantic state-wide rally of Republicans from all parts of Indiana will be held on the Indiana State Fair Grounds Sept. 23 under the joint sponsorship of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association and the Indiana Republican State Committee.

The rally will be held on the afternoon following the Fall meeting of the editorial association.

Announcement of the plans for the rally was made by Edwin V. O'Neel, of Hagerstown, editor of the Hagerstown Exponent and president of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association, after the members of the Republican state committee had approved of the plans and had agreed to act as joint sponsors of it.

Tentative plans provided for a parade of delegations from all counties. Tents will be erected on the grounds for the twelve districts, a speaker of national reputation will be invited to address the meeting, and all of Indiana's Republican congressmen will attend.

The mass meeting will be the opening volley in the 1940 campaign.

"THAT CONCORD SHEEP-SKIN BAND"

—by A. R. WYATT, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

In the quiet of my study, with the lights all burning low,
And I'm in thoughtful meditation, on the days of long ago,
The noises of the distant past, come floating back to me,
And I hear that Concord Sheep-skin Band, just as it used to be.

I can see that Baker trio, in the lead of a marching throng,
And the noise they made is terrific, the notes are full and strong.
The fife was played by Henry, I remember, now, he was lame,
And Billie played the snare drum, with all his might and main.

The big bass drum was a wonder, and it was played by Dan,
And when they all got busy, they made a great bed-lam;
But with all the noise and discord, I thought the thing was grand,
And I attended all rallies and picnics, to hear that sheep-skin band.

They did not make much music, just a great big rhythmic noise,
But it satisfied the grown-ups, and greatly pleased the boys.
But while it was crude and rustic, and a long way from being grand,
Still I love to sit and meditate, on that Concord Seep-skin Band.

Their uniforms were nonedscript, and were never made for show,
They were hicory shirts and blue jeans pants, held up by strings of tow.
Their cow-hide boots were never blacked, from the day that they were born,
And their straw hats, with bright red bands, were sometimes tattered and torn,
But with all their quaint appearance, as they stood by the speaker's stand,
The music was quite inspiring, as played by that sheep-skin band.

I think as we grow older, and new things begin to pall,
Our minds hark back to other days, and things we love to recall,
But, to me their is nothing more real, and nothing quite so grand,
As the music produced, in my boyhood days, by that Concord Sheep-skin Band.

AUBURN STATE BANK ROBBED OF $5,700 TUESDAY

The Auburn State bank was held up and robbed of about $5,700 by a lone bandit at 12:20 noon Tuesday. The thug vanished on Seventh Street and there is no trace of him.

The currency was carired away in a kraft paper bag, where it had been placed by John D. Haggerty, vice president and cashier, at the robber's command. An alarm was instantly given and a search was started by local and state police, but so far there have been no results.

The outlaw chose the noon hour for the holdup, when three of the employes of the bank were absent for lunch, leaving the cashier, the assistant cashier, Miss Mamie Noirot, and a bookkeeper, Miss Esther Beuret, on duty. The first two named were at the counter to wait on customers, while Miss Beuret was in the rear of the bank working at a desk. She did not know a robbery had taken place until after the bandit had departed from the bank.

The robber first made his appearance in the bank about 12:10, when he had a $5 bill exchanged by Miss Noirot and then he walked out the front door. When he returned a little later he found a customer at the first window and he stood nearby until Mr. Haggerty could give him attention. Then he walked up to the window and shoved a sheet of white paper through the bars to the cashier. The latter read the message, which was typewritten and said: "This is a holdup. Put the money from the cash drawers in the sack and no one will get hurt. If anyone tries anything some one will get shot. Put this paper into the sack with the money."

Obeying the robber, Mr. Haggerty took the currency from the drawers at the first three windows and then delivered the bag containing it to the bandit. The latter said: "Do you want me to lock you in the vault or will you stand back there ten minutes?" It won't be necessary to lock us in the vault, said Mr. Haggerty. "O. K.," responded the intruder, as he picked up the bag and walked away, keeping the gun pointed at the bank employes. He hurried to the rear door, which is about thirty feet away from the front of the bank, and walked out.

The hold-up Tuesday was the second daylight bank robbery in the history of DeKalb County. The first took place about fifteen years ago, with a spectacular hold-up of the Farmers & Merchants bank at Spencerville. The bandits were captured after a short chase and sent to prison for long terms.

A PART OF EARLY HISTORY OF DEKALB COUNTY

Last Friday issue of Evening Star, Auburn, Ind., contained an article of interest to older readers as a part of the early history as heard "around the court square."

"Rev. S. W. Widney, DeKalb County's chronicler of early day history, when he wrote his 'sketches' in 1859 was looking back to 'the good old days' of the latter 1830's when the county was just organized and the settlers were straggling in.

"In his account, Rev. Widney reveals the story of the first weddings in the settlements, which embraced the southeast corner of the county, along the St. Joseph River.

"The first person who was married while a resident of the settlements, we are informed, was Jared Ball, to Miss Malinda Slater. The father of the bride resided in Williams County, Ohio, near the present village of Edgerton, and there they were married; the eccentric bridegroom paying the marriage fee to Mr. Alton, the officiating minister, in pumpkins, according to previous contract.

"As an offset to this story of the pumpkins, and to keep it from being lonesome here, I will state that, in later years, a certain judge performed a marriage, the bridegroom in which was the fortunate possessor of a tract of 'oak opening,' and a 'cranberry marsh.' After the ceremony, the bland and courteous judge was informed by the happy bridegroom that for his invaluable services, he could have the privilege of getting some cranberries in his marsh.

"The first marriage that took place in the settlement, as far as I know, was that of Nelson Ulm to Elvira Lockwood. I remember that it was said that the bride was too weakly to stand up during the ceremony. It was in the Summer of 1837. The first marriage licenses taken out in the county, were those of Francis Smith and Maria Gunsenhouesr and of John Platter and Ann Emmeline Walden. Both licenses were taken out on the 5th of September, 1837; and both marriages were performed by Washington Robinson, the first Justice of the Peace in the County."

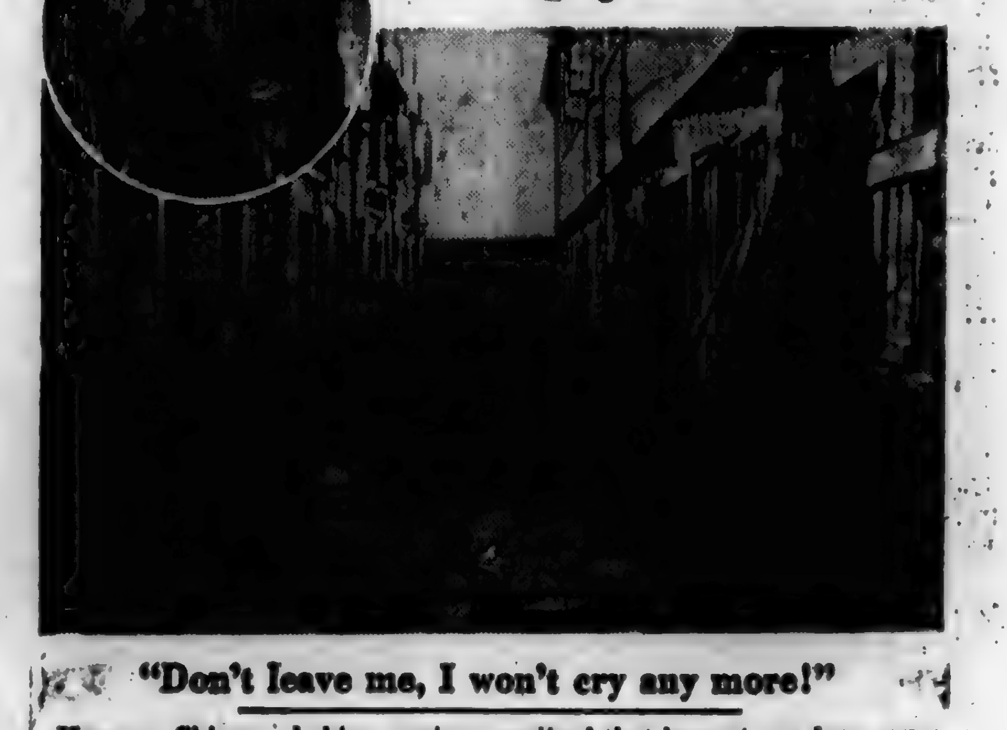
Chinese Children Cry for Food



"Don't leave me, I won't cry any more!"

Hungry Chinese babies crying, "Don't leave me, I won't cry any more!" seeing their parents drop dead from starvation and exhaustion, or wander off to die alone,—hoping that some one may care for the helpless, hungry child.

Mothers selling their only padded coat or quilt to buy a few handfuls of beans. Old men and women, sleeping uncovered, on the cold ground or sidewalks at night. Refugees from war, famine and flood huddled in mat-shed huts, waiting to file into the big feeding kitchens, in long lines, once each day, for the bowl of rice or millet gruel, provided by Americans cooperating with the Church Committee for Church Relief. This daily food ration, costing about three cents, may not be adequate nourishment for health and strength, yet it means the difference between life and death for millions of destitute, homeless refugees, both children and adults, in many parts of China.

Protestant and Catholic missionaries unite in ministering to the needs of these suffering millions. "It is now six weeks since we opened our gates for refugees in transit," writes a Christian missionary in the heart of China. "It was a venture of faith. Members of the Roman Catholic and Methodist Missions in the town were planning together an emergency camp, in case the war came this way, when it was realised that here at our doors were needy people who ought to be helped immediately."

"Can you realise that the number of Chinese people already suffering from war conditions is one-fourth as great as the whole population of the United States?" writes another American in China.

The Church Committee for China Relief, of which Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., is Chairman, James M. Speers of New York City, Treasurer, and Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield of Boston, Mass., Director, recognizes the magnitude of China's sufferings and the Christian obligation of Americans to help relieve this tremendous need. Without regard for sect or creed, the Committee is striving to give food, shelter, medical care and a chance to resume self-support to at least one million destitute children and adults in China next year, who are victims of war and flood. This relief can be provided at the cost of only one American dollar per month, Dr. Fairfield states. All America is responding to the Committee's nationwide appeal. Contributions and pledges may be sent to national headquarters of the Church Committee for China Relief, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City, or turned in through one of the thousand or more local committees throughout the United States now helping to promote this great [illegible] appeal.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

With a view to putting business more securely on its feet, the Administration has advanced many plans involving the spending of public funds. The most recent program proposes an outlay on behalf of projects believed to be capable of paying back. For almost two weeks, Congress has been engaged with alterations and amendments, in the hope that the measure would become a law before the fifth of August, a date tentatively set for adjournment but unlikely to prevail. The end is not in sight, and the Senate has made a slash of 850 million, in which highway improvement suffers mose severely. The "fors" and the "againsts" are busy in caucus at the close of each day's work in the legislative halls. The contest is heated, and few would be willing to conjecture what the outcome will be.

After having been shuttled back and forth between Senate and House, the Hatch bill, limiting political activities among federal employes, was passed and sent to the White House, but anxiety was not thereby brought to an end. The President favors the bill in principle, but wishes more time to study it, a cryptic and disturbing statement, especially since the President has declined to say whether or not he will sign. Congress may orate, consider and enact, but the work has to be done over if the necessary John Hancock is not forthcoming.

Enough of national consequence is going on to keep the average person interested in the present incumbent of the White House, without entering into a discussion as to who the next Chief Executive will be; but the matter will not be put down, even by the red hot debate and violent activity respecting important legislation that is characterizing the closing days of the existing session of Congress. One thing is certain, John L. Lewis, if correctly quoted, would not select Mr. Garner, as the next Democratic presidential candidate, if he had his say. Speaking before a Congressional committee, the labor leader calls the Vice President an "evil old man," with sundry specific trimmings so vitriolic as to bring down a wholesale non-partisan rebuke from the floor. Mr. Garner may or may not be the best man for the Presidency, but condemnation in language resembling that of a dyspeptic pirate will receive no endorsement, even among those who would be satisfied to have the Texan statesman retired to the quiet of the ranch.

In the field of international affairs, the abrogation by the United States of the 1911 treaty with Japan is a vital current item. The action of the department of State was prompted by several considerations, among which is the fact that the treaty was an impediment to Congressional action in the way of curtailing the export of American munitions to be used in the war with China. Manhandling of citizens of the United States in Chinese territory taken over by Japan has caused some resentment, and restrictions on American trade in that region accomplished anything but kindly feeling. Japan announces that any future treaty must take into consideration "the new situation" of the Far East, a declaration which has a "take it or leave it" tone and offers little in the nature of conciliation. During the six months that will pass before the agreement ceases to exist, the diplomats of the nations concerned will have plenty to occupy their minds.

ITINERANTS, SHOWS AND CARNIVALS SUBJECT T OTAX.

More than one million dollars worth of business done by itinerant merchants and show companies at Indiana fairs and carnivals was checked by a 'flying squadron" of inspectors from the Gross Income Tax Division during the 1938 season and subjected to the state gross income tax, Clarence A. Jackson, director of the state tax division, pointed out today with an announcement that final plans have been made for the 1939 show season.

"The Gross Income Tax Act applies to non-residents receiving income from sources within Indiana as well as to residents of the State," Mr. Jackson said, "and it is a part of our yearly enforcement program to see that all itinerant merchants and show companies at the fairs and carnivals meet their responsibilities under the law."

For the year 1937 the gross income tax paid by 17,279 out-of-state taxpayers having income from within Indiana, thus required to pay tax on the same basis as resident Hoosiers, neared the three million dollar mark with $2,959,429.67.

The old saying, "He travels fastest who travels alone," does not hold true in the case of the automobile driver.

When you return from a trip and have obeyed all the safetey rules and regulations and brought yourself and your faimly back home safe and sound, Lady Luck has been the winner. On the other hand, when you have been involved in an accident because of an infraction of the rule or because of someone else's carelessness, Old Man Accident has been the winner.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1939 NUMBER 33

A TRIBUTE TO EX-PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER

St. Joe, Ind., August 10, 1939.
Mr. Fred B. Leighty,
Editor St. Joe News,

Dear Mr. Leighty:—

You conferred an honor and privilege upon the writer when you requested him to write an editorial for your worthy newspaper for the issue of this date and the same is enclosed herewith:

Three score and five years ago today, a child was born in Iowa of pioneer parents, the World's most prominent and helpful private citizen at this time. Left an orphan at 11 years and reared by an Uncle and Aunt on a small farm. This boy, like all boys, was obliged to "help out." He did his part at that age in appreciation of the kindness received from his foster parents. At length he pressed westward; and one day, his formal education having been seriously handicapped; by desperate circumstances, he presented himself at a newly-found university, where a man who had just left the presidency of our own Indiana Univeristy, was president. By earnest, sincere presentation of his case, the boy obtained from this gentleman permission to do the unheard-of thing of taking simultaneously his high school and university work. At the end of four years, he had not only done just that, but had graduated with honors—after having completely supported himself through the whole long, hard double course, by doing whatever humble jobs he could contrive to pick up here and there.

HON. HERBERT HOOVER
(65 Years Old Today)

Soon after that he was on his way to personal success in a material manner as an engineer. He then amassed a private fortune, so that later when called by the peopie in various public capacities, his salary was all given to charity. At the request of President Wilson, prompted by his humanitarian spirit, he passed up further personal gains in order to give his services to the disposal of multitudes stricken by misfortune—in deed to save millions of men, women and children from starvation.

Step by step he was drafted into larger and larger public services by his fellow Americans, and gave generously of his private means, accepting not one cent of public tax money as his personal reward for public service.

All the above sounds like George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, but I am writing about Herbert Hoover, the only living ex-president of the United States, now beginning to enjoy something approaching adequate appreciation in the minds of his fellow Americans.

In 1928 elected President by the largest vote ever received up to that time by anyone. The World Wide depression came to a climax in the United States the next year, and he fought it with constructive statesmanship the American way, and it is now known that his country had started on the way out in 1932. By a paid campaign of slander, abuse and misrepresentation this start to recovery, was unknown to the masses in 1932, with the result that the people called him from public service to private life. With most men that would have been a fatal blow, but not so with Herbert Hoover. Instead he asked his successor to confer with him on the welfare of his country. This invitation was refused and his plans for meeting the then apparent bank crisis were not heeded.

His successor then closed all banks, 32% of which were quickly reopened with the aid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which had been organized by him. Of the banks remaining closed a large part paid out in full with the aid of the same Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Most of the closed banks paid out more than 80% and sound economists now recognize that they should not have been closed at all, from the standpoint of the welfare of the country.

To my personal knowledge, from observation as a credit examiner of banks for both the National Credit Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Hoover kept the banks open in 1931 and 1932, and could have continued to do so, with the usual customary minor exceptions. At this time this same prominent citizen is the fairest and most constructive critic of the efforts of others in the welfare of the country.

Posterity will place him in a quartet of American Patriots composed of George Washington, father of his country; Thomas Jefferson, writer of the Constitution of his country; Abraham Lincoln, savior of his country, and Herbert Hoover, greatest humanitarian of his country.

He asks nothing for himself, and it is the prayer of millions of thinking Americans, that he may be spared many more years, to guide his countrymen by the American way, to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Very respectfully,
Frank M. Brandon.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Means visited Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Yoder and family at Mason, Michigan, and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Carper and family at Crystal Lake for several days last week.

Mrs. Helen Randall, of Chicago, is a guest of Mrs. Wm. Randall for the week. She also visited her mother at Van Wert, Ohio. She reports Harry as improving nicely from his recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woods, Mrs. Mary Engle, Mrs. Hascall Crothers, Charles Crothers, of Ligonier, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Weaver and son, Olin, of Marcellus, Michigan, called at the George Weaver home, Sunday.

The Hollis Akins family of Wayne were here Saturday evening. They are preparing the home for occupancy by Mrs. Inez Chapman, who will move in a few days from the Price apartment. Here Mrs. Chapman will have room so she can take roomers.

Irvin Becker, who has worked for Strouse Brothers for several years, packing their products for truck delivery, left Sunday morning for Michigan, where he has taken another job. Charles R. Eadie, of Hicksville, Ohio, has taken charge of one of the trucks.

Although congress has adjourned, probably until January, Rep. George W. Gillie of the Fourth Indiana district will keep his office open at Washington during the recess for the convenience of constituents. Principal reason for maintaining Washington headquarters throughout the year, Representative Gillie explained, is to provide tourist service for Northern Indiana visitors to the capital city.

After all the old fashioned flowers are again coming into favor with more people, and only a few days ago, we visited the John Woodcox gardens, where a great variety of these flowers are blooming. A fine display of dahlias, petunias, gladioli, phlox, delphiniums, hibuscus of all colors and later there will be mums of several colors. What adds to the beauty of the garden is the neatly mowed and trimmed lawn and hedge.

Fort Wayne will again be host to the most unique and largest number of twins ever to assemble at one time, when the International Twins Association Inc. will hold its eighth annual covention, Saturday and Sunday, August 26th and 27th, 1939, at Triers Park. It is expected that 4,000 or 5,000 Twins will convene for another grand time. The twins in their pilgrimage to Fort Wayne will be trailed by a representative American gathering—laborers, office workers, professional men, scientists, and every walk of life.

A PART OF EARLY HISTORY OF DEKALB COUNTY

Last Friday issue of Evening Star, Auburn, Ind., contained an article of interest to older readers as a part of the early history as heard "around the court square."

Rev. S. W. Widney, author of the DeKalb County "Sketches," has the following to say of the hardship of getting provisions in the very early days:

"Mr. Rhodes, of Auburn, informs me that on one occasion his father and Samuel Wasson, of Spencerville, had to pull a loaded pirogue nearly all the way from Fort Wayne to where Spencerville now is, by laying hold of the willows and other bushess along the margin of the water. The entire voyage occupied a week.

"Jopn P. Widney states that he and some others came up with a load of provisions, late in November, 1836, when the river was swollen with the Fall rains, and the 'slush ice' was running. Ice froze on the poles whenever they drew them out of the water. These icy poles had to be used with bare hands, as gloves or mittens could not be used. In this way it required a full week to come up."

"Provisions were very scarce and dear at Fort Wayne at that time. Flour rose to $14 per barrel and was sometimes 'wormy' at that. Corn was $1.50 per bushel, in the ear, and much of it rotten. Salt was $2.25 per bushel, and other things in proportion."

"There were but few families, I suppose, but that sometime were pinched with hunger, without the immediate means on hand to satisfy it. Several days together, had nearly all of them to subsist on potatoes instead of bread; and some would even have been glad to get potatoes.

"It was reported that one family, now in comfortable circumstanecs, had to live several weeks on vegetables, gathered from the woods, and cooked as 'greens' with milk and beech bark. Imagine yourself the cabin of the settler visited, in such circumstances, by severe fevers and agues, sometimes prostrating the whole family for weeks, and you will not wonder that some were discouraged, and wished themselves back again in their comfortable eastern homes."

Checking Melon Situation

W. F. Reilly, traveling agent of the B. & O., from Chicago, Lester J. Miller, agricultural agent of the B. & O., from Columbus, Ohio, C. E. Baker, county agent of Auburn, and Dale Wycoff, local agricultural agent, were making a survey of the melon situation in the St. Joe Valley, Tuesday. It looks like the crop will be in readiness for shipping about August 21. Mr. Baker states that every grower will receive a letter giving full instructions as to operations. Melons are beginning to ripen, those started from hotbed plants being first to yield.

TOWNSEND CLUB ORGANIZATION IS LAUNCHED

The first attempt at holding a Townsend meeting in St. Joe was awarded a fair audience Tuesday evening at the high school gym, where J. W. Dawson, of Decatur, representing the state committee, spoke. The meeting was in charge of James Diehl, of Butler, president of the club at that place, who succeeded in getting an organization started here with the following as leaders:

Harry Kees, president.

Frank Akins, vice president.

Mrs. Peggy Hatch, secretary and treasurer.

The Butler club was represented by a nice group, and all were well pleased with the success of the first meeting. The local committee will endeavor to proceed in a sane manner, so as to merit the support of those who are anxious for a permanent recovery program.

Future announcement will be made as to meetings.

MORTUARY

BARTLETT

George W. Bartlett, son of Silas and Almira Weeks Bartlett, was born in Newville, Indiana, April 8, 1862. Died at Fort Wayne, Indiana, August 3, 1939, at the age of 77 years, and 4 months. His early life was spent in Newville with the exception of 18 months which he spent on the Sioux Indiana Reservation, where he conducted a government store.

He was married to Mary Draggoo and to this union two children were born, one son dying in infancy. In 1891 they moved to St. Joe, where they resided until 1909, when they went to Hartford City. They remained there two years and moved to Fort Wayne, where they remained until his death.

He suffered a paralytic stroke nearly seven years ago from which he gradually became helpless. He suffered a stroke July 29th from which he did not regain consciousness.

He leaves a wife, Mary Bartlett, one daughter, Bessie, both of Fort Wayne, relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

He was the last member of his father's family and his passing removes his line of the Bartletts.

Funeral at Church of Christ, St. Joe, Monday afternoon and burial at Riverside Cemetery.

DAWN

Tripping, tapping little feet,
Little girl from down my street,
You pass and wave at me each day,
Happy in your childish way.

Just a little thing I know,
Yet it seems to help me so,
Brings a preview of Hereafter,
Love and peace with song and laughter.

Little girl with fairy grace,
Little girl with rose-bud face,
I would keep Life's thorns from you
But this I know I can-not do.

—Mrs. F. R. Bowman.

If people in St. Joe were all healthy, what would they have to write about in letters to their relatives?

About the only horse some fellows ever rode was a nightmare.

Middle age in life is that time when one's weight is most noticable around their middle.

A St. Joe man was overheard to remark that he doesn't see how local birds managed their nest building project, without any federal aid.

If happiness must be bought, we who are financially found wanting wonder if happiness ever has a month-end clearance sale.

Some educator says it won't be long before they will teach without any books. Then is when you will really see football teams!

If they start making bicyclists buy licenses, watch out, for baby buggies will be the next.

You can't expect voters to start getting worked up over any forthcoming presidential campaign until they get the world series out of their systems.

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

When an emergency arises, the American people act.

When an epidemic strikes, the nation mobilizes to conquer it.

When flood, fire or hurricane roar across the country, millions of dollars and trainloads of food and clothing pour into the stricken area.

If an enemy invaded our shores, every one of us would rush to the defense.

Today we are faced with a national emergency as great as any of these—greater, in fact, because it is less spectacular and arouses less alarm.

This emergency is the rising traffic toll.

A lot of us have had the smug idea lately that we had the traffice problem whipped. Last year the nation cut its death toll 19 per cent. This year started out the same way.

Then something happened. We started stepping on the gas and jaywalking again. Accidents shot up. The safety drive faltered, then bogged down.

And in June, the National Safety Council reports, the traffic death toll went up for the first time in 20 months.

In June alone 2,330 people were killed on streets and highways. Eighty thousand others were injured. And the heavy vacation months still are to be heard from!

Is that an emergency or not?

Your help is needed—needed just as much as in fire or flood.

Not your money. Not your time. Not your services.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The week has been an active one in Washington. Tension respecting the Hatch bill was relieved when the President affixed his signature to the document. That he did so with some hesitation is made manifest by recommendations advanced. The President contends that the measure should be expanded to prohibit political prominence among the three million municipal and state employes who now participate actively in Federal elections. A minor suggestion is to the effect that a Federal worker who has a Washington job should be permitted to hold a home town office in the adjacent commonwealths of Virginia and Maryland. Coupled with these criticisms is the earlier expressed doubt as to whether or not the bill embodies adequate provisions for its own enforcement.

In the short space of three days, Congress took the bit in its teeth and as many times ran off at full speed along the road of independent action. Several schedules of amendments to the wages and hours law were laid on the shelf, with the pointed statement of Majority Leader Rayburn that the House did not seem inclined to consider at this time, legislation of such far-reaching importance. Although the slum-clearing plan had been once stretched in the dust, an effort was made to bring it up again for consideration, but to no avail. The trials and tribulations of the lending bill are now a matter of dismal record for those interested in its welfare.

The doings of Congress during the closing days of the session show a rising, non-partisan tide setting toward governmental thrift. The economically inclined include conservative Democrats, and legislators from the rural regions who see too much aid for "business" and not enough for the farmer. Republican support of course is available. The general trend on Capitol Hill is the result of reaction drunk with power, or it is a return to a cardinal principle of the American Government, depending upon which speaker happens to occupy the stump. There is opportunity for corresponding freedom of opinion as to what the President thinks about it all. Persons who wish to do so may accept the assurance that he displayed "an icy calm which to those familiar with him betrayed intense inner anger." On the other hand, it is said that "bantering with reporters, President Roosevelt gave no outward sign of chagrin;" and as Hamlet remarked, "So uncle, there you are."

One may like the Japanese, dislike them, or hold the complacent view that they are just another parcel of foreigners, yet one fact will have to be admitted: they are full of energy and gluttons for excitement on an international scale. A war is enough to keep the average nation occupied, but with the Japs, having an army afoot in China is simply an incident. Along with a little bayoneting and bombing, Nippon finds time to warn the United States, England and France that the abrogation of commercial treaties will be followed by the recall of Japanese Diplomats. For good measure, and to occupy the idle hours, the Island Empire is said to be dickering with Germany and Italy for a hand in European military affairs. There seems to be no limit on the number of irons that Japan thinks she can have in the fire at once.

Wallace, Idaho, does not make a large splash on the map. Its residents pursue the even tenor of their way, busied mostly with the affairs that occupy men's minds in Shoshone County: but the local Chamber of Commerce has issued a letter on the subject of reducing the expenses of the Federal government, which indicates that Wallace has a good supply of sound statecraft timber. The following excerpt needs no comment:

"Collectively the people of the United States are asking for national retrenchment and economy, but paradoxically the same individuals continue to clamor for more and more expenditures in their respective communities. The prevalent attitude is: if we do not get it some one else will. Obviously a program of national retrenchment cannot be inaugurated in the face of such inconsistency. If a start is to be made it must originate with the local committees. However, no one community standing alone could accomplish anything. It will require united and simultaneous action by a large number of communinties uniformly scattered thru out the nation."

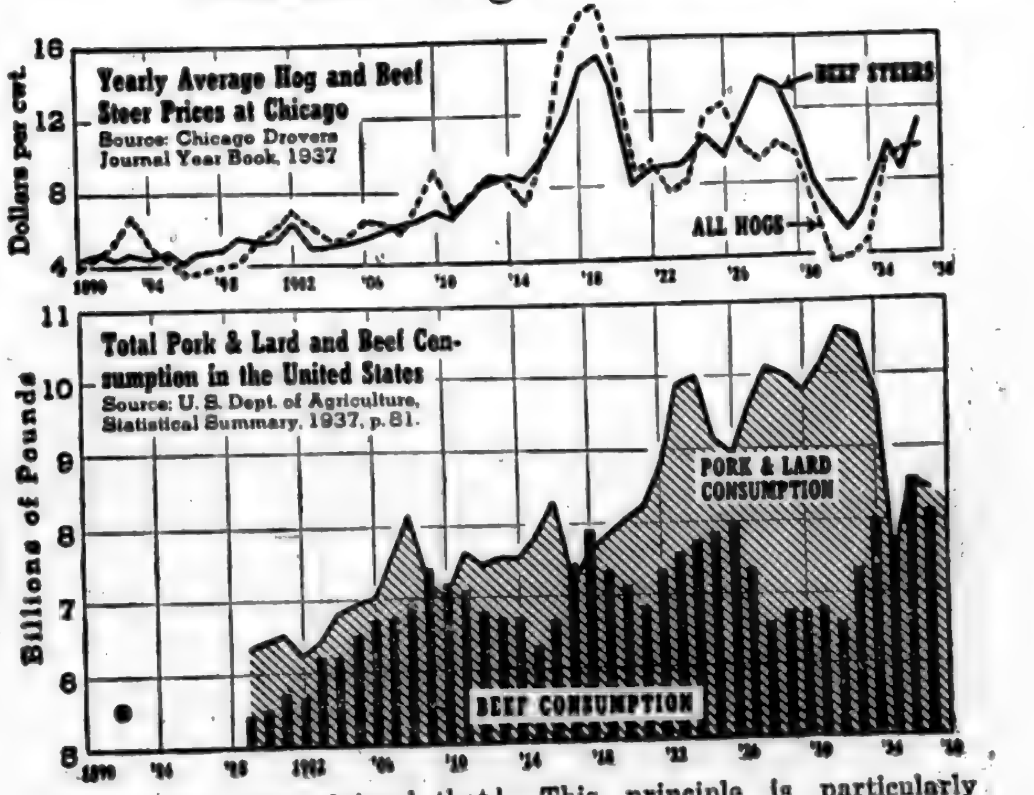
Lew Washler and family, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Bennet Lay, of Washington, D. C., spent Sunday at the Irish Hills in Michigan and called on the Elmer Volkert family in Quincy. Mr. and Mrs. Lay are here for their Summer vacation in the Washler home and with their daughter, Mrs. Martha Hissong, and husband of near Hicksville.

The R. H. C. was entertained Tuesday afternoon at the pleasant rural home of Mrs. Mildred Jarret. Fifteen members and two guests, Mrs. Arden Casselman and Miss Lucille Hart gathered for the club meeting. The president called meeting to order. There will be some very attractive old ladies some day, if all have their wishes, according to roll call, each member responding with "What Kind of an old Lady I would like to be." The afternoon was quite warm but all had a very pleasant time. The hostess and Miss Hart served delicious home made ice cream, cake and coffee. Club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. Eleanor Crothers.

There Is No Fixed Relationship Between Hog and Steer Prices



Some people have claimed that average hog prices bear a fixed relationship to average steer prices and consequently rise or fall as steer prices go up or down. A study of the subject and the statistics shown in the chart above, however, does not bear out such a claim. As a matter of fact, since 1890 (war years excluded) the ratio of hog prices to cattle prices has been one of constant change. During this period hog prices were higher than cattle prices in 19 years and lower than cattle prices in the other 24. Almost every year saw a change in this ratio between cattle and hog prices.

One significant thing shown by the statistics is that when the supply of pork and lard to be consumed has been greater relatively than that of beef, the price of hogs has been lower relatively than that of steers, and, vice versa, when the supply of beef has been relatively higher than that of pork and lard, the price of steers has been relatively lower than that of hogs.

This principle is particularly well illustrated in the period 1927 to 1936 inclusive when hog prices were consistently lower (by varying amounts) than steer prices. During this period, the chart shows that the amount of pork and lard to be consumed was the highest on record for a like period, while beef on the other hand was less than average.

Other factors that have had a bearing on this price ratio are the volume of pork and lard that can be exported (now almost negligible), and the preference of consumers for pork or for beef, mostly due, of course, to a favorable price necessary to move increased supplies of one or the other into consumption. Naturally, the more hogs or the more cattle that come to market, the lower the price will be.

These are the economic factors that cause the price of one to be higher, or to be lower, than the price of the other, regardless of whether the livestock is marketed at central markets or at interior markets.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A birthday party was held Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moore, for Mary Moore and James Hart for their eleventh birthday anniversaries. The afternoon was spent in playing games and having a good time. They both received many pretty gifts.

Those present were: Beccy and Betty Inlow, Rosemary Yeiser, Marcia Guilford, Patricia Fluke, Virginia Campbell, Estella Hart, Ruth Ann Hart, Leora Bell Wilmot, Jean and Carol Billow, Delores Chorpenning, Russell Ridgway, Bobby Loucks, Hubert and Lynn Mock, Billow Billow, Eugene Gee, Sammy Kees, Roscoe Moore and Lauren Barnhouse. Beccy and Betty Inlow spent Friday evening and Saturday with Mary.

Mrs. Mary Inhofe, of Nappanee, visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Armstrong, Wednesday, and they also called at the some of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ridgway.

JOHN GEISINGER CELEBRATED 92D BIRTHDAY TUESDAY

"I can still get around as well as most of them yet," declared John Geisinger of Garrett, on the eve of his ninety-third birthday, which he observed Tuesday.

Despite his extreme age, Mr. Geisinger's limbs are in good condition and he walks up town often, besides doing chores around the house and yard. His hearing and eyesight have failed, but he can engage in a conversation and he can read with the aid of a reading glass. His wife, Mrs. Sarah Lucinda Geisinger, is eighty-five. Rheumatism in her knees keeps her at home practically all the time, but otherwise her health is good.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Geisinger are natives of DeKalb County and both were born in log cabins, the former in the northeast corner of Jackson Township four miles east of the court house and the latter in Concord Township. The date of Mr. Geisinger's birth was August 8, 1846. His father was Samuel Geisinger, who was born in Pennsylvania and came to Indiana in about 1815. Indians were numerous in this section in those pioneer days, as well as bears, wolves, deer, wild turkey and other game.

John Geisinger and wife were married in Concord Township, September 17, 1872, and therefore will celebrate their sixty-seventh wedding anniversary next month. They went to housekeeping in a log cabin in Concord Township and they lived on farms until about 1895, when they located in Auburn. Twenty-four years ago they moved to Garrett to reside with their daughter, Mrs. E. J. Brown, and family and have remained there ever since.

Dr. L. N. Geisinger, of Auburn, is a son of the aged couple. Alfred Geisinger, another son, died in 1932 in the state of Washington.

They have four grandchildren, Berwyn Brown, of Kalamazoo, Mich., Earl Geisinger, of Idaho, Mrs. Helen Hanselman, of Fort Wayne, and Dorothy Brown, of Garrett, and there is one great grandchild, Josephine Geisinger, a daughter of Earl Geisinger.

Mr. and Mrs. Geisinger still have some of the household goods that they used in going to housekeeping sixty-seven years ago. Mr. Geisinger cast his first presidential ballot for Abraham Lincoln in 1864, but he has given most of his votes to Democrats since that time. He had six brothers and sisters, but he is the only one still living. However, the others all lived to ripe old ages, the youngest having been seventy-two. There were ten in Mrs. Geisinger's family, of whom she was the eldest. There are four others of the family living. They are Charles Koch, of St. Joe, Reuben Koch and Mrs. Frank Johnson, of Concord Township, and Mrs. J. W. Morr, of Albion. Mrs. Geisinger was born January 16, 1854.

Mr. Geisinger still shaves himself with a straight razor. His religious affiliation is with the Church of Christ, while his wife is a Methodist. However, he is friendly to all the churches. He is a first cousin of A. C. Cobler, of Garrett, a retired B. & O. shop foreman who is now eighty-eight years of age.

WALTER WHITEHURST POST No. 283

Meeting Night: Second & Fourth Tuesday of the Month.

BARBERS' PROTECTION ASSN. CRITICIZES GOV. TOWNSEND

Resolutions condemning the action of Governor Townsend in remitting the sentences of Frank Meade and George Smith, union barber officers convicted of malicious vandalism in criminal court, were approved at a meeting of the Barbers' Protective Association of Indiana in the Hotel Severin, Friday.

Officers of the association commended Judge Frank P. Baker, former judge of Marion County criminal court, for his statement of his views of the case and his criticism of Governor Townsend.

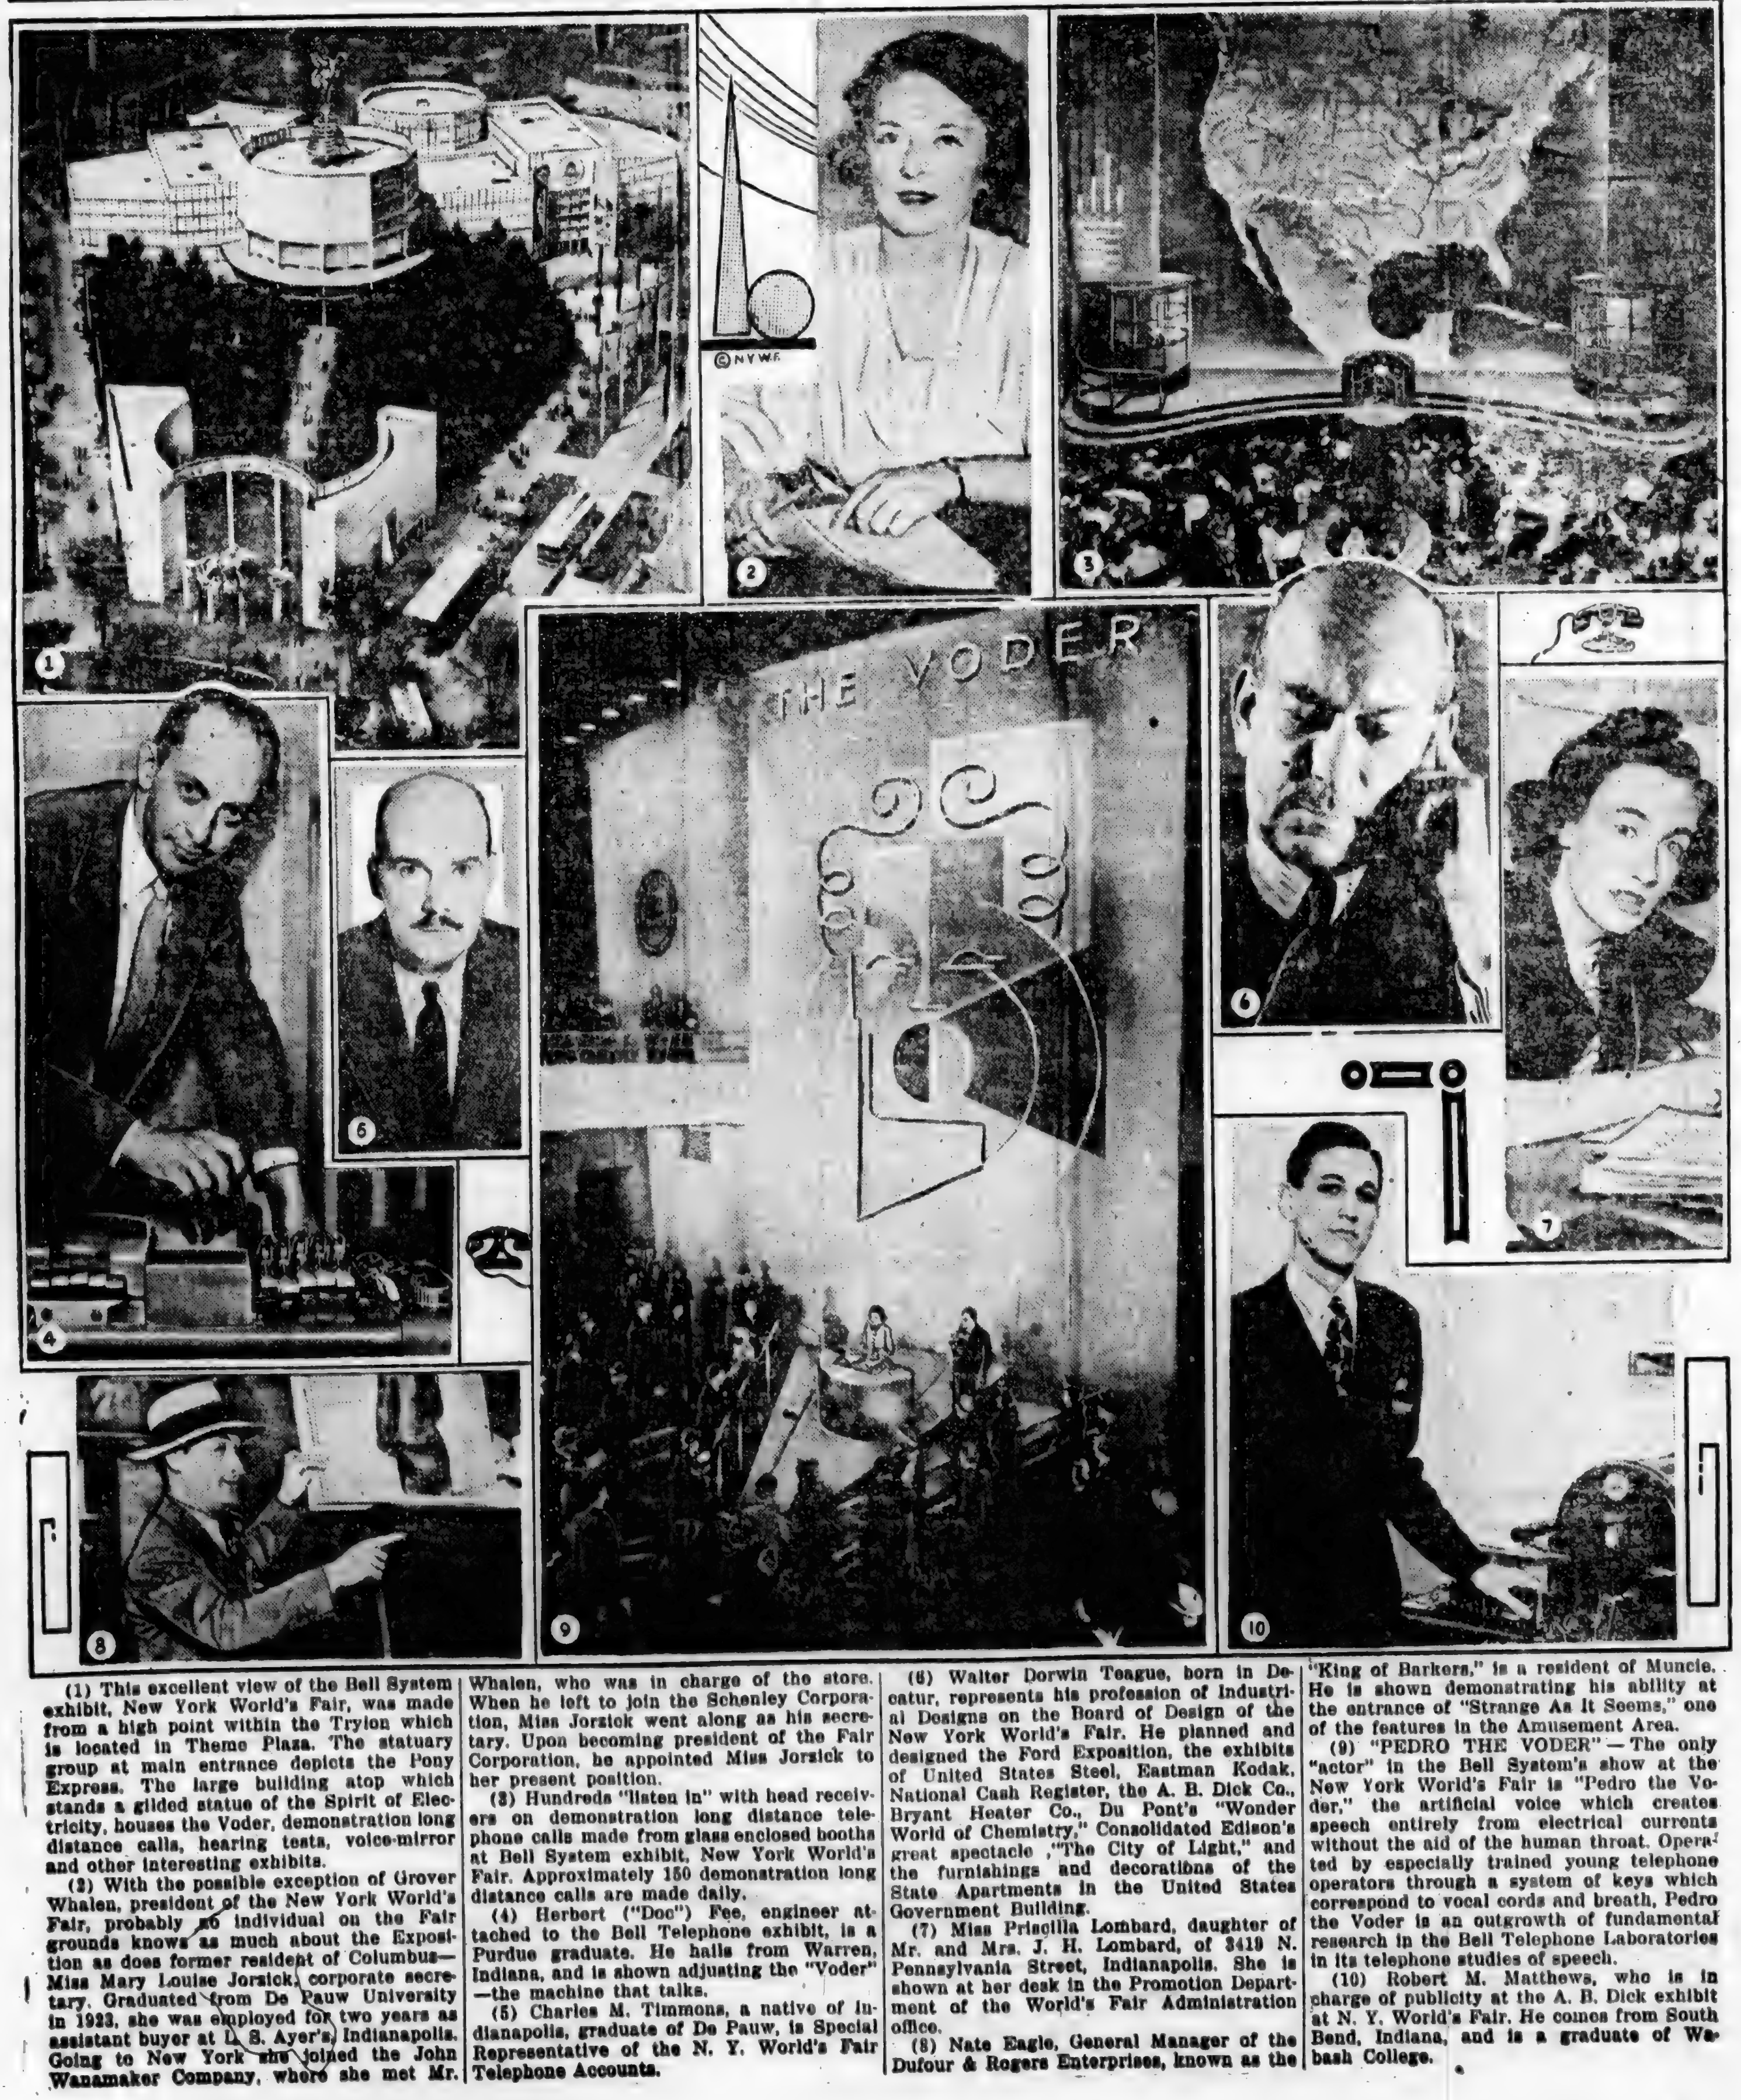
The session was the beginning of a state-wide campaign to enlist support of more than 5,000 barbers in defeating the price-fixing and closing hours regulations of the new barbers' state law, according to Wilbur P. Fuller, former state president.

The new barber state law is causing much anxiety on the part of the smaller town barbers, because they know that if forced to comply with the closing and price fixing schedule, that their business will be seriously handicapped as a result, and therefore are eager that the defeat of the law be hastened.

Saturday afternoon callers at the home of Mrs. Wm. Randall were Mrs. John Beard, of Waterloo, and Mrs. Victoria Shimp, of Chicago.

HOOSIERS WHO HELPED BUILD AND OPERATE THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR

A series of pictures depicting personalities from Indiana, and one of the interesting exhibits which is breaking all attendance records at the Fair.



(1) This excellent view of the Bell System exhibit, New York World's Fair, was made from a high point within the Trylon which is located in Theme Plaza. The statuary group at main entrance depicts the Pony Express. The large building atop which stands a gilded statue of the Spirit of Electricity, houses the Voder, demonstration long distance calls, hearing tests, voice-mirror and other interesting exhibits.

(2) With the possible exception of Grover Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair, probably no individual on the Fair grounds knows as much about the Exposition as does former resident of Columbus—Miss Mary Louise Jorsick, corporate secretary. Graduated from De Pauw University in 1923, she was employed for two years as assistant buyer at L. S. Ayer's, Indianapolis. Going to New York she joined the John Wanamaker Company, where she met Mr. Whalen, who was in charge of the store. When he left to join the Schenley Corporation, Miss Jorsick went along as his secretary. Upon becoming president of the Fair Corporation, he appointed Miss Jorsick to her present position.

(3) Hundreds "listen in" with head receivers on demonstration long distance telephone calls made from glass enclosed booths at Bell System exhibit, New York World's Fair. Approximately 150 demonstration long distance calls are made daily.

(4) Herbert ("Doc") Fee, engineer attached to the Bell Telephone exhibit, is a Purdue graduate. He hails from Warren, Indiana, and is shown adjusting the "Voder"—the machine that talks.

(5) Charles M. Timmons, a native of Indianapolis, graduate of De Pauw, is Special Representative of the N. Y. World's Fair Telephone Accounts.

(6) Walter Dorwin Teague, born in Decatur, represents his profession of Industrial Designs on the Board of Design of the New York World's Fair. He planned and designed the Ford Exposition, the exhibits of United States Steel, Eastman Kodak, National Cash Register, the A. B. Dick Co., Bryant Heater Co., Du Pont's "Wonder World of Chemistry," Consolidated Edison's great spectacle ,"The City of Light," and the furnishings and decorations of the State Apartments in the United States Government Building.

(7) Miss Priscilla Lombard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lombard, of 3419 N. Pennsylvania Street, Indianapolis. She is shown at her desk in the Promotion Department of the World's Fair Administration office.

(9) "PEDRO THE VODER"—The only "actor" in the Bell System's show at the New York World's Fair is "Pedro the Voder," the artificial voice which creates speech entirely from electrical currents without the aid of the human throat. Operated by especially trained young telephone operators through a system of keys which correspond to vocal cords and breath, Pedro the Voder is an outgrowth of fundamental research in the Bell Telephone Laboratories in its telephone studies of speech.

(10) Robert M. Matthews, who is in charge of publicity at the A. B. Dick exhibit at N. Y. World's Fair. He comes from South Bend, Indiana, and is a graduate of Wabash College.

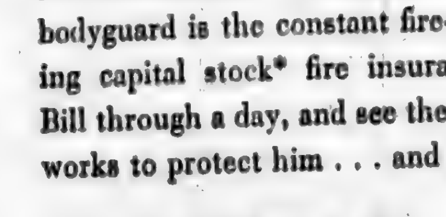
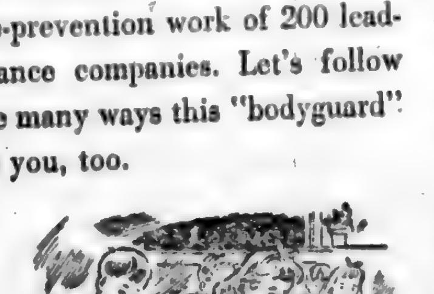
Bill's no "big shot" . . . but he has a bodyguard

Bill Smith, a mechanic, doesn't realize that there is an enemy that stalks him day and night . . . nor that he is protected by an ever-watchful "bodyguard." That enemy is fire . . . the bodyguard is the constant fire-prevention work of 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies. Let's follow Bill through a day, and see the many ways this "bodyguard" works to protect him . . . and you, too.

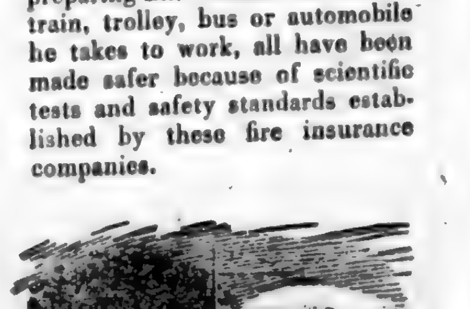
The cooking appliances used in preparing Bill's breakfast, and the train, trolley, bus or automobile he takes to work, all have been made safer because of scientific tests and safety standards established by these fire insurance companies.



By sponsoring better building laws, by obtaining the co-operation of architects and builders, by systematic inspections, these fire insurance companies help to make and keep safer the factory where Bill spends his working hours.



The same "bodyguard" works to make Bill's children safer at school. (These fire insurance companies created the Self-Inspection Blank for Schools, encouraging fire drills and inspection.)



Even when Bill and his family are asleep, his "bodyguard" is on the job. His town's fire alarm system, fire-fighting equipment, water supplies, etc., are periodically checked by fire-prevention engineers.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1939 NUMBER 33

GETTING PLANS UNDER WAY FOR MELON SHIPPING

County Agent C. E. Baker stated Saturday that he has received word that Lester J. Miller, agricultural agent for the B. & O. Railroad, and A. E. Fossmeyer, who will supervise the packing of cantaloupes at St. Joe this year, will be in St. Joe one day this week to complete arrangements for the handling of this year's melon crop. With the exception of the supervision, all help hired will be local.

There is considerable interest shown in the melon industry for this section this year, and while the present market quotations are not so flattering, Cincinnati markete quotations ranging 50c, 65c, and 75c, and southern Indiana standard crates all sizes 50c, 75c and $1.25, while Chicago market is quoting at 40c, 75c, $1.00, and $1.25 according to grade.

While these quotations are low we believe that our growers can expect to get a better price in the eastern markets, because after all it is the quality that makes the price, and we are confident that St. Joe River Valley quality will demand a better price.

It is true that our excessive rains have not made for quality, but we believe that we will have less rains from now on, and thus we are assured of that finer quality from those melons raised direct from the seed planting.

Just as soon as County Agent C. E. Baker completes all details for the melon shipping, a letter will be mailed to each grower, giving him the detailed information.

COUNTY ROAD BUDGET IS COMPLETED

Beginning next January 1, the government is requiring sponsors to pay 25 per cent of the cost of WPA projects.

Unless the county prepares to meet this ruling, the large number of men now employed on the county highways by the WPA wil have no such work available. The commissioners say they cannot spare any money from the gasoline tax, as it is needed for county highway maintenance, and therefore they will ask the council to appropriate $15,000 for the purpose.

The county highway department budget, prepared by Supervisor C. F. Scholes and approved by the commissioners, provides for expenditures of $101,435. Items included follow: Salaries and wages, $37,500; repair of trucks and machinery, $5,000; gasoline, $12,000; oil, $1,000; tires and tubes, $2,500; grease and kerosene, $700; right of way for state roads, $5,500; gravel, $10,000; tile and sewer pipe, $1,800; culverts, $1,500; bituminous material, $10,000; equipment, $6,135; insurance, $1,200.

The commissioners estimate the needs for soldiers' burials at $1,600; for expense of inmates at state institutions from DeKalb County, $3,000; repairs of ditches, $5,000; expense of the court house, $15,270; expense of county jail, $2,220; and expense of the county farm, $10,450. Items for the infirmary include $2,000 for food, $500 for burials, 200 for hospital care, $1,000 for building and equipment, $1,000 for livestock and $500 for farm implements. Last year the board asked for $20,000 for bridges, but none was granted. This year this item is $1,000, the money is being used for repairs.

SPEND TWO DAYS SUCCESSFUL FISHING

When you listen to fellows relate those almost unbelievable stories about the wonderful catches of fish in the lakes, and then another will come home and say fishing is no good, can't catch anything. Of course we have to believe this last person because he is always able to produce what he says—nothing. Then when you hear the more encouraging remarks and really see the fish, you are compelled to believe that fellow also.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Hatch spent Saturday and Sunday at Hog Back Lake, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Auer and Mr. and Mrs. Jervis Sebring, of Auburn, and they report the largest catch of any trip they ever made.

In casting, it was the rule to land bass of 1½ pounds and several times larger ones were caught. Besides having all they could eat, they brought plenty home with them. Monday the Hatchs, gave the editor and wife an even dozen nice blue gills, and from what we saw, we know they really caught fish. Thank you.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Obeying the law may keep a person out of jail, but it won't always keep him out of accidents. Being legally careful is not enough.

I have driven with men in communities where the speed limit was 30 miles an hour, and these drivers felt that they were within their legal rights to drive at that speed. However, because of some unusual condition of sidestreets, traffic on particular thoroughfares may have been very crowded, and pedestrian traffic may have been heavy, too. Thirty miles an hour under those conditions was entirely within the law but not within the law of common sense.

Regulate your driving to meet conditions. Adjust your temper and your driving habits so that you will be a sensible driver rather than a legally safe driver.

"It's Smart to be Careful."

A checkup of the nation's fatalities for 1938 is convincing proof that the pedestrian could materially improve that record by being careful.

Almost 40 per cent of the automobile fatalities last year were pedestrians. The automobile driver is not always to blame. The pedestrian sometimes puts the driver in a very precarious situation by "dumb" walking. In some sections of the country, spcial campaigns and safety drives are being made to educate the pedestrian on safe conduct on our streets and highways.

Walk when you have the lights with you. Do not cross streets in the center of the block—cross at intersections. Do not jay-walk.

Mr. Vance Woodcox and family, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and Betty Woodcox, of Detroit, spent Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Philley at Huntington.

When Your Mother Was a Kid

I bet you I can tell you
Just the things your Mother did,
Though of course, I didn't know her
When she was a little kid.

I'll bet she played at keeping house,
And dressed up as the bride,
And spanked her naughty dolly,
Every time she ever cried.

I'll bet she made nice mud pies,
And baked them in the sun,
And when her neighbors came to call
She promptly served them some.

I'll bet she jumped on her ma's bed,
And had a pillow fight,
And told the queerest stories,
When she'd go to bed at night.

I'll bet you when her ma would go
To town a little while,
She'd get into her powder puff
And paint the latest style.

I'll bet you that she whispered
With the little boys at school
And had to stand upon the floor
Because she broke a rule.

And when her Ma'd say: "Now dear,
You wash the dishes nice,"
She'd cry and say: "Well, Ma, let Sis,
Gee whiz, I've done 'em twice."

I'll bet she used to scream and kick,
To lick the frostin pan,
Her Ma would say: "Now you be good,
I'll call the bugger man."

I'll bet she broke her Ma's prize dish,
And tore her Sunday dress,
And got into the bread and jam
And made an awful mess.

She'd wear her Mother's high heeled shoes
And thought she'd grown up big.
Why I can't begin to name the things
She did when she was a kid.

Now I'll bet you I have told you
Just the things your Mother did,
Though of course I didn't know her
When she was a little kid.

We notice that the man who gives up smoking usually takes up growling in place of it.

It would be a miserable world if some children were as bad as their neighbors say they are!

Every fellow started life as a wee baby, and some of them still act as if they hadn't outgrown those early days.

The old bromide about it being "hard to keep a good man down" might be spoken of most weeds in gardens.

There was that southern gentleman who, at the age of 70-odd went in for his marriage license. When questioned regarding the bride's first name he studied a bit and "thought it was Louise." When the bride-to-be came in to write her signature it proved to be Stella. This fellow is going to get thunder on anniversaries.

Most people who insist upon making fools of themselves, usually try to keep other folks from finding it out.

Sam Mumaw says the college may dole out the sheepskins but the well-known school of experience tears off the human hide.

If ⅔ of the population in this world have no liberty, does that figure also include married men in St. Joe?

A canoe may be more romantic than a flat-bottomed boat, but it isn't as sure-footed.

The farmer's troubles seemed to have increased when he stopped chewing a straw and started to keep books.

Laney Gee was overheard to remark that it is hard to find the fellow who wants to get up early to see the sun rise.

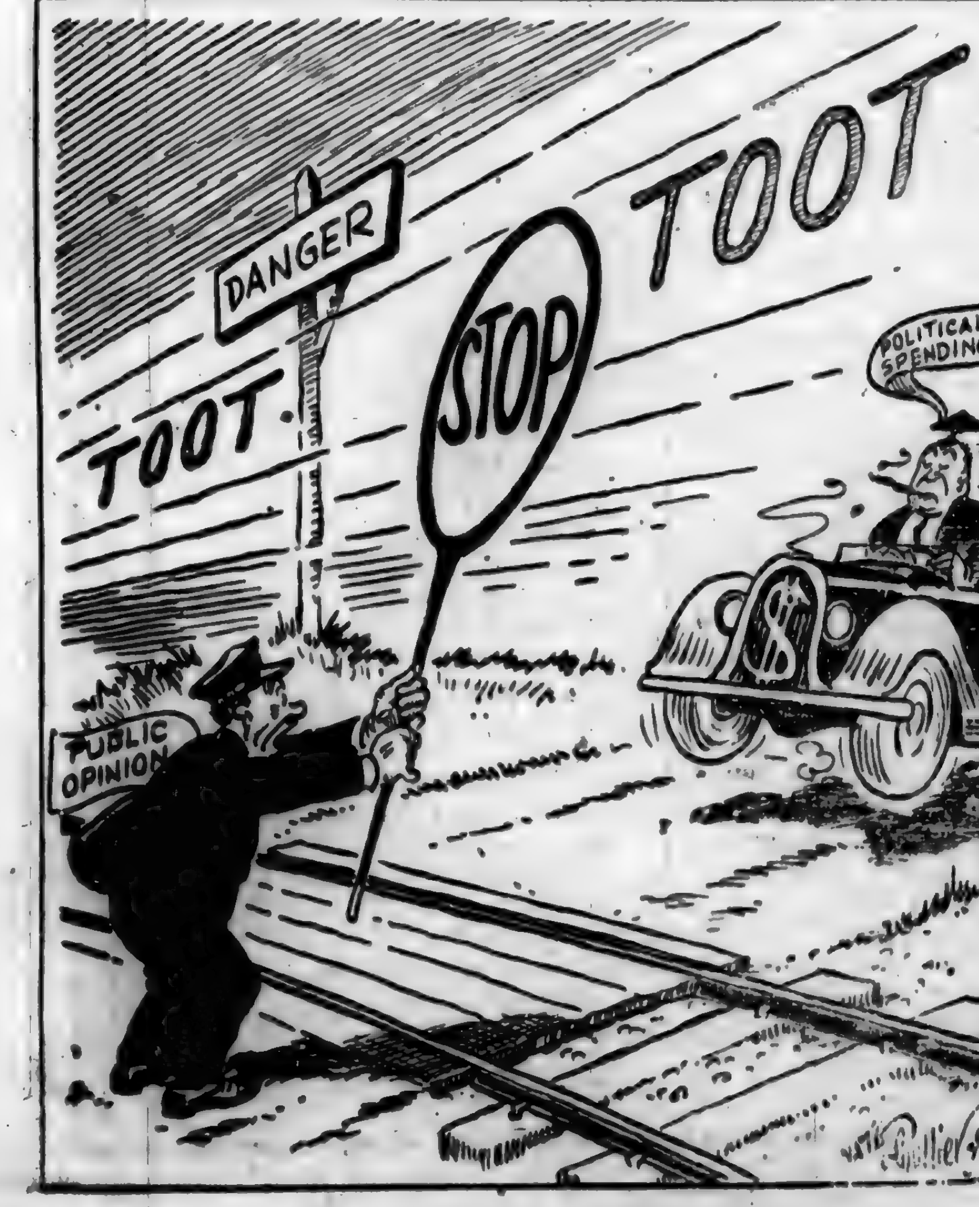
WISE WORDS

Today and yesterday, tomorrow and thereafter, brings us to the constant plea of "be patient." How hard it is to obey, how difficult to heed the warning of patience and its virtue. There is the wisdom of words and quality of genius in the obeying. From our childhood comes to us from lips we love, "you must be patient." From our adulthood we speak the same to those we love. The man who is wise pays heed. The Bible gives us the counsel of patience and the things to be accomplished through it. There may be a patience for evil, but patience for good is the right sort of staying power. Too bad, that too late we appreciate the wisdom of the quality and too often we are too busy to try it out.

SALUTE IT:

A southern state has made it lawful for public school children to salute the flag. The court has ruled that the act has not a relation or connection with the religious belief of the school child. Some states have ruled otherwise, thru their lower courts. The symbol of our flag is a symbol of our liberty, and so is the liberty of religion closely linked to the flag. But, by the act of the salute, does the school child deny his religion? Does he repudiate the faith of his Father by giving allegiance to his country? It is through the waving of that flag that the faith of the father has lived, and when that flag ceases to blow in the breeze, when that flag fails to get its deserved stand in the schoolroom, look out for the church and your religious freedom.

THE WATCHMAN ON THE JOB



THE HARDY FAMILY

The Hoosier State salutes the Typical American Family!

Here is the type of entertainment, good for every member of the family. The escapades of Andy Hardy; the wisdom of Judge Hardy; the tender devotion and understanding of Ma Hardy; the problems of Andy's sister—are all realistic, enlightening and down-to-earth.

We, of Indiana, are proud of our sense of Americanism and our families. The Hardys are not unlike us in many respects.

What, therefore, could be more fitting than to foster and aid in an attempt to petition the Metro Goldwyn Mayer Studios of Hollywood, Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney and the entire cast to come to the Hoosier State to make a picture based on their experiences within our own borders—possibly the American Legion Headquarters in Indianapolis affords a logical background.

Governor Clifford Townsend; W. H. Arnett, Managing Director of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, theatre owners throughout the State; The American Legion; Department Store Executives and many of our leading citizens are behind the movement. We heartily endorse the same thought.

Welcome to Indiana, Mr. Lewis Stone—and welcome to your splendid screen family!

GILT -off the DOME

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A Congressman never knows what he'll find in his morning mailbag. He has a lot of constituents and they're all interested in his affairs—in what he should do and what he will do. And since they can't all come to Washington to pay personal calls, they write him letters.

Their letters give him every type of advice. They tell him how to vote on various bills, what precautions to take against war, how to control crops, how to end the depression, and offer a large group of home remedies for whatever ails the country.

A Congressman is asked many questions—about taxes, jobs, relief, how to fight bed bugs and on and on. A small percentage are letters of congratulations or best wishes, but most of them are requests for assistance of some kind. All are answered although often the requests cannot be granted.

Many of the letters are unintentionally hunorous and make the Congressman laugh through his tears. Some are pitiful, while others sound like a collection of boners. Verse, sarcasm, an occasional dose of exasperation, all come his way. Here are a few of the better ones:

I WANT to rite to you and find out about getten pade for my bull.

My bull was on the state rode with some more cows and he was trying to tend to his own busnes jus like any bull wood be doin and some fool drivin one of them Government trucks hit him and he sure ruint him for what I use him for and if you don't believe me, jes come out and see him.

In don't think he will ever be any use as a bull.

I wish you wood tell sumbudy he is dead for he might as well be, for he aint worth nothin now and I think I otter be pade all he wus worth.

Please let me no rite away.

SINCE my husband's project was cut off I have had no relief. Please suggest to me what could be done now.

I have always tried to live a Christian life. I cannot go on like this much longer without help from someone.

Please rite me like a good friend and tell me where you could send me to get help quicker, please.

WE WANT to know why it is that we have to go hungry and necked here in the riches country in the world. We do know that there are money aprepreated for the poor peoples. We do know we are workers here in a world of plenty and have to go destituted.

PLEASE send me some bulletins on or about vitamins.

I have read many times of vitamins but have never seen a person that could tell me anything definite about them. I would like to know what a vitamin is, would like to see a photograph of one, would like to see if they favor a boll weevil or what they do favor or what they look like.

If they are good for persons to swallow I would like to know what they look like, so I would know what to swallow and what to let alone.

I RECEIVED your picture and liked it very much. I haven't got a frame for it yet. I have the chicken pox. I hope you are well. Tommy, our cat, is gone. We haven't seen hide nor hair of him since Christmas. How do you like Washington now? Thank you again for the picture, of which I am very proud.

Bill's no "big shot"... but he has a bodyguard

Bill Smith, a mechanic, doesn't realize that there is an enemy that stalks him day and night . . . nor that he is protected by an ever-watchful "bodyguard." That enemy is fire . . . the bodyguard is the constant fire-prevention work of 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies. Let's follow Bill through a day, and see the many ways this "bodyguard" works to protect him . . . and you, too.

The cooking appliances used in preparing Bill's breakfast, and the train, trolley, bus or automobile he takes to work, all have been made safer because of scientific tests and safety standards established by these fire insurance companies.

By sponsoring better building laws, by obtaining the co-operation of architects and builders, by systematic inspections, these fire insurance companies help to make and keep safer the factory where Bill spends his working hours.

The same "bodyguard" works to make Bill's children safer at school. (These fire insurance companies created the Self-Inspection Blank for Schools, encouraging fire drills and inspection.)

Even when Bill and his family are asleep, his "bodyguard" is on the job. His town's fire alarm system, fire-fighting equipment, water supplies, etc., are periodically checked by fire-prevention engineers.

Let us protect your home, business and other property with dependable, economical capital stock company fire insurance.
